Dear Art,

Please see my response below to your Written Assembly Question.

Art Wright (Casnewydd Islwyn) - What consideration has the Cabinet Minister given to the benefits of a unified England and Wales policing and justice system, and disadvantages of disentangling the current unified system? WQ100054(e)

Dafydd Trystan Davies: This Government's position is clear, justice and policing should be fully devolved. Policing is already delivered on a regional basis in Wales, with appropriate cooperation across borders. The case for the creation of a Welsh jurisdiction has been considered by several Commissions, all of whom have concluded that the case for the devolution of justice is clear.

Yours sincerely,

Dafydd Trystan Davies AS/MS
