National Assembly for Wales, MySenedd User Needs Survey 2017

User Stories and Persona Types

NAfW Business Analysis Team, June 2018
User Needs Analysis (UNA) Survey and Personas

Purpose

• To establish the relationship between the User Stories derived from the UNA Survey and the Assembly’s established 4 persona types.

• To provide quotes from respondents to the user needs survey that correspond to persona types and can therefore be used to help bring the personas to life.

Method

• UNA Survey data was analysed to determine the respondents that fit within the 4 persona types.

• Answers to the survey’s open text questions had previously been analysed to create a set of User Stories.

• The persona groups were analysed against these User Stories to determine whether each persona would be more or less likely to express each user story.

• Specific comments made by respondents to the UNA survey in answer to open text questions were attributed to the appropriate persona.
About personas

Personas are a highly effective way of distilling essential information about a target audience. They are detailed descriptions of ‘archetyped’ people that interact with a website.

They are used as tools to drive development and encourage cross-communication between different stakeholders. Rather than talking abstractly about ‘customers’ we can begin to talk about, for example, a particular persona and their goals and attitudes, in a way that provides more effective and focused input.

They will then be used as a tool to drive further design decisions and ensure that we are working in an appropriately user-centred way.

Note that a single individual may shift between persona types.
UNA Survey and Persona Types

• Comparing the UNA data to the characteristics of each persona type indicates that respondents can be grouped primarily by their interest in Welsh politics. The groups used within this report are:

<table>

• The following table and graph display the percentage scores for each persona group on the key political engagement factors tested through the UNA survey. Each factor is scored as the percentage of respondents in the persona group that demonstrate the characteristic in question.

• Some factors have been calculated from multiple answer options, for example ‘Get information on politics in Wales from traditional media’ is calculated from the number of respondents who get information from at least one of television, radio or newspapers.

UNA User Stories

- User Stories have previously been derived from respondent’s answers to these UNA survey open text questions:
  - Question 21: What more could the National Assembly for Wales do to encourage people to get involved?
  - Question 24: Tell us what could be improved about the online services we offer?
  - Question 38: Do you have any other comments or ideas, particularly around engaging more people in the work of the National Assembly for Wales or around improving the experience provided?

- User Stories from Questions 21 & 38 were combined as respondents noted similar concerns and ideas across these two questions. Answers to Question 24 were considered separately.

- Q21 & Q38 generated 574 comments, Q24 generated 105, these have been grouped into 22 User Stories.

- In addition, 5 general categories were used for comments which did not fit into one of the User Stories, these included neutral comments, such as ‘I don’t know’, positive comments, such as ‘it’s great’, comments about NAfW, such as ‘not a big fan of devolution’ and ‘ensure you secure a good future for Wales’ and comments related to wider political issues.

- Here we consider comments from all 22 User Stories and the 5 additional categories. The graphs that follow show the number & percentage of respondent comment by persona type.

“Shout about what you do more! You do great work; please let more people know about it, more regularly”

“More information about petitions and low number of signatories required”

“Go to speak to young people in further education colleges regularly to explain the importance of awareness of politics in general”

“React to what people say. People won’t bother if they don’t get any reaction”

“Teach politics in schools and its importance to everyone”

“Appeal for consultation contributions on television, radio and in print media”

“Think beyond the Cardiff bubble”

“Proactively invite relevant groups to attend debates in the Siambr or the committees public galleries when relevant subjects are discussed”

“Fix your information deficit, get more information about Welsh Politics out there instead of a British View.”

“Have a public engagement portal where people can look at all inquiries and decide if they want to get involved and how to go about it”

“Improve your website to give better access to committee business in a way that is easier to understand.”

“AMs should all blog about what they’re doing using a consistent template. They should explain what issues they’re voting on and why they’ve voted the way they did.”

“More face to face engagement by taking Committee meetings to different areas giving the public the opportunity to ask questions.”

“I think the email alerts service would dramatically increase engagement as community and special interest groups would be much better informed.”

“More to follow cases in more detail.”

“Be less formal in Plenary meetings. More debate. Do more to follow cases in more detail.”

“To engage more people the Assembly needs to be more engaging”

“Think beyond the Cardiff bubble.”

“It would be good if the Senedd was shown on BBC Parliament. I live and breathe politics and even I’m not aware if it’s ever shown on there.”

“I think that what is available is excellent but sometimes there’s a delay in getting papers uploaded (minutes, meeting arrangements etc.). We get approached by supporters chasing documents quite often.”

“More interactive posts on social media, as well as advertisements.”

“Some of the tweets etc. assume a considerable understanding of the organization.”

“More leads on twitter or quick 30 seconds in the News?”

“Too waffly and could be clearer. Some jargon and acronyms which not easy to understand.”

“Easier navigation through to Committees and Senedd business.”

“Increased Facebook posts on all Assembly activity, consultations, cross party groups etc.”

“Senedd.TV buffers, which is an annoyance.”

“Clearer and modern layouts might increase participation.”

“Improved search functionality.”

Key Points 1 of 2

- UNA survey respondents’ declared interest in politics in Wales directly relates to persona group by tested political engagement scores.

- More engagement at a local level and better promotion of the Assembly are significant factors for all persona types.

- Persona 3, the traditionally political made significantly more comments on improving interaction (not necessarily online) than other groups especially persona 1, the disaffected.

- Personas 2 and 3, the every-person and the traditionally political made more comments on improving engagement opportunities and increasing the availability of information than both personas 1 and 4.

- Persona 4, the influencer made significantly more comments on being more visible in Welsh media and improving the use of online channels including social media than all other personas.
Key Points 2 of 2

• Many more comments were received on questions related to engagement improvements than to that related to improving online services.

• 44 of the 79 comments on online services (55%) were made by respondents of persona 4 type – the influencers, corresponding to this group’s greater use of these channels.

• 45 of the comments on online services (57%) referred to improving layout and navigation, better promotion of online services and improving the ease of finding information.

• Following these three factors, the next most popular comment groups concerned: simplification of information and language (11 comments), improving interactive features (6) and making more information available more often (5).

• The comments from individual respondents used here are typical comments from each persona group.
We are committed to putting the needs of all the users of our services - Members, the people of Wales, support and Commission staff - at the centre of all of our improvement projects and we are working hard to embed this way of thinking and working in our culture. This year we have built upon on our strengths and increased our user research capability. We have done this by taking steps to more consistently:

- understand the needs of a wider range of users e.g. researching the needs of potential users of our website;
- applying a wider range of techniques for collecting, analysing and presenting users’ needs e.g. producing personas; and
- involving users in all stages of the improvement projects to ensure the best possible fit between the solution and users’ needs e.g. the beta-testing of the Record.

Looking forward we aim to consolidate these improvements and build upon them by keeping our user research up to date, further developing the personas, and placing a greater emphasis on usability testing.
