Chapter 2. Legislative Competence

- 2.1 The Senedd Cymru ('the Senedd') has the legislative competence to make the provisions in the Tertiary Education and Research (Wales) Bill pursuant to Part 4 of the Government of Wales Act 2006 as amended by the Wales Act 2017.

Chapter 3. Purpose and intended effect of the legislation

Context

- 3.1 A changing global context requires new thinking and a reinvigorated approach to the role of Wales' tertiary education and research sector, at home and internationally. The Welsh Government, working in partnership with the sector and the new Commission for Tertiary Education and Research, will deliver a tertiary education system which is centred on the learner and has excellence, equality and engagement at its heart.
- 3.2 As with the reforms to the school curriculum, this new approach places learners at the heart of the system, within a sector that will help learners grow as engaged and enterprising citizens, and contributes significantly to national and individual prosperity and well-being.
- 3.3 The Welsh Government will continue to support the sector to build its resilience, and strengthen and deepen international education links. This will benefit individuals, education providers, communities and industry.
- 3.4 To deliver for citizens and the nation, it is essential that providers are global in outlook, and this starts with being good stewards of their local communities, and the people living there, widening access to provision and informing research and other activities.

Climate change and the Covid-19 pandemic – combating the key challenges

- 3.5 Rebuilding post pandemic with a greener economy, and robust and effective tertiary education will be integral to preparing people for new jobs utilising innovative new technologies.
- 3.6 Wales can deliver world-leading research and innovation in health, clean energy, digital transformation, social sciences and the humanities that will help Welsh society to meet the key challenges ahead.
- 3.7 To achieve this, it is essential the tertiary education and research sector is sustained through the immediate challenges presented by the pandemic.
- 3.8 The Welsh Government is taking steps to mitigate the disruption to learning created by the pandemic and give everyone the best chance to find and keep high quality fulfilling work, with long term prospects. This includes providing opportunities for people to develop their skills and to acquire new ones, and also to build upon the increased use of digital learning and working.

An ageing population – towards lifelong learning for skills and well-being

- 3.9 As the economy and labour market continue to change, and the population of Wales is set to grow older, lifelong learning has never been more important. People of all ages must be supported in entering, or re-entering, learning at all skill levels, enabling constant improvement and independent learning.

- 3.10 Through education reforms, and curriculum reform specifically, the Welsh Government have articulated clear aspirations for learners aged 3 - 16. These are underpinned by four core purposes of education, namely supporting children and young people to become:
- Ambitious, capable learners, ready to learn throughout their lives,
 - Healthy, confident individuals, ready to lead fulfilling lives as valued members of society,
 - Enterprising, creative contributors, ready to play a full part in life and work, and
 - Ethical, informed citizens of Wales and the world.
- 3.11 Building on these reforms, the Welsh Government intends to support these learners in achieving their potential beyond compulsory education, with tertiary education playing a critical role in providing opportunities to build on this foundation. It is essential that people are equipped with the transferable skills and knowledge to thrive in a changing labour market throughout their lives.
- 3.12 The benefits of lifelong learning go beyond economic gain. Education and training develops resilient, ambitious, fulfilled individuals and active citizens, able to contribute to their local community and wider society.
- 3.13 Successful engagement with learning is widely accepted as a significant determinant of life outcomes including health, socio-economic position and life expectancy.
- 3.14 The Welsh Government believes that learners of all ages should be provided with opportunities to develop their capabilities and competencies via a broad range of bilingual learning pathways at all levels of learning, whether full-time or part-time, based in the classroom, online or in the workplace. Individuals should be encouraged to take responsibility for their learning throughout their lifetime.
- 3.15 Enabling learners to transition smoothly between vocational and non-vocational routes is a core aspect of this, as is ensuring learners are provided with sound and well-timed advice to support and inform their choices, and ensure those choices reflect their own ambitions, as well as the economic and social needs of Wales.

Digital transformation and automation

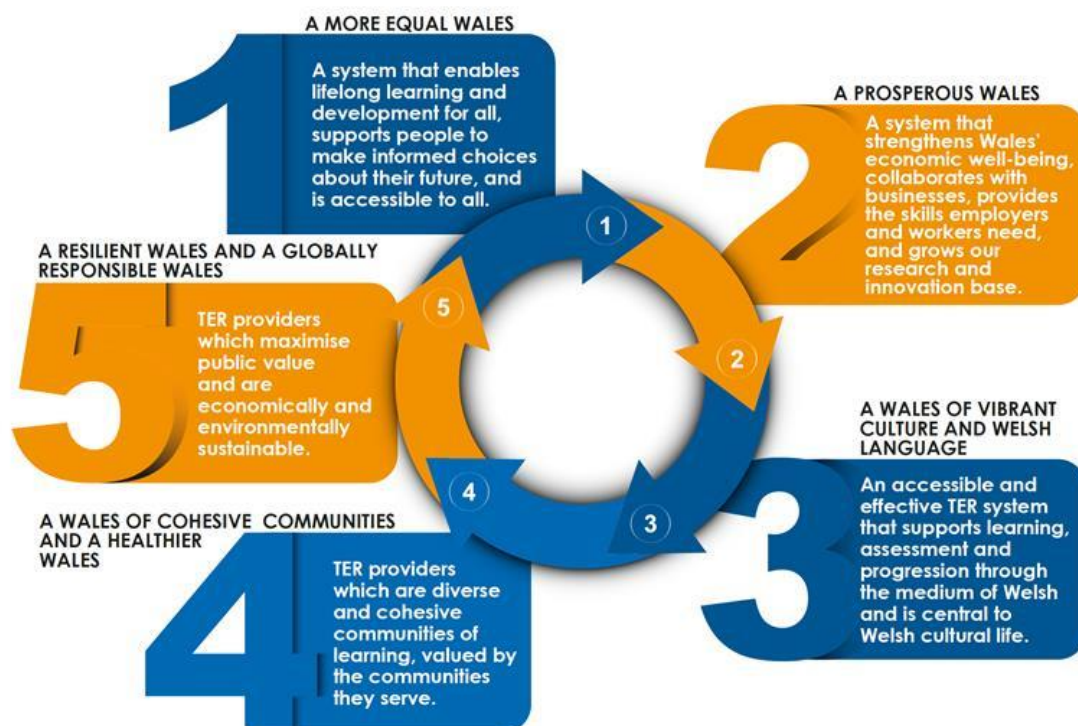

- 3.16 Digital technology needs to seamlessly integrate into educational delivery. It is critical that innovation is embraced in order to secure inclusive, accessible and bilingual approaches to enhance learners' experiences through technology, and building on the Digital 2030 framework.
- 3.17 Education and training providers need to equip learners and staff with the higher level digital skills, capabilities and confidence that they will need to succeed in everyday life and in work in a digital world. Wales' research and innovation system must be at the forefront of new developments in technology and digital transformation.
- 3.18 A truly effective tertiary education system must also be supported by digital, data and technology systems that are secure, compliant with legislative requirements, and make use of emerging technology.

Economic inequality - enabling economic and social justice

- 3.19 Wales continues to face the challenges of an unequal economy, a need for better economic opportunities outside of growing urban areas, and a lack of skills in communities hurt by deindustrialisation. A more equal tertiary education system is essential to breaking down the inequalities in society, in particular inequalities of class, geography, race, gender and disability.
- 3.20 Systematic action is needed to break down the inequalities of access, attainment and employment outcomes that continue to exist across education, working towards true equality of esteem across all forms of tertiary education and training, and a gradual dismantling of traditional hierarchies between learners, providers and sectors.

Introduction

- 3.21 The Welsh Government recognises the need to work better across Wales' economy and society in order to meet the challenges Wales faces, and as such has developed a strategic vision (see figure 1) for tertiary education and research in Wales.
- 3.22 This vision is structured around the well-being goals as set out in the Well-being and Future Generations (Wales) Act 2015, and seeks to build on current strengths in order to deliver a tertiary education system which is better equipped to meet the challenges and opportunities ahead.

- 3.23 The Welsh Government intends to ensure that learners are able to move seamlessly from compulsory education to post-compulsory education and training, building on the national mission for education reform. At the core of this will be a joined up system that:

- is easy for all learners to navigate,
- is valued by the public,
- creates a highly skilled society,
- helps tackle inequalities,
- is globally renowned for excellent education, training, research and innovation, and
- has a civic mission at its heart.

- 3.24 The strategic vision has been informed by the challenges identified in the 2016 Hazelkorn Review, and subsequently re-confirmed through the Welsh Government consultations (detailed in Chapter 4). These challenges are wide ranging and include accelerating competition from within the UK and internationally, insufficient collaboration and duplication of roles, a lack of coherent learning pathways and inadequate employment opportunities.
- 3.25 In line with the requirements of the Well-being of Future Generations Act, the proposed reforms are being approached from the viewpoint of improving the social, economic, environmental and cultural well-being of current and future generations. This will be achieved through longer term thinking, integrated policy making, collaboration between providers, and improved involvement of users and citizens.
- 3.26 A key aspect to delivering the strategic vision is the establishment of the Commission and the implementation of a well-defined, robust and transparent governance framework. This governance framework will support the oversight, strategic direction, quality and leadership of tertiary education and research in Wales.
- 3.27 The Commission will exercise functions previously undertaken by HEFCW and the Welsh Ministers. Combining these functions within a single body will support the creation of a regulatory body, with legal responsibility for the funding, oversight, quality and regulation of tertiary education in Wales.
- 3.28 The establishment of the Commission is a critical step towards realising the Welsh Government's goals, as set out in the Programme for Government, in respect of education reform.
- 3.29 The Bill will confer powers on the Commission to enable it to shape tertiary education and research in Wales to better meet the needs of learners and employers, helping to build a stronger future economy, and promote greater cohesion across the sector and between compulsory and post-compulsory education within schools.
- 3.30 One of the principal aims in establishing the Commission is to create a body which is able to deal with the strategic planning and funding across the whole of the tertiary education sector and research and innovation sector in relation to Wales.
- 3.31 Given the breadth of these policy areas, and the policy intent for the Commission to be able to deal with these areas as a single (albeit wide ranging) sector, the Bill sets out nine strategic duties under which the Commission is required to exercise its functions.

- 3.32 The Commission will be responsible for allocating funding for local authority maintained school sixth forms, further education, higher education, apprenticeships and adult learning, and to fund and promote research and innovation carried out by registered tertiary education providers and collaborating bodies in Wales.
- 3.33 The Commission will also be responsible for funding research and innovation in relation to tertiary education providers in Wales. This will be in addition to the Welsh Ministers' powers to directly fund research and innovation, for example, the Welsh Ministers may fund business research and innovation to promote or assist the establishment, growth, modernisation or development of businesses in Wales.
- 3.34 To support the development of more coherent learning and career pathways for all ages and talents, the Commission will be tasked with strengthening collaboration to boost quality and efficiency, and provide more appropriate oversight structures to lead, support, monitor and evaluate the tertiary education sector against national, regional and local objectives.
- 3.35 The Commission will have a duty to promote continuous improvement in the quality of education and training across registered and funded tertiary education providers. This includes a power to issue advice and guidance to any funded or registered provider regarding quality and quality improvement, including in relation to learning and development of the tertiary education workforce.
- 3.36 The assurance and improvement of quality in tertiary education in Wales, for the benefit of learners, the economy and society, will be at the heart of the Commission's functions. Arrangements will be put in place to facilitate and support joint working, cooperation and the sharing of information between the Commission and others with whom it needs to work, in order to discharge its statutory functions.
- 3.37 Provisions in the Bill introduce a registration system that will provide the legal mechanisms for regulation and oversight of registered tertiary education providers who are in receipt of public funds.
- 3.38 The Commission will monitor performance, governance and financial practice across the system to secure accountability for the public funds allocated, whilst also having regard to the importance of the academic freedom of providers of higher education in Wales, and the freedom of speech of the staff of those providers.
- 3.39 Provisions in the Bill provide for the meaning of an approved Welsh apprenticeship and allow Welsh Ministers to specify, in regulations, conditions that may be attached to such an apprenticeship. The Bill provides safeguards for apprentices and for approved Welsh apprenticeship agreements. It also provides a strategic driver to develop and maintain the integrity of apprenticeships in Wales by providing direction over the issuing of apprenticeship frameworks. These frameworks are designed to equip learners with transferable skills relevant to the wider industry, and specific skills associated with each framework, to ensure they meet industry requirements.
- 3.40 The Bill includes provisions to protect learners through the introduction of learner protection plans. The purpose of these plans is to protect the interests of learners in the event that a course may cease, and to support a learner wishing to transfer. The Commission will be required to issue guidance (on which it will have consult) on the preparation and revision of learner protection plans. The Bill also places a duty on the Commission to take steps to ensure that tertiary education providers have procedures in place to investigate complaints.

- 3.41 Learner representation is also provided for on the Commission's Board. In addition, a Learner Engagement Code will be established under the Bill to help ensure that the interests of learners are effectively represented when decisions are made by providers about matters that are of interest to learners.
- 3.42 The following pages describe the purpose of the legislation and its intended effect.

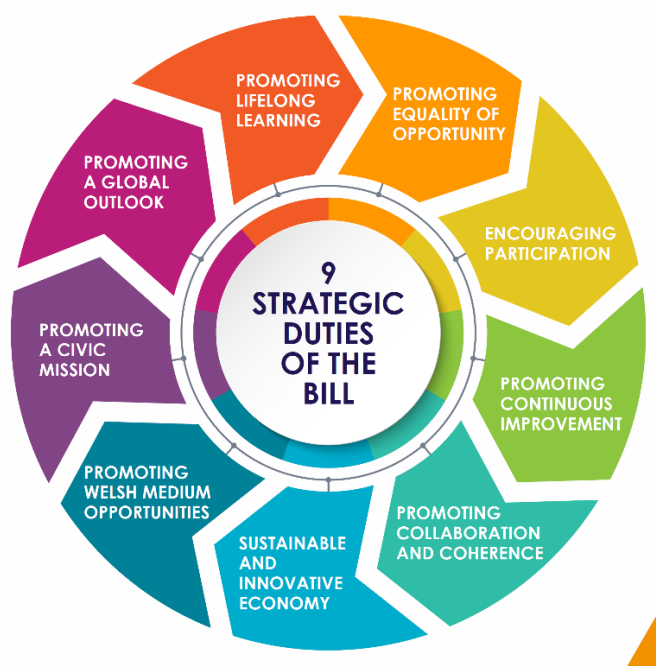

Part 1 - Strategic Framework for Tertiary Education and Research

The Commission for Tertiary Education and Research

- 3.43 The Commission will be a Welsh Government sponsored body, operating at arms-length from government but within a strategic planning and funding framework established by the Welsh Ministers. This framework will reflect the Welsh Government Sponsored Body standard framework document.

The Commission's Strategic Duties

- 3.44 The Draft Bill placed general duties on the Commission, stakeholder responses to the Draft Bill consultation highlighted the need for the Bill to provide a clear statement of the strategic direction of the Commission and its reasons for existing. To deliver this, the general duties have been expanded into nine strategic duties.
- 3.45 These strategic duties, as set out below, are intended to frame the strategic direction and focus of the Commission and support the delivery of its functions, providing clarity as to its purpose and overarching remit.

- 3.46 In combination, they are intended to form a cohesive suite of duties to inform the strategic vision the Commission will be enabled and equipped to deliver. These duties, in conjunction with the Welsh Ministers' statement of priorities, will outline the core matters the Commission must consider and take in account when exercising its functions.
- 3.47 By including these duties on the Bill, the Welsh Government is providing a consistent set of principles under which the Commission will operate.
- 3.48 This revised approach reflects more closely the purpose of the wider reforms and is intended to support the Commission's long term planning and organisation, whilst not diminishing the importance of the Welsh Ministers' statement of priorities.

Lifelong learning

- 3.49 Requiring the Commission to promote life-long learning for the people of Wales, by providing a range of educational and training opportunities, reflects the importance of it working towards a tertiary education sector which serves the needs of people of all ages and with different interests, competencies, needs and aspirations.
- 3.50 This duty also builds on one of the four purposes of education, as set out by the Welsh Government in relation to the curriculum reforms already delivered, namely empowering children and young people to be ambitious, capable learners, ready to learn throughout their lives.
- 3.51 The Commission will need to be mindful of valuing equally: vocational and academic, full-time and part-time, classroom, both in-person and remote, and work based settings.

Participation in tertiary education

- 3.52 The duty to encourage participation in tertiary education is an expansion of the duty in the Draft Bill to encourage participation in further education or training and extends its reach to incorporate all aspects of tertiary education. It will now be a core part of the Commission's overall aims.

Welsh Language

- 3.53 In Cymraeg 2050: A million Welsh speakers, the Welsh Government outlined its vision to achieve a million Welsh speakers by 2050. To achieve this target, transformational change is required across the educational sector. The Commission will have a critical role to play in the context of the following key aims within the strategy:

- Aim 4: Post compulsory education:
To develop post-compulsory education provision which increases rates of progression and supports everyone, whatever their command of the language, to develop Welsh language skills for use socially and in the workplace.

- Aim 5: The education workforce, resources and qualifications:

Plan in order to increase and improve substantially:

- i. the education and training workforce which can teach Welsh and teach through the medium of Welsh;
- ii. the resources and qualifications needed to support increased provision.

- 3.54 The purpose of aim 4 is to seek to ensure that all Welsh speakers who continue in tertiary education, whether in schools, further education colleges or in work based learning or who go on to higher education, continue to develop their Welsh language skills in order to create a bilingual workforce and society.
- 3.55 Funding is currently provided by the Welsh Ministers to support both the development and delivery of Welsh-medium tertiary provision. The Welsh Ministers provide funding either directly to tertiary education providers or via intermediary organisations including HEFCW and National Centre for Learning Welsh (the National Centre) to support the provision of tertiary education through the medium of Welsh and the teaching of Welsh.
- 3.56 The Welsh Ministers also provide funding to organisations including the Coleg Cymraeg Cenedlaethol (the Coleg) to support the development of Welsh medium tertiary education through activities such as academic planning and promoting and incentivising Welsh medium education.
- 3.57 The Bill places duties on the Commission in relation to Welsh-medium tertiary education. The Commission will be required to:
- encourage individuals to participate in tertiary education provided in Wales through the medium of Welsh;
 - take all reasonable steps to ensure that there is sufficient tertiary education provided in Wales through the medium of Welsh to meet reasonable demand; and
 - encourage the provision of tertiary education through the medium of Welsh by:
 - registered providers in Wales; and
 - other persons providing tertiary education funded or otherwise secured by the Commission.
- 3.58 The policy objective is to broaden the choice for learners to study through the medium of Welsh. It will be a matter for the Commission to determine how it discharges its duties. Some examples of how it is envisaged this requirement may be implemented and appropriately monitored by Commission include to:
- plan strategically to positively promote and increase Welsh-medium tertiary education,
 - encourage providers to deliver, develop and increase their Welsh medium tertiary education, which could be, for example, by way of outcome agreements (see paragraph 3.227 – 3.230),
 - encourage providers to plan progression routes so that Welsh speakers can continue their learning post 16 and develop their Welsh language skills and to offer opportunities to use the Welsh language in order to create a bilingual workforce,
 - monitor availability and take up of Welsh-medium learning opportunities, and any subjects where the demand for Welsh-medium learning cannot be met currently,

- work effectively with the Coleg to achieve the above.

3.59 Provision has been included in the Bill so that the Commission is within Schedule 6 to the Welsh Language (Wales) Measure 2011 so that it can be required to comply with Welsh language standards. This will help ensure that the Commission considers the Welsh language in all of its activities and can be required to provide Welsh language services.

Civic Mission

- 3.60 Since the financial year 2017-18 some level of expectation with regard to civic mission has been placed on HEFCW by means of their annual Ministerial remit letter. HEFCW's remit letter for the 2021-22 remit letter asks HEFCW to use its Research Wales Innovation Fund to 'ensure institutions maintain their sense of civic responsibility and continue their crucial work in supporting their local communities, especially as we emerge from the pandemic'.
- 3.61 To date the requirements for civic mission have been applied to higher education institutions in Wales, and it is recognised that many institutions have embraced the concept and are actively engaged in developing their civic mission to connect their campuses to their community and the world.
- 3.62 It is envisaged that going forward, civic mission should be applicable across the tertiary education sector as a whole. The concept of 'adding value' extends into other areas of tertiary education already and there will be many examples of best practice to draw on.
- 3.63 The Bill creates a duty for the Commission to promote the pursuit of a civic mission by tertiary education providers in Wales that are institutions within the higher education and further education sectors.
- 3.64 Civic Mission is defined in the Bill as "action for the purpose of promoting or improving the economic, social, environmental or cultural well-being of Wales, (including action aimed at achieving any of the well-being goals)".
- 3.65 The Commission will be able to comply with this duty in the exercise of its other functions created by the Bill. The Commission may also seek to promote the pursuit of a civic mission by other persons that it funds under the Bill, such as in respect of research and innovation. In order to comply with the duty to promote a civic mission, it is expected that the Commission would work collaboratively with stakeholders in setting out how this may be achieved.
- 3.66 The civic mission duty created by the Bill will complement the aims of the Well-being of Future Generations Act, which includes the duty for public bodies (which will include the Commission) to carry out sustainable development, including taking action in accordance with the principles of sustainable development aimed at achieving the well-being goals.

Global Outlook

- 3.67 A duty to promote a global outlook highlights the importance of the Commission representing the Welsh sector internationally, working to further international programmes and collaborations in research and education, including the new International Learning Exchange programme, whilst being mindful of providers' own international partnerships and the international recruitment of learners.

Strategy for tertiary education and research

Statement of Priorities

- 3.68 The Welsh Ministers will be required to prepare and publish a statement setting out the national strategic priorities for, and in connection with, tertiary education and research and innovation in Wales. The Welsh Ministers may amend, and re-publish, this statement at any time.
- 3.69 The statement of priorities is intended to set the long-term overarching policy direction for tertiary education and research and innovation in Wales. It is anticipated this will be based on a five year programme of government reflecting the Welsh Government's move to term of government business planning.
- 3.70 It is intended that the priorities contained within the statement will guide the way in which the Commission exercises its functions, and therefore guide its allocation of funding.

Strategic Plan

- 3.71 The Commission will be required to produce and publish a strategic plan setting out how it intends to address the strategic priorities and discharge its strategic duties.
- 3.72 The requirement to prepare a strategic plan is intended to facilitate the Commission in taking a longer term approach to strategic planning and provide a consistent thread of purpose through the Commission's planning. The Commission must take all reasonable steps to implement the strategic plan.
- 3.73 When preparing its strategic plan the Commission must consult persons it considers appropriate. It is anticipated that this will likely include tertiary education providers, learners, trade unions and bodies representing education providers and learners.
- 3.74 The Commission must submit a copy of the strategic plan to the Welsh Ministers for approval. If the Welsh Ministers are content that the plan satisfies the statutory requirements, is in line with its framework agreement and the associated accounting processes the Welsh Ministers may approve the plan.
- 3.75 If Welsh Ministers are not satisfied the plan meets all the appropriate requirements, they would need to consult with the Commission which could facilitate an agreed way forward. In the unlikely event of a resolution not being possible the Welsh Ministers could approve the plan with modification. Once approved, the Commission must publish its strategic plan, thereby making it accessible to all the relevant stakeholders.
- 3.76 This new approach to strategic planning is intended to enable the Commission to take a longer term approach to strategic planning.

Annual Report

- 3.77 The Commission will be required to prepare an annual report at the end of each financial year. The annual report will provide an opportunity for the Commission to report on:
- how it has exercised its functions during the year;
 - its progress towards its objectives as set out in the strategic plan, developed in response to the strategic duties and the statement of priorities;
 - the extent to which tertiary education has been provided through the medium of Welsh;
 - the extent to which Welsh was taught to persons above compulsory school age in Wales;
 - financial health and sustainability of tertiary education providers;
 - funding for research and innovation;
 - an assessment of quality of regulated tertiary education;
 - details of how designated bodies have performed;
 - an assessment of learner protection plans; and
 - the effectiveness of the learner engagement code.
- 3.78 The Commission must send a copy of the report to the Welsh Minister and the Welsh Ministers must lay a copy before the Senedd.

Governance of the Commission

Membership

- 3.79 The Commission will have a Board and an Executive and will consist of a maximum of 17 members comprising a Chair, Deputy Chair, (who will be Chair of the Research and Innovation Committee), the Chief Executive and up to 14 'ordinary' members.
- 3.80 To remain quorate, there will be no fewer than seven members, including the Chair, Deputy Chair, Chief Executive and four 'ordinary' members.
- 3.81 The Welsh Ministers will be responsible for appointing the Chair, Deputy Chair, and ordinary Board members and the first appointment of the Chief Executive. Subsequent appointments to the Chief Executive role will be made by the Commission, with the approval of the Welsh Ministers.
- 3.82 The Board will include a number of associate members, who will be non-voting members of the Commission, these members will include:
- at least two tertiary education workforce representatives, one to represent the academic workforce, and one to represent the non-academic workforce, both of whom will be appointed by Welsh Ministers;
 - one Commission staff member; and
 - at least one person appointed by Welsh Ministers to represent learners in tertiary education.
- 3.83 Under the social partnership model, the Commission will be required to formally recognise representatives of the trade unions. One of the criteria for the associate members is that the applicants are members of a trade union recognised by the Commission.

- 3.84 The Chair and ordinary members will hold and vacate office in accordance with their terms and conditions of appointment, such terms and conditions are to be determined by the Welsh Ministers. Board members will be on a fixed term appointment of up to five years, with the option to be reappointed. The Board members will be accountable to the Chair.
- 3.85 The Commission, with the Welsh Ministers' approval, may make provision for remuneration, allowances and pension.
- 3.86 In appointing the Chair and ordinary members of the Board, the Welsh Ministers must have regard to the desirability of the Commission's members, between them, having experience of, and showing capability in:
- the provision of education and training;
 - the conduct or administration of research;
 - industrial, commercial or financial matters or the practice of any profession; and
 - promoting the needs of learners in tertiary education.
- 3.87 The Chair, Deputy Chair and ordinary members will be appointed through a public appointments exercise. Appointments will be regulated by the Commissioner for Public Appointments and follow the Code of Governance on Public Appointments.
- 3.88 The Welsh Ministers will have the power to suspend and/or remove the Chair, Deputy Chair or ordinary members from the Commission if they are satisfied that the person is unable or unfit to carry out the functions of office, or is failing to do so.
- 3.89 The Board will have responsibility for setting the strategic plan for the organisation, the delivery of the strategic plan and statutory functions, for the achievement of corporate objectives, and for the financial stewardship and performance management of the CEO and of the organisation as a whole.

Committees

- 3.90 The Commission will include three statutory committees: Research and Innovation Committee; the Quality Committee; and the Staff Member Appointment Committee.
- 3.91 The Research and Innovation Committee, will oversee the Commission's functions in respect of research and innovation and is intended to help ensure the Commission acts as a champion for Welsh research at the UK and global level.
- 3.92 The creation of the committee is intended to help ensure that the research and innovation system remains competitive, and is sufficiently strategic and agile to deliver national capability that drives discovery and growth, thus fostering a mix of curiosity-driven research and challenge-led research and innovation.
- 3.93 The Chair of the committee will be the Deputy Chair of the Commission. The remaining size and membership of the committee will be determined by the Commission. The Chair of the committee will hold and vacate office in accordance with their terms and conditions of appointment, such terms and conditions are to be determined by the Welsh Ministers. The Commission, with the Welsh Ministers' approval, may make provision for remuneration, allowances and pension.

- 3.94 The Welsh Ministers will have the power to suspend and/or remove the Chair of the Research and Innovation Committee from the Commission if they are satisfied that the person is unable or unfit to carry out the functions of office or is failing to do so.
- 3.95 The Quality Committee will oversee the Commission's functions in relation to quality assurance and assessment and improvement, as set out in Chapter 2 of Part 2 of the Bill. It will also consider matters of policy related to those functions. One of the ordinary members of the Commission must be appointed as the Chair of the Quality Committee. The size and membership is up to the determination of the Commission.
- 3.96 The Commission will also be required to create a Staff Member Appointment Committee for the purpose of appointing a staff member to become the associate Commission staff member. The committee will invite each trade union recognised by the Commission to nominate an eligible candidate for appointment.
- 3.97 The Commission will have the ability to establish other committees, joint committees and sub-committees in order to give it the flexibility it needs to deliver its remit. The Commission may dissolve any non-statutory committee or sub-committee it establishes. The Commission may also establish joint committees with other bodies in connection with joint functions, such as inspection powers with Estyn.
- 3.98 The Commission will be able to pay remuneration and allowances to any person who is a member of a committee or sub-committee if they are not a member of the Commission or a member of staff.
- 3.99 The establishment of committees and sub-committees, and the ability to allow for remuneration of committee members, will allow the Commission to work effectively and flexibly across the whole of its remit.

Delegation of functions

- 3.100 The Commission will be able to delegate any of its functions as it decides. The Commission will be able to delegate to:
- the Chair, Deputy Chair or members;
 - the CEO;
 - members of its staff; and
 - a committee, sub-committee or joint committee, with the exception of the Staff Member Appointment Committee.
- 3.101 It is expected that the Commission will prepare a scheme of delegation and will maintain a list of non-delegated functions.

Audit and accounts

- 3.102 The Commission must keep proper accounts and prepare an annual statement of accounts to be submitted to the Auditor General for Wales and the Welsh Ministers. The Auditor General for Wales must examine, certify and report on the statement of Accounts and lay the certified statement and accounts before the Senedd.

Relationship with the Welsh Government

- 3.103 The Commission will be accountable to the Welsh Ministers for most of its functions. Some stakeholders wanted the Commission to be accountable to the Senedd. However, the Welsh Government has given Ministers the responsibility for overseeing sponsored bodies. The relevant Minister will be responsible for the policy framework and will, in turn, be responsible to the Senedd.
- 3.104 At present, the Welsh Ministers may confer supplementary functions on HEFCW by Order and have previously done so in connection with the fulfilment of the Welsh Government's statutory arrangements for student support. The Bill includes provision for the Welsh Ministers to confer additional functions on the Commission by regulations. Such functions must relate to tertiary education or research and innovation and must be exercisable by the Welsh Ministers. This approach allows for future flexibility and mirrors the existing arrangements in place for HEFCW.
- 3.105 The Commission's relationship with the Welsh Government will be managed through partnership arrangements, with a team established within the Welsh Government to provide support. This partnership team will be the main contact point between the Commission and the Welsh Government.
- 3.106 The partnership arrangements will take into account the outcomes from the 2017 review 'Delivering Together – Strengthening the Welsh Government's Sponsorship of Arm's-length Bodies' ("the 2017 review") and include proposals to strengthen the role of the Public Bodies Unit, providing some core functions and delivering greater support to the new Commission's leaders, enabling policy officials within the Welsh Government to concentrate on the Commission's strategic directions and delivery of outcomes.
- 3.107 The Public Bodies Unit was established as a result of the 2017 review. In addition to implementing the 37 recommendations of the review, it is responsible for undertaking a range of functions to improve consistency in the arrangements for sponsoring public bodies across the Welsh Government.
- 3.108 Its remit covers the following categories of public body:
- Welsh Government Sponsored Bodies
 - Welsh Government owned companies
 - Welsh Government Advisory Bodies
 - Commissioners
 - Executive Agencies
 - Non-ministerial Departments
 - Estyn and Education Workforce Council
- 3.109 Supporting the partnership teams within policy divisions, the Public Bodies Unit undertakes centralised functions in the following areas:
- (a) Public appointments. The Unit is responsible for providing advice and guidance on the establishment, classification, governance and funding arrangements for all public bodies set up by the Welsh Government including:
- Welsh Government Sponsored Bodies and Welsh Government-owned companies

- advisory panels
 - Ministerial Advisory Groups
 - task and finish groups; and other partnership arrangements.
 - Honours;
- (b) Pay and Remuneration.
- (c) Governance & policy.

Academic Freedom

3.110 The Bill includes provisions intended to ensure the duties on the Commission and the Welsh Ministers in relation to protecting academic freedoms are clear and comprehensive, capturing all functions they may exercise under the Bill.

3.111 The Commission and the Welsh Ministers are required to have regard to the importance of protecting the academic freedom of providers of higher education in Wales when exercising any of their functions under the Bill.

3.112 The Commission and the Welsh Ministers are also, when exercising any of their functions under the Bill, required to have regard to the importance of protecting the freedom (within the law) of academic staff at providers of higher education in Wales to:

- question and test received wisdom, and
- put forward new ideas and controversial or unpopular opinions without placing themselves in jeopardy of losing their jobs or privileges they may have at the provider.

Part 2 - Registration and Regulation of tertiary education providers

Aims of registration and regulation under the Commission.

3.113 The Hazelkorn Review identified a need to “establish appropriate governance structures, with the breadth of expertise, which can lead, support, monitor and evaluate post-secondary [education] actions and outcomes against objectives”, within the context of a new Commission assuming responsibility for funding and oversight of the tertiary education sector.

3.114 An effective and future proof system of regulating tertiary education providers in Wales will need to deliver:

- proportionate accountability and transparency for providers in receipt of Welsh Government student support and/or grant funding, particularly in regards to educational quality, financial assurance, and governance of providers.
- regulatory requirements that are adjustable to changing circumstances in funding, provider structure, and public need.
- continued and appropriate autonomy for education providers, whilst also ensuring the delivery of the Welsh Government’s strategic objectives.
- value for money for taxpayers together with assurances about the use of public funds.

The register of tertiary education providers

- 3.115 In order to achieve the above aims, the Commission will be required to operate a register of tertiary education providers. The register will be a legal mechanism by which appropriate and proportionate regulation and oversight is applied to registered tertiary education providers in receipt of public funds, including grant funding from the Commission and Welsh Government student support.
- 3.116 The register will equip the Commission with sufficient legal means to effect regulation of providers whilst also respecting and protecting the autonomy and independence of tertiary education providers.
- 3.117 Providers will be required to demonstrate satisfaction of initial baseline regulatory requirements and as a condition of registration their subsequent compliance with ongoing regulatory requirements.

Registration categories and eligibility for public funds

- 3.118 Providers which meet appropriate regulatory requirements will be eligible for appropriate forms of public funds.
- 3.119 Registration categories will lead to different levels of financial eligibility and there will be scope for variations in regulatory requirements for different types of providers. The Welsh Ministers will be required to determine these categories of registration, and may also specify the categories of registration which will be eligible for respective forms of funding from the Commission.
- 3.120 The Welsh Ministers will also be able to make regulations to specify particular higher education courses which may be funded by the Commission, with the provider which is providing the course not needing to be registered. This will allow for the Welsh Ministers to specify that certain provision should be funded, where for example there is a specific skills shortage or a course of national importance not otherwise available in Wales and which would not otherwise be eligible for funding.
- 3.121 The Welsh Ministers will be able to amend the categories of registration, this will enable the regulatory system to adjust to changes in the structure and funding of the tertiary education sector, and help ensure that appropriate regulation can continue. Any regulations which establish, modify or remove categories of registration will be subject to affirmative Senedd procedure.

Eligibility for registration

- 3.122 All providers that wish to access the benefits of registration must register with the Commission. A provider is eligible to register if:
- it is a tertiary education provider in Wales,
 - it provides, or has provided on its behalf, the kind of tertiary education that relates to the category in which it is seeking to register, and
 - it satisfies, in the view of the Commission, the initial registration conditions applicable to it in respect of the category of registration sought.

- 3.123 Providers which are providing tertiary education on behalf of another provider in Wales will not normally need to register with the Commission, unless they are providing their own courses, in respect of which they are seeking automatic designation for student support purposes or direct funding from the Commission.
- 3.124 In franchising or sub-contracting arrangements, responsibility for registration will reside with the 'lead' provider, rather than the delivery provider. Lead providers which franchise or subcontract all or part of a course to an external or collaborating provider will retain responsibility for the learners on these courses, for ensuring that regulatory requirements are met, and for ensuring appropriate use of public funds.

Conditions of registration

- 3.125 The Bill outlines the mandatory initial conditions of registration that must apply to all categories of registration, in addition to the criteria for registration listed above. These are:
- the quality condition,
 - a condition relating to financial sustainability of the applicant tertiary education provider, and
 - a condition relating to the effectiveness of the governance and management of the applicant provider.
- 3.126 The Welsh Ministers may prescribe additional initial conditions of registration by way of regulations.
- 3.127 The Bill also outlines the mandatory ongoing conditions of registration that must apply to all categories. These are:
- the quality condition,
 - a condition relating to the effectiveness of the governance and management of the provider,
 - a condition relating to the financial sustainability of the provider,
 - a learner protection plan condition (see paragraph 3.349 – 3.359 for further detail),
 - a learner engagement code condition (see paragraph 3.367 – 3.373 for further detail), and
 - administrative conditions requiring providers to notify the Commission of any changes in information relevant to registration, to provide the Commission with information as required for the Commission to exercise its functions, and to have regard to relevant advice or guidance provided by the Commission.
- 3.128 The Welsh Ministers may prescribe additional mandatory ongoing conditions of registration applicable to all, or any one, of the categories of registration.
- 3.129 The Welsh Ministers may also specify the registration category (or categories) to which a fee limit condition and an equal opportunity condition should apply.
- 3.130 The equal opportunity condition will require registered providers to achieve outcomes which further the following aims:
- increasing participation in tertiary education by people from under-represented groups.

- improving retention of learners in tertiary education who are members of under-represented groups.
- reducing gaps in attainment in tertiary education between groups which result from social, cultural, economic and other structural inequalities.
- improving employment and further study outcomes for tertiary education learners from under-represented groups upon completion of their courses.

- 3.131 A fee limit condition will require providers to have an approved fee limit statement, and to ensure that qualifying courses fees for qualifying persons ('regulated' fees) do not exceed the relevant fee limit. This will replace the fee limit function of fee and access plans, and ensure that tuition fees for qualifying courses cannot exceed the maximum fee amount specified in student support regulations (currently £9000 for full-time courses).
- 3.132 It will be for the Commission to determine the precise requirements of each of these conditions in a manner which balances the public interest with the need to avoid excessive regulation of providers. The Commission will be required to consult, if it appears appropriate to do so, concerned persons (for example those registered providers which will be subject to the registration conditions) and publish guidance for registered providers about the ongoing registration conditions.
- 3.133 A number of the conditions of registration are expected to build upon current regulatory practice by both HEFCW and the Welsh Government in respect of terms and conditions of funding and other assurance mechanisms provided for by existing legislation.
- 3.134 Conditions in regards to learner protection and learner engagement are new additions to the regulatory framework for providers of higher education. The focus on learner protection and learner engagement were widely welcomed by stakeholders during consultation, along with the benefits of establishing a common set of principles to allow for consistency and easier transfer and progression across the whole tertiary education sector. There was also a strong message that any framework for achieving this should be through close consultation with providers and learner representatives.
- 3.135 More information on the Welsh Government's preferred policy at the time of the introduction of this Bill can be found in the accompanying Statement of Policy Intent.

Operation of the register, compliance and intervention

- 3.136 The Commission will be able to determine the manner in which information required for registration must be presented and submitted. Information contained in the register and information previously contained in the register will be publicly available.
- 3.137 The Commission will be required to monitor providers' compliance with regulatory requirements relevant to their category of registration.
- 3.138 The Commission will have recourse to a range of interventions in order to deal with situations where providers are either at risk of failing, or have failed, to comply with the ongoing conditions of their registration. The purpose of such intervention is to protect the interests of learners, taxpayers and the Welsh Ministers, as well as the reputation of the Welsh tertiary education sector.

- 3.139 Interventions are not intended to be punitive. As a regulator, the Commission should act in a way which provides confidence that regulatory decisions are made on an objective, impartial and consistent basis, without conflict of interest, bias or improper influence.
- 3.140 The Commission should promote the efficient achievement of policy objectives and public confidence in the operations of the providers it regulates. To achieve this effectively, it is important that the Commission's first course of action should be to investigate the reasons contributing to failure to comply or likely failure to comply.
- 3.141 The Commission will be enabled to work with tertiary education providers to ensure compliance and better regulation in order to achieve improved outcomes and better value for money. However, the Commission will also be able to take appropriate action depending on the circumstances of the particular regulatory failures.
- 3.142 The Commission will be able to take appropriate enforcement action if providers fail to comply with, or are likely to breach, the ongoing conditions of registration. It is intended that the Commission will take proportionate and appropriate intervention steps, for example the Commission may choose to offer advice and assistance to secure compliance ahead of enforcement actions.

Advice and assistance

- 3.143 The Commission will seek to support providers to be compliant with registration conditions, and offer supportive interventions to providers in cases where compliance may be incomplete or non-compliance is having a limited impact on learners or in regards to the proper use of public funds.
- 3.144 The Commission will have the power to provide advice and guidance to registered providers in order to secure compliance with ongoing registration conditions. Providers will be required to have regards to any such advice or guidance given.
- 3.145 Examples where supportive interventions will be most appropriate include low level issues around the quality of education being provided by the registered provider or on its behalf, or minor issues around governance, such as out of date or inadequate policies being in place relating to staffing or learners, but which are not causing any adverse impacts.

Investigation and enhanced monitoring

- 3.146 The Commission will be able to carry out a review of any matters that it considers relevant to compliance. In addition, the Commission will be expected to ensure it has access to a thorough and detailed evidence base before taking more rigorous regulatory action. These reviews may be general in nature, or for a particular purpose. The Commission may use the outcome of an investigation to inform general activities it undertakes, or may form part of a regulatory action it decides to take.

- 3.147 Examples of such an intervention might include the Commission instigating a supplementary quality assessment review to focus on matters identified in an external review, or investigating concerns identified through routine monitoring or in response to concerns raised by stakeholders, including learners.

Directions and specific conditions of registration

- 3.148 The Commission will be able to apply specific conditions to individual registered providers. The purpose of such conditions will be twofold. Firstly to ensure that the provider in question addresses any shortcomings the Commission may identify when processing the provider's registration application, which although not sufficiently serious to prevent registration, need to be addressed by the provider. Secondly, to ensure that a registered provider addresses matters the Commission identifies during the course of monitoring the provider's compliance with its general ongoing conditions of registration.
- 3.149 The Commission will also have a power to issue direction to providers where they have failed, or are likely to fail to comply with, an ongoing registration condition.
- 3.150 The Bill sets out various limitations and safeguards for the use of the powers to issue directions and impose a specific condition of registration, including the need to issue a warning notice and to consider representations made by the provider in question. The Commission must also notify the governing body of the provider of its decision and publish the notice.
- 3.151 It is expected that these powers would be used in more serious breaches of registration, such as instances of widespread inadequate quality in a provider, clearly identifiable cases of reckless management or weak governance, or mismanagement of funds granted to a provider by the Commission.

De-registration

- 3.152 Removal of a provider from the register will, in most cases, be considered an absolute last resort regulatory measure for the Commission, and only enforced when necessary to safeguard learners' interests or to protect public monies. It is expected that the Commission will only remove a provider from the register when there is significant and repeated breaches of registration conditions, when all other intervention measures have been exhausted, or when a provider requests that it does so.
- 3.153 It is expected that de-registration of a provider would take place in the context of substantial institutional turmoil and disruption for staff, learners and local stakeholders. The Welsh Ministers will therefore be able to make transitional and savings arrangements through regulations, in such circumstances. This may include regulations enabling the Commission to treat a de-registered provider as a registered provider for certain purposes in order to protect learners or public funds (for example, in regards to ensuring a provider honours its commitments in a learner protection plan).
- 3.154 Procedural requirements for the Commission to follow in the event of a de-registration decision are set out in the legislation.

- 3.155 The Commission must maintain a list of providers removed from categories of the register by de-registration, list any regulations relating to that de-registration and make this list publicly available.
- 3.156 If a provider is to be removed from the register because of a failure to meet ongoing registration conditions relevant to its category of registration, but the provider satisfies the conditions of another category on the register, the Commission may register the provider in the new category of registration subject to the consent of the provider.
- 3.157 Welsh Ministers will have a duty to appoint a person or a panel of persons to review decisions by the Commission under Part 2 of Bill in respect of registration or directions in respect of a failure to comply with ongoing registration conditions. The Bill allows for regulations to set out the details of the process under which a review should be conducted, and the steps to be taken by the Commission and the Welsh Government in the event of a review. Providers shall have a right to have decisions made by the Commission reviewed, subject to these regulations.

Quality Assurance and Improving Quality

General functions: assuring and promoting improvement in quality

- 3.158 The Commission will provide a consistent approach to quality across the tertiary education sector based on shared principles. Quality assessment arrangements will continue to be tailored to reflect sector context, building on the strengths of existing arrangements, but will also bring these together in a more coherent way.
- 3.159 The Commission will have a duty to monitor and promote improvement in the quality of education and training across registered and funded tertiary education providers. In carrying out this function, the Commission is expected to be guided by its strategic plan, which is in turn guided by its strategic duties as well as the statement of priorities published by Welsh Ministers.
- 3.160 The Commission will have a power to produce and publish a quality assurance framework. The framework will set out the Commission's policy in regards to quality and quality assessment. The Commission will be required to consult with tertiary education providers, Estyn, and other stakeholders as the Commission sees fit.
- 3.161 It is intended that the development of a quality framework will identify common principles for understanding, assessing and improving quality in provision across the tertiary education sector in Wales. Any quality framework which applies to higher education will enable continued alignment with sector-recognised UK-wide standards and the requirements of the European Higher Education Area.
- 3.162 Estyn and the designated body for quality assessments in higher education will be required to take account of any quality framework published by the Commission when conducting inspections and assessments.
- 3.163 The Commission will have the power to issue advice and guidance to any funded or registered provider regarding quality and quality improvement. In particular, the Commission will be expected to provide advice and guidance to providers in instances where the quality of education is at risk of becoming inadequate.

Inspection in Further Education and training – Estyn

- 3.164 The Commission will be under a duty to monitor the quality of education or training in providers the Commission funds or secures. Where these providers are subject to either (or both) higher education quality assessments or Estyn inspections, the Commission will be expected to have regard to the reports produced by these. This will not preclude the Commission utilising any other relevant information in monitoring quality.
- 3.165 Estyn will retain its duty to inspect education or training for persons aged 16 or over (other than higher education), where the provider is given financial support by the Commission, by a local authority in Wales (which is in turn funded by the Commission), or by the Welsh Ministers. Estyn's right of entry to providers it inspects will remain unchanged.
- 3.166 Continuing from current legislation, Estyn will be required to report on the quality of education inspected, the standards achieved by those receiving the education, and whether financial resources made available to the provider of the education are managed efficiently and used in a way which provides value for money.
- 3.167 All providers which are the subject of any report of an assessment conducted by Estyn will be required to prepare a written statement of the action they propose to take in light of a report. These statements will be published.
- 3.168 When asked to do so by the Commission, Estyn will inspect education or training for persons aged 16 or over (other than higher education) where the provider is financially supported by the Commission, or by a local authority in Wales, which is in turn funded by the Commission.
- 3.169 Estyn will be required to have regard to any framework for the quality of tertiary education published by the Commission. In producing any such framework, the Commission will be required to have regard to the views of Estyn.
- 3.170 Estyn will be required to keep the Commission informed about the quality of education and training inspected by it. Estyn shall also be required to provide the Commission with advice on such matters as the Commission may specify in relation to education and training which is inspected by Estyn and funded or regulated by the Commission (or by a local authority in Wales, which is in turn funded by the Commission).
- 3.171 Estyn will maintain its duties to inspect and provide information to the Welsh Ministers in respect of any post-16 education which will continue to be funded by the Welsh Ministers. This includes youth and community worker training, careers services, independent specialist colleges, traineeships and employability programmes, Welsh for Adults and the National Centre for Learning Welsh.

Relationship between Estyn and the Commission: changes to funding

- 3.172 Whilst Estyn will retain its current independence in terms of the activities it undertakes and the reports it produces, it will be under a duty to have regard to the advice and guidance of the Commission (including strategic priorities for quality improvement and assurance) in exercising its functions.

- 3.173 The Commission will be able to require Estyn to provide it with information and advice in respect of the quality of further education and training funded or secured by the Commission which it inspects; as well as to conduct inspections of such class or types of further education and training funded or secured by the Commission as the Commission shall specify.
- 3.174 The Bill therefore requires that the Commission and Estyn agree an annual plan of inspections for the providers of further education and training that is funded or secured by the Commission, as well as more general activity to be undertaken by Estyn in respect of the post-16 sector, to be outlined in a remit letter or similar statement.
- 3.175 Funding for Estyn's activities in respect of further education funded or secured by the Commission, will be the responsibility of the Commission.
- 3.176 This will represent a change from the current arrangements under section 104(4) of the Government of Wales Act 1998, under which the Welsh Ministers are responsible for funding Estyn's activities.
- 3.177 The Welsh Ministers will continue to be responsible for funding Estyn's inspection and other activities in respect of education and training that is not funded or secured by the Commission. The Commission will provide Estyn with such funding as it considers appropriate in respect of Estyn's inspections and other activities in relation to provision funded or secured by the Commission, and have regard to what it considers Estyn will need to spend in discharging its duties.
- 3.178 Despite this separation of budgets and formal accountabilities, the intention is that Estyn will maintain a joined-up approach to its work across pre- and post-16 education. It is expected that the Welsh Ministers, Estyn, and the Commission will discuss and collaborate in respect of planning and funding for Estyn's activities across the sectors it inspects, and more generally in respect of ensuring continued improvement in quality across pre- and post-16 education.

Assessing quality in higher education

- 3.179 The Commission will have a duty to assess, or make arrangements to assess, the quality of higher education provided in Wales by each registered higher education provider, and provided on behalf of providers registered with the Commission (for example in cases of franchised or sub-contracted arrangements).
- 3.180 The Commission are required to ensure the reports of these assessments are published. All providers which are the subject of any report of an assessment will be required to prepare a written statement of the action they propose to take in light of a report.
- 3.181 The Commission may designate a body to conduct the quality assessments. The Commission will be required to obtain the consent of the Welsh Ministers in making its designation. Before making a recommendation regarding designation, the Commission will also consult with registered higher education providers and other stakeholders it deems appropriate regarding the requirements and qualities of the body to be appointed.

3.182 It is anticipated that this designated body will be on the European Association for Quality Assurance in Higher Education (ENQA) register of approved agencies. At present there is only one such body operating UK-wide in publicly funded higher education: the Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education (QAA).

3.183 The functions of the designated quality assessment body will be as follows:

- conduct assessments of the quality of higher education provided in Wales by registered providers, at intervals as prescribed in regulations,
- conduct assessments of the quality of any non-registered higher education providers in Wales who request an assessment (for example, providers seeking to be registered with the Commission), and
- provide the Commission with information as required regarding the quality of higher education provided in Wales by registered providers.

3.184 The Commission is expected to promote collaborative working between the designated body and Estyn in respect of quality assessments in providers where there is both higher and further education provision. It is intended that the relationship between the Commission, Estyn, and the designated higher education assessment body will enable substantial improvements in the co-ordination of quality assessments in respect of these providers, with the Commission able to play a coordinating and facilitating role between the two assessment/inspection bodies.

3.185 In order to perform its quality assessment functions, the designated body will have the power to charge higher education providers fees. The fees charged will be calculated by reference to the costs incurred in performing such functions, and should not exceed these costs.

3.186 The designated body will be required to publish a statement of the fees which it charges and the basis on which such fees are calculated. It is intended that this arrangement should replace the current fees paid by higher education providers for external quality assessments. The Commission may also fund the designated body to perform its assessment functions, and/or any research or other activity relevant to its functions.

Enforcement

3.187 It is expected that the Commission will focus on driving forward quality enhancement by co-ordinating activities across the two assessment and inspection bodies, supporting collaboration, disseminating good practice, and determining strategic priorities for quality improvement.

3.188 However, the Commission will also hold enforcement powers in instances where quality fails to meet the standards expected. The Commission will be expected to uphold rigorous standards of quality across the sectors it funds and regulates, and will be empowered by the Bill to take action in instances of inadequate quality.

3.189 For registered providers, the Commission will uphold minimum standards through the mandatory registration condition related to quality. Following any quality assessment or inspection, providers will be required to publish the actions they intend to take and in light of what is reported the Commission will be able to take a range of regulatory steps, including the issuing of advice and guidance, enhanced monitoring and review of quality in a provider, and directions to registered providers in more serious cases.

- 3.190 Ultimately, a registered provider which persistently fails to meet minimum standards in quality will be liable for de-registration and subsequent loss of access to public funding. However, it is intended that this power would only be exercised by the Commission as a matter of last resort.
- 3.191 For unregistered providers, the Commission will be able to mandate requirements in respect of ensuring minimum quality standards as part of its terms and conditions of funding.
- 3.192 In respect of tertiary education providers that are institutions within the further education sector ('further education institutions'), the Welsh Ministers will also have the power to intervene where they are satisfied that there are grounds upon which to intervene, as set out in the Bill (see paragraph 3.194 – 3.204).

Intervention in the conduct of further education institutions

Current Position

- 3.193 Section 57 of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992 ("the 1992 Act") enables the Welsh Ministers to intervene in the conduct of an institution in Wales, within the further education sector, if they are satisfied that one or more of the following conditions are met:
- institution's affairs have been or are being mismanaged by its governing body,
 - institution's governing body have failed to discharge any duty imposed on them by or for the purposes of any Act or any Measures of the Senedd,
 - institution's governing body have acted or are proposing to act unreasonably with respect to the exercise of any power conferred or the performance of any duty imposed by or under any Act or any Measure of the Senedd,
 - institution is performing significantly less well than it might in all the circumstances reasonably be expected to perform, or is failing or likely to fail to give an acceptable standard of education or training.
- 3.194 Subject to the satisfaction of one or more of the above conditions the Welsh Ministers may, by order, intervene in the following ways:
- removing all or any of the members of the institution's governing body;
 - appointing new members to the governing body, if there are vacancies (however arising);
 - directing a governing body as to the exercise of their powers and performance of their duties including:
 - A direction to exercise powers under section 5(2)(b) to (f) and (h) of the Education (Wales) Measure 2011 to collaborate with other persons or bodies such as another further education institution or a school; and
 - a governing body of a further education corporation to resolve to dissolve the institution.

Purpose and intended effect of the legislation

- 3.195 The Bill makes provision for the repeal of section 57 of the 1992 Act and for the re-enactment of these intervention functions. This would place the Welsh Ministers' powers in Welsh legislation and would make provisions clearer and more accessible.
- 3.196 The Bill largely retains the grounds for intervention and the form that intervention may take if any of those grounds are met, except that the Welsh Ministers may now intervene by way of direction rather than by order. Other minor modifications are made to bring the provisions up to date and ensure they align with terminology used elsewhere in the Bill.
- 3.197 The intervention functions are retained by the Welsh Ministers, as they extend beyond the regulatory regime established by the Commission through registration and terms and conditions of funding.
- 3.198 As the Welsh Ministers' current funding and regulatory relationship with institutions in the further education sector will largely transfer to the Commission, the Bill makes provision for the Commission to play a central role in the exercise of these intervention powers.
- 3.199 In particular, the Bill places the Commission under a duty to notify the Welsh Ministers if it becomes aware that any of the conditions for intervention are met. The Bill requires the Welsh Ministers to have regard to the Commission's view in deciding whether to exercise these intervention functions. Advice from the Commission will help the Welsh Ministers take all relevant factors into account when deciding whether or not to intervene in the specific circumstances of each case.
- 3.200 Alongside this, the Welsh Ministers are required to consult with the Commission before the intervention powers are exercised.
- 3.201 The Welsh Government consider that this role aligns with the Commission's funding and regulatory functions in respect of further education institutions. Furthermore, the involvement of the Commission in the exercise of these functions will provide a check and balance on their use and provide an additional level of protection for further education institutions.
- 3.202 The intervention functions serve an important role in effecting the policy to protect the provision of further education in Wales. However, it is intended that in most cases the functions will be used only when the Commission has exhausted its intervention functions or where the issue is so serious that more urgent action is required.
- 3.203 The Bill also requires the Welsh Ministers to publish and keep under review, a statement of intervention policy setting out how these intervention powers will be exercised. It is intended that the statement of intervention functions will set out matters such as how and when notice of a proposed direction will be given by the Welsh Ministers, how a governing body may respond to such a notice, and how and when the Welsh Ministers should give reasons for any decisions they take.

Financial Sustainability - Duty to monitor and report on financial sustainability

3.204 The Bill places the Commission under a duty to monitor and report on the financial sustainability of particular tertiary education providers, these are:

- registered providers;
- providers in Wales within the further education sector funded by the Commission that are not registered providers;
- other tertiary education providers of a kind specified in regulations made by the Welsh Ministers.

3.205 This requirement is intended to help ensure the Welsh Ministers are informed of the current and future financial position of those sectors or groups of providers to which the duty relates. This information may also provide an opportunity for the Commission to identify and advise on emerging trends or issues that might impact on the future financial sustainability of post 16 education in Wales.

3.206 Whilst this duty will formalise these requirements in legislation, the Welsh Government do not consider it to be a significant step change from current practice whereby HEFCW prepares and publishes an annual circular on the financial position of providers of higher education in Wales.

3.207 The Commission will be required to include a summary of the current financial position of providers monitored under the duty within the annual report that it submits to the Welsh Ministers each year. This summary will be for the financial year to which the annual report relates and could include comparative data for previous years.

3.208 The Bill also requires the Commission to submit a separate report to the Welsh Ministers which summarises the financial outlook of providers that it monitors under this duty. This report will provide a summary of conclusions drawn by the Commission from its monitoring activity on emerging trends, patterns or other matters that the Commission considers it appropriate to bring to the attention of the Welsh Ministers. The Commission are required to submit the financial outlook report to the Welsh Ministers at the same time as the annual report.

3.209 It is anticipated that the Commission will be able to use information that it gathers from providers to demonstrate compliance with conditions of registration or terms and conditions of funding as a means to monitor and report on financial sustainability.

Part 3 - Securing and Funding Tertiary Education and Research

Introduction

3.210 Abolishing HEFCW and establishing the Commission will necessitate revised arrangements for the planning and funding of tertiary education. Certain funding functions currently operated by the Welsh Ministers and HEFCW will need to be conferred on the Commission.

3.211 The general policy intention is for the Commission to be able to fund tertiary education in Wales in relation to those who are ordinarily resident in Wales. The Commission will also be able to fund research and innovation activities undertaken by Welsh providers registered in a category specified in regulations, made by the Welsh Ministers.

- 3.212 The overall approach is to provide for the funding structures to be set out in one place on the face of the Bill, the provisions are structured around previous legislative mechanisms where these meet current policy intent together with some adaptations to align the Commission's funding functions with the new registration system.

Funding the Commission

Current Position

- 3.213 The current arrangements for planning and funding tertiary education and research are split between the functions of the Welsh Ministers and those of HEFCW.
- 3.214 Post-16 education and training, other than higher education, has been directly funded by the Welsh Government since 2006. The Welsh Government currently allocates funding to further education institutions via recurrent grants, it contracts with a variety of education and training providers to deliver apprenticeships below degree level, awards funding to local authorities in support of school sixth form education and also funds a range of community-based adult learning.
- 3.215 The Welsh Ministers provide funding to HEFCW for higher education, including degree level apprenticeships and HEFCW in turn allocates funding to eligible institutions.
- 3.216 The Welsh Ministers may make grants to HEFCW for the purpose of supporting the provision of higher education under section 68 of the 1992 Act and for supporting the provision of teacher training under section 88 of the Education Act 2005. They may attach terms and conditions to such funding within the parameters of those sections and are permitted, if they so wish, to hypothecate their grants to HEFCW.
- 3.217 Currently, the funding the Welsh Ministers provide to HEFCW for the purpose of supporting higher education is un-hypothecated and it is for HEFCW to determine the allocation of those resources, taking account of the Welsh Government's priorities. The Welsh Ministers issue non-statutory guidance to HEFCW to communicate their policy priorities in the form of an annual remit letter, and impose terms and conditions in the form of a "Framework Document" that accompanies the funding provided to HEFCW.
- 3.218 The Welsh Ministers may also rely on their powers under section 68 of the 1992 Act to provide grants to HEFCW for the purpose of supporting research undertaken by higher education institutions in Wales. HEFCW does not have a remit to fund research and innovation activities, other than those undertaken by higher education institutions. HEFCW funds research capacity and infrastructure through un-hypothecated quality related research funding. This is distributed on the basis of performance in the Research Excellence Framework which is based heavily on academic research excellence measures.
- 3.219 The Welsh Ministers are also able to fund certain research and innovation activities directly. For example, under section 5 of the Science and Technology Act 1965 they are able to fund science and technology research including its dissemination and the furthering of research results.

3.220 Additionally, under section 10 of the Higher Education Act 2004 (“the 2004 Act”) the Welsh Ministers may carry out or support research in the arts and humanities, disseminate the results of such research to further the practical application of research into arts and humanities.

3.221 The Welsh Ministers will retain their powers under these Acts.

Purpose and intended effect of the legislation

3.222 The Bill makes provision for the Welsh Ministers to fund the Commission and attach terms and conditions to that funding. To protect institutional autonomy and academic freedom (see also paragraph 3.111 – 3.113), the Bill provides for certain limitations on the terms and conditions that may be applied by the Welsh Ministers.

3.223 Firstly, whilst the Welsh Ministers will be able to apply terms and conditions in respect of categories of tertiary education providers, they cannot apply terms and condition to the activities of individual tertiary education providers.

3.224 Secondly, the Bill prohibits the Welsh Ministers from applying terms and conditions that relate to the criteria for the selection, appointment or dismissal of academic staff, including how those criteria are applied, or to the criteria for the admission of students and how those are applied.

3.225 Thirdly, although the Welsh Ministers may apply terms and conditions relating to areas of research or innovation specified in the Commission’s strategic plan, and to individual courses of higher education, the Bill provides that those terms and conditions must not specify:

- particular parts of courses,
- particular programmes of research or innovation projects,
- the content of courses of study or programmes of research or innovation projects, or
- the manner in which such courses, programmes or projects are taught, supervised or assessed, with the exception of study through the medium of Welsh.

3.226 The Welsh Minister may include, within the terms and conditions, a requirement on the Commission to enter into outcome agreements with the provider to whom the Commission proposes to provide funding. This could apply to any provider which is to be funded by the Commission, whether registered or un-registered.

3.227 The Bill defines an outcome agreement as an agreement between the Commission, and the provider to whom the Commission proposes to provide financial resources, that sets out the activities to be carried out by that provider for the purposes of contributing to the implementation of the Commission’s approved strategic plan.

3.228 Outcome Agreements would be the responsibility of the Commission and are, where specified in the terms and conditions, intended to form the basis of “performance commitments” attached to funding. This approach would provide a line of sight from the Welsh Ministers’ statement of strategic priorities through the Commission’s strategic plan to the activities of providers. The intention is that outcome agreements will be the product of co-production through negotiation between the Commission and funded bodies.

3.229 Currently, it is envisaged that the recipients of funding which are likely to be required to enter into an outcome agreement with the Commission could include:

- local authorities (in respect of local authority maintained school sixth form funding and potentially adult community based learning),
- further education and training providers – who at least for the short-term may not be required to register (this could include further education institutions and possibly other training providers depending on the scope of the terms and conditions)

3.230 The Welsh Ministers may wish to ring fence certain amounts of their funding allocations to the Commission, to be used for particular purposes or special projects. The Bill will enable the Welsh Ministers to give funding to the Commission for particular courses of study subject to the Commission agreeing that it will fund them. However, the Welsh Ministers will not be able to oblige the Commission to do anything that would result in the Commission being required to provide such courses.

3.231 The Bill enables the Welsh Ministers to fund a limited range of courses of higher education directly and retains their ability to fund further education and training directly. These provisions largely replicate the Welsh Ministers' current functions under the Learning and Skills Act 2000 ("the 2000 Act") and are necessary to enable extant Welsh Government funded initiatives such as Working Wales to continue to be funded in the short to medium term.

3.232 The Welsh Ministers will not have a new power to directly fund higher education in general.

Funding of Higher Education

Current position

3.233 It is HEFCW's responsibility to determine how the grant funding received from the Welsh Ministers is allocated to individual institutions. HEFCW may attach terms and conditions to financial support provided to institutions as HEFCW think fit. The amount of funding allocated by HEFCW for the purpose of supporting higher education has significantly decreased as a consequence of the tuition fee and student support system introduced from the 2012/13 academic year. The principal source of funding for higher education in Wales has now become tuition fee income as opposed to annual grant funding from HEFCW.

Purpose and intended effect of the legislation

3.234 The Bill makes provision for the Commission to allocate funding to providers of higher education registered in a category specified in regulations. The purpose of such funding is to support the provision of higher education by or on behalf of registered providers and the provision of facilities and other activities connected to higher education that the registered provider considers desirable. The allocation of funding to eligible providers for eligible activities will be a matter for the Commission to determine.

- 3.235 The Welsh Ministers will specify in regulations the category of registration required in order for a provider to be eligible to receive funding from the Commission.
- 3.236 Providers who receive higher education funding from the Commission will be able, subject to the consent of the Commission, to pass funding to a collaborating body.
- 3.237 The intention is to allow for the funding of collaborative activities where a provider is registered in a category specified by the Welsh Ministers in regulations, and is working in partnership with another registered provider or organisation (which is not a registered provider) to deliver courses or activities which the Commission considers should benefit from public funds.
- 3.238 The Commission will maintain regulatory oversight of the passage of such funds and registered providers will be responsible for accounting for the use of public monies and compliance with such terms and conditions as may be applied by the Commission.
- 3.239 In addition to funding higher education and associated activities provided by, or on behalf of, providers registered in a category specified in regulations, the Commission will be able to fund specified higher education courses outside the registration system. The rationale is that certain providers of higher education may not be able to register with the Commission in the categories specified in regulations, or only deliver a very limited amount of higher education wholly or mainly in Wales or to learners ordinarily resident in Wales.
- 3.240 The Welsh Ministers will, in regulations, be able to specify the description of courses eligible for funding by the Commission by reference to:
- the requirements to be met by a course,
 - the types of providers, and
 - the qualifications to which the courses lead.
- 3.241 In respect of initial teacher education for the school workforce, the intention is that only initial teacher education programmes leading to qualified teacher status accredited by the Education Workforce Council should be eligible for funding by the Commission. The Bill provides for the Welsh Ministers to make provision about this matter by way of regulations. In addition, the Welsh Ministers will retain their current functions under the Education Act 2002 (“the 2002 Act”) to enable them to fund initial teacher education.
- 3.242 As is currently the case with HEFCW, the Commission will be able to apply such terms and conditions to its funding as it considers appropriate (subject to certain limitations) and will be required to consult on its proposed terms and conditions before applying them.

Funding of Further Education and training (including sixth form provision)

Current position

3.243 Currently, the 2000 Act provides that the Welsh Ministers must secure the provision of:

- (a) proper facilities for education and training (other than higher education) suitable to the requirements of persons who are above compulsory school age but have not attained the age of 19; and
- (b) reasonable facilities for education and training (other than higher education) suitable to the requirements of persons aged 19 and above.

3.244 The effect of these two duties is that the Welsh Ministers will currently give priority to meeting the learning and skills needs of young people up to the age of 19.

3.245 The Welsh Ministers are also under a duty to promote participation in post-16 education and training and to encourage employers to become involved in its support and delivery.

3.246 The Welsh Ministers may secure the provision of financial resources to (amongst others):

- persons providing or intending to provide post-16 education or training,
- persons providing goods or services in connection with the provision by others of post-16 education or training, and
- persons undertaking research relating to education or training, as well as
- those receiving or proposing to receive post-16 education and training.

3.247 In addition to funding of the provision of post-16 education and training, financial resources may include providing financial support to those receiving or proposing to receive further education and training, for example awards to learners distributed by providers.

3.248 The Learning and Skills (Wales) Measure 2009 (by making amendments to the 2000 Act) provides for learners aged 16 to 19 in Wales to elect to follow courses of study from a local area curriculum. The Measure amended the Welsh Ministers' duty to secure proper facilities for the education and training of young people aged 16 to 19 to provide that such facilities are proper if they satisfy learners' local curriculum entitlements under section 33F of the 2000 Act.

3.249 At present, the Welsh Ministers are subject to a duty to form the local curriculum for learners aged 16 to 19. The local curriculum consists of a minimum number of courses of study to be included within a local curriculum, local area curricula should contain a wide range of courses of study both academic and vocational in nature.

3.250 Local authorities, the governing bodies and head teachers of local authority maintained schools and the governing bodies and principals of further education institutions must assist the Welsh Ministers in planning the local curricula. Planning the local curricula means the process by which the Welsh Ministers, in consultation with partners, decide which courses of study to include in the local curricula.

3.251 The Welsh Ministers are able to impose conditions to the funding they allocate, such as allowing access to documents and accounts, as well as requiring a person to whom financial support is provided to give the Welsh Ministers such information as they may request. The Welsh Ministers may also require providers of post-16 education and training to charge fees, make awards and recover sums of money against specified criteria.

- 3.252 The Welsh Ministers currently issue a financial memorandum to funded institutions which, together with an annual grant letter, sets out the conditions imposed on the provision of grants or grant in aid.
- 3.253 In respect of school sixth form provision, the Welsh Ministers may make grants to local authorities on the condition that such grants are to be applied as part of the authority's schools budget, with a view to the grant being used for the purposes of, or for purposes in connection with, the provision by schools of education suitable to the requirements of persons above compulsory school age. Such allocations support school sixth form provision.
- 3.254 In addition to the above functions under the 2000 Act, the Welsh Ministers also have functions under the 2002 Act relevant to funding. Section 14 of the 2002 Act provides a general power for the Welsh Ministers to give financial assistance to any person in connection with a variety of purposes in respect of education. This enables the Welsh Ministers to give or make arrangements for the giving of financial assistance, for example, under the Educational Maintenance Allowance and the Welsh Government Learning Grant - Further Education schemes. The intention is for these functions to remain with the Welsh Ministers.

Purpose and intended effect of the legislation

- 3.255 The Commission will be required to secure the provision of facilities in Wales for further education and training for young people over the age of 16, but who have not reached the age of 19, and for adults over the age of 19. This includes vocational, social, physical and recreational training and includes a wide range of organised activities offering opportunities for non-formal types of learning.
- 3.256 These duties are framed around securing the provision of 'proper' facilities or 'reasonable' facilities.
- 3.257 Facilities are 'proper' if they:
- are of a quantity sufficient to meet the reasonable needs of individuals,
 - are of a quality adequate to meet those needs, and,
 - in respect of young people aged 16 to 19, sufficient to satisfy the entitlements conferred under section 33F of the 2000 Act
- 3.258 Facilities are reasonable if, taking account of the Commission's resources, the facilities are of such a quantity and quality that the Commission can reasonably be expected to secure their provision.
- 3.259 The Commission must secure the provision of 'proper' facilities in Wales for:
- further education and training of a quality and quantity suitable to the requirements of young persons who are 16 or over but have not attained the age of 19;

- ‘relevant education and training’ of a quality and quantity suitable to the requirements of ‘eligible’ persons over 19 years old.

- 3.260 The Bill requires the Welsh Ministers to make regulations specifying relevant education and training for the purposes of the duty to secure proper facilities for adults over the age of 19. Relevant education may be specified by reference to matters including, but not limited to, subject, level of study or type of qualification.
- 3.261 The approach of defining relevant education in subordinate legislation, rather than on the face of the Bill, is intended to balance establishing a minimum duty to fund further education and training for persons aged over 19 whilst enabling that duty to be amended over time, in order to ensure it remains fit for the future.
- 3.262 ‘Eligible’ adults are those who are over the age of 19 years old and meet the criteria set out in regulations the Welsh Ministers may make. Enabling the Welsh Minister to specify eligibility in regulations will help to ensure that an expanded commitment to adult education is targeted at those who most require it, and contributes to the wider social and economic needs of Wales.
- 3.263 The Commission will also be subject to a duty to secure the provision of reasonable facilities for further education and training for adult aged 19 years old or over. This is a continuation of the existing duty on the Welsh Ministers.
- 3.264 The effect is that in the exercise of these duties the Commission will need to give priority to meeting the learning and skills needs of the younger age group and those adults over the age of 19 who meet the criteria set out in regulations made by the Welsh Minister (in relation to education and training specified in regulations). This is an expansion of current policy.
- 3.265 In discharging these duties, the Commission will be required to take account of matters including the places where facilities are provided, the character of facilities and the different abilities and aptitudes of different persons.
- 3.266 The Commission will be required to make the best use of its resources, and in particular, avoid provision that might give rise to disproportionate expenditure. Disproportionate expenditure is that which, although not necessarily wasteful, is too much or too little in view of the Commission’s overall functions and expenditure. Provision is not to be considered as giving rise to disproportionate expenditure only because that provision is more expensive than comparable provision.
- 3.267 The above proposals have implications for the way in which the provisions of the 2000 Act will work in future. The Bill provides for amendments intended to ensure that post-16 learners’ entitlements continue to be delivered and that enforcement action can be taken if necessary.
- 3.268 The intention is to retain the current entitlements for learners aged 16 to 19, with the Commission having responsibility for ensuring the formation of local curricula, in line with its responsibilities to plan and fund post-16 education and training and to secure proper facilities for learners aged 16 to 19.
- 3.269 The Bill will also enable the Welsh Ministers to continue to support future development and design of local curricula for learners aged 16 to 19. Currently the Welsh Ministers have the powers to amend the learning domains that form the basis for the 16 to 19 local curriculum and also to direct whether a course should be included within a particular learning domain. These powers will be retained by the Welsh Ministers and in exercising those powers the Bill will require the Welsh Ministers to consult the Commission.

- 3.270 To enable the Commission to discharge its duties in respect of further education and training it will have the power to fund persons who provide, or are proposing to provide, post-16 education and training. This will include further education colleges and private training providers. Additionally the Commission will be able to fund the supply of services by organisations who may not be providers themselves, but who support the delivery of post-16 education and training by providers through the provision of goods and services. The Commission will also be able to make financial support available to further education learners and prospective further education learners. This could include for example, awards to learners which are distributed by further education institutions.
- 3.271 The Commission will be able to make grants to local authorities on the condition that such grants are applied as part of the authority's schools' budget with a view to the grant being used for the purposes of, or purposes in connection with, the provision by schools of education suitable to the requirements of persons above compulsory school age.
- 3.272 No new primary legislation is required to facilitate the implementation of the new mechanisms for the distribution of recurrent funding from local authorities to maintained schools with sixth forms, as the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 includes the necessary provisions alongside regulations made under that Act. This builds on the arrangements currently operated by the Welsh Ministers.
- 3.273 The Commission will be able to impose such terms and conditions as considered appropriate to financial resources allocated for the purpose of further education and training. This will allow the Commission to impose regulatory requirements relating to financial assurance and the quality of education and training.
- 3.274 Where the Commission funds further education or training in Wales, it may assign terms and conditions to that funding including in relation to the providers being required to have a learner protection plan, comply with the requirements of the Learner Engagement Code and to have regard to guidance given by the Commission.
- 3.275 In addition, the Commission will be required to impose terms and conditions to its funding for further education and training which prohibit the charging of fees to learners aged 16 to 19 i.e. individuals above compulsory school age who have not attained the age of 19.

Additional Learning Needs

Purpose and intended effect of the legislation

- 3.276 In discharging its duties to secure proper and reasonable facilities for further education and training, and its funding functions under sections 94(1), 101(1) and 101(2) of the Bill, the Commission will be required to have regard to the needs of persons with additional learning needs and to the desirability of facilities being available which would assist the discharge of duties under the Additional Learning Needs and Education Tribunal (Wales) Act 2018 (“the 2018 Act”).

- 3.277 The intention is that the Commission will secure general, proper and reasonable facilities for learners with additional learning needs and that local authorities will, under the 2018 Act, be responsible for funding and securing specialist provision on an individual basis, including any necessary board and lodging.

School sixth form organisation

Current position

- 3.278 The process for opening, altering or closing a school maintained by a local authority and the decision to establish or close a school sixth form, together with the role that the Welsh Ministers have in that decision, is detailed in the School Standards and Organisation (Wales) Act 2013 (“the 2013 Act”).
- 3.279 Currently the Welsh Ministers have the power to propose new sixth form schools, add a sixth form to a school or close existing sixth forms. This is in order to assist them, if necessary, to meet their duty to secure the provision of proper facilities for the education and training of 16 to 19 year olds.

Purpose and intended effect of the legislation

- 3.280 In light of the Commission taking on the strategic responsibility for securing proper facilities for the education and training of 16 to 19 year olds, the Commission is to be enabled, in certain circumstances, to direct that a local authority, or the governing board of a foundation or voluntary school, establish or discontinue a school sixth form, or make proposals in accordance with such a direction. Local authorities and governing bodies will retain their ability to bring forward their own proposals, but the Welsh Ministers will cease to have a general proposals role to restructure school sixth form provision.
- 3.281 The local authority or governing body of a faith, foundation or voluntary school sixth form will retain the current functions in relation to the bringing forward of proposals in relation to the organisation of school sixth forms. The provisions inserted into the 2013 Act by the Bill will not result in any loss of existing protections in relation to the publication, consultation, ability to object to proposals, or approval by the Welsh Ministers as necessary and other significant provisions in the 2013 Act will remain in place.
- 3.282 The circumstances and limitations on what might trigger the Commission to direct a local authority to bring forward proposals will be consulted on and included in the statutory School Organisation Code.

Funding of other activities connected to tertiary education

Current position

- 3.283 The Welsh Ministers may currently fund facilities designed to form links between employers, providers of education and training and learners or prospective learners.
- 3.284 Additionally the Welsh Ministers may fund the provision of information, advice or guidance about education, training or connected matters including employment. The Welsh Ministers may disburse funding themselves or arrange for others to do so. Financial resources can either be provided by the Welsh Ministers, or by making arrangements for someone else to deliver resources or by making arrangements for the provision to be delivered jointly.

Purpose and intended effect of the legislation

- 3.285 The Commission will be able to fund facilities designed to form links between tertiary education and employers as well as information, advice and guidance to people on learning opportunities and related issues, including employment. For example the Commission could elect to fund work experience for post-16 learners and could work in partnership with other bodies to ensure the provision of information, advice and guidance about learning opportunities and progression routes to employment.
- 3.286 In paying for anything that it is empowered to do, the Commission will be able to use its own financial resources, for example the grant provided by the Welsh Ministers, to assist in the transfer of financial resources from one person to another, and do either of these things jointly with other persons.

Funding of Apprenticeships

Current position

- 3.287 Apprenticeships below degree level are funded by the Welsh Ministers by means of a fully procured tender exercise that includes further education institutions, independent training providers, local authorities and third sector organisations.
- 3.288 Providers of apprenticeships are required to adhere to contractual obligations detailed within the framework agreement and programme specification. Following a robust and open tender, frameworks are awarded for the period of the tender. Programme commissions (or contracts) are generally awarded to providers on an annual basis.
- 3.289 Apprenticeships below degree level are currently funded via a contract between the Welsh Ministers and apprenticeship providers, with the provider network procured through a competitive tender exercise every few years.
- 3.290 Delivery of degree apprenticeships commenced in September 2018 and are being funded via a grant through HEFCW.

Purpose and intended effect of the legislation

- 3.291 The Bill provides for the Commission to fund the preparation of Welsh apprenticeship frameworks and the provision of approved Welsh apprenticeships.
- 3.292 This will enable the Commission to fund apprenticeships in the same way that other tertiary education is funded and provide, for the first time in Wales, a standalone apprenticeships funding power.
- 3.293 See paragraph 3.312 – 3.348 for further detail in relation to apprenticeships.

Research and Innovation

Current position

- 3.294 The Commission will be able fund registered providers for research and innovation activities, as well as bodies collaborating with registered providers. This will primarily involve inheriting HEFCW's research and innovation funding functions, including 'quality related' research funding, the Research Wales Innovation Fund, and postgraduate student research funding.
- 3.295 Funding for collaborating bodies will be made available where the Commission is satisfied that a registered provider will take appropriate steps to ensure that public money is protected.

Purpose and intended effect of the legislation

- 3.296 The Commission will have powers to impose terms and conditions on funding for research and innovation. In doing so, the Commission must have regard to the need to protect academic freedom, and the principle that decisions on individual research projects are best taken following an evaluation of the quality and likely impact of the proposals.
- 3.297 The Bill enables the Welsh Ministers to provide grants to the Commission for the purpose of supporting research and innovation activities and to apply terms and conditions to such grants. This power will enable the Welsh Ministers to provide funding and to specify the broad research area that is eligible to receive that funding, for example 'social science' or 'nuclear research'. The detail of the kind of research, i.e. a 'programme of research' will be a matter for the Commission (through the Research and Innovation Committee), as will the administration of those funds.
- 3.298 The Commission will have a duty to promote the results of research and innovation carried out in Wales in order to support it reaching a wide audience in Wales and beyond and to promote actively the exploitation of research and innovation knowledge.
- 3.299 The Commission will also have a duty to promote the carrying out of research and innovation in Wales.
- 3.300 It is envisaged that the Commission will work closely with relevant bodies responsible for research and innovation across the UK, Research England, the research councils, Innovate UK and others. It will also inherit HEFCW's current responsibilities for joint-oversight of common UK initiatives such as the Research Excellence Framework.

Welsh Language

Current position

3.301 The Welsh Ministers are able to allocate financial resources to support both the development and delivery of Welsh-medium tertiary provision. This will continue and it is envisaged that Welsh Ministers will continue to provide funding directly to the National Centre and Coleg in the short to medium term following the establishment of the Commission.

Purpose and intended effect of the legislation

3.302 The Welsh Ministers will be able to allocate financial resources to the Commission in respect of all categories of tertiary education. The Welsh Ministers will be able to attach terms and conditions to this funding.

3.303 Provision has been included in the Bill to enable the Welsh Ministers to apply terms and conditions of funding with reference to a course being provided and assessed through the medium of Welsh. It is possible that the Welsh Ministers may also wish to apply conditions that relate to a particular subject area. For example, they may wish to 'ring fence' funding to support courses leading to professions where there is a shortage of individuals being able to undertake their role through the medium of Welsh such as in the care or education sectors. The Commission would be able to determine how to distribute those funds (provided it is in accordance with the conditions) and providers would be free to decide whether to apply for grant awards for the specified purpose.

3.304 The Bill enables the Commission to allocate funding to providers to deliver Welsh-medium tertiary education. For example, the Commission could provide funding for Welsh-medium premiums to offset the costs of providing learning activities through the medium of Welsh. The Bill also enables the Commission to allocate funding to providers to teach Welsh.

3.305 The Commission will also be able to allocate funding to persons for purposes connected to the provision of tertiary education through the medium of Welsh and the provision of Welsh language acquisition courses. This could include activities to support the development of provision such as practitioner training, promotion of learning opportunities to prospective learners, developing and sharing learning resources and coordination of learning opportunities across providers. This could also include funding to carry out research in relation to Welsh-medium education and training in Wales.

Financial Support Directions

Current position

3.306 The Welsh Ministers are currently able to give directions to HEFCW in relation to the provision of financial support to a provider of higher education if it appears that the financial affairs of that provider have been, or are being mismanaged.

Purpose and intended effect of the legislation

3.307 The Bill makes similar provision enabling the Welsh Ministers to issue a financial support direction to the Commission about the provision of financial support to a relevant person, where it appears to the Welsh Ministers that the financial affairs of that person have been, or are being, mismanaged.

3.308 The Bill defines a relevant person as a registered provider or a person other than a registered provider that is in receipt of financial resources provided or secured by the Commission under specified funding powers. The Welsh Ministers are required to consult the Commission and the relevant person concerned before issuing a financial support direction (other than in the case of urgency, or where consultation would defeat the purpose of the direction).

3.309 The Welsh Ministers must also keep any financial support direction given to the Commission under review. The Commission will be required to comply with any financial support directions that may be given. The Welsh Ministers must publish any financial support direction that is given to the Commission under these powers. The Welsh Ministers are also required to report to the Senedd on any such directions.

3.310 These provisions will build on existing arrangements and ensure that the Welsh Ministers can take appropriate action in circumstances where it might be necessary to protect the interests of students, safeguard public funds or prevent reputational damage to the tertiary education sector in Wales.

Part 4 - Apprenticeships

3.311 The Hazelkorn report identified two key challenges in respect of apprenticeship development in Wales:

- Wales lacks coherent learning frameworks and educational opportunities for learners, of all ages, gender and talent, from school, into/through further and higher education;
- there needs to be a better balance between supply-led and demand-led education and research provision shifting away from a market-demand driven system to a mix of regulation and competition-based funding.

3.312 The White paper and technical consultation both set out the intent for the Commission to have responsibility for apprenticeships in Wales. This approach was widely supported.

Current position

- 3.313 A Welsh apprenticeship is a job combined with practical training to an industry standard; it is not a qualification in itself but a programme of learning that includes on and off the job training combined with a qualification.
- 3.314 The apprenticeship system in Wales is underpinned by the Apprenticeships, Skills, Children and Learning Act 2009 (“the 2009 Act”), which includes a number of regulation making powers that the Welsh Ministers can exercise, including in respect of:
- the alternative Welsh completion conditions, including requirement for an apprenticeship agreement (section 2(5)(b));
 - provision about the issue of apprenticeship certificates in Wales and specification of the Welsh certifying authority (section 9, 10, 11);
 - contents of an apprenticeship certificate (section 11(2));
 - the issuing of the specification of apprenticeship standards for Wales (section 28); and
 - apprenticeship agreements (section 32).
- 3.315 The 2009 Act makes provision for Welsh Ministers to publish and amend the specification of apprenticeship standards for Wales.
- 3.316 The specification of apprenticeships standards for Wales sets out the minimum requirements of apprenticeship frameworks. It outlines the type and level of qualifications required for apprenticeship frameworks at each level, the essential skills requirements, the personal learning and thinking skills needed, and the level of on or off-the-job training, and planned guided learning hours associated with completion of the framework.
- 3.317 Section 18 of the 2009 Act provides that the Welsh Ministers may designate a body to issue apprenticeship frameworks in Wales for a particular apprenticeship sector. The Welsh Ministers may designate only one body to issue Welsh apprenticeship frameworks for a particular sector. A body designated by the Welsh Ministers will be known as a ‘Welsh Issuing Authority’.
- 3.318 An Issuing Authority’s function entails certifying that a new or revised apprenticeship framework meets the requirements set out in specification of apprenticeships standards, subject to these requirements being satisfied, the framework is issued. A Welsh Issuing Authority is accountable to the Welsh Ministers and is required to comply with directions and have regard to guidance given by them.
- 3.319 Section 38 of the 2009 Act requires the Welsh Ministers to specify, by order, the particular sectors to which apprenticeship frameworks must relate. At any one time only one person can be designated as an issuing authority for any one sector, and an apprenticeship framework must relate to a particular sector.
- 3.320 Apprentices must sign an apprenticeship agreement with their employer before the apprenticeship begins. The apprenticeship agreement is a document stipulating the framework being followed and the skill, trade or occupation the apprentice is working in. Section 32 of the 2009 Act, and the regulations made under that section provides that an apprenticeship agreement means an agreement in relation to which each of the conditions in section 32(2) is satisfied. Without this agreement, an apprenticeship completion certificate may be refused by the certifying authority.

Case for change

- 3.321 The Welsh Government intends to develop an apprenticeship system for Wales that is responsive to the needs of learners, the economy and employers.
- 3.322 Demand for apprenticeships is changing as employers demand skills at higher levels and young people look towards work-based training and apprenticeships, as an alternative to traditional full-time undergraduate provision. Apprenticeships are now extending into new professions which offer an opportunity to enhance the esteem of apprenticeships for a new generation. At the same time, traditional training programmes funded by employers are being rebadged as 'apprenticeships', driven by demand from levy paying employers.
- 3.323 Apprenticeships are being increasingly aligned to broader workforce skills programmes where flexible training routes are being developed to meet sector needs. Apprenticeships are also having to respond flexibly to changing technology and market needs. There is a risk that if the apprenticeships do not remain relevant, employers will no longer value them.
- 3.324 Employers, further education colleges and apprenticeship providers increasingly want to influence the content of apprenticeships; this is particularly the case for apprenticeship levy paying employers in highly technical and creative industries. More influence over what is delivered under the apprenticeship programme is desired, and the apprenticeship system needs to be able to respond in a timely and flexible manner.
- 3.325 The current arrangements for apprenticeship development inadvertently constrains innovative training and flexible design. Apprenticeship frameworks are unduly complex and long; for example, they can include many qualifications, which can be brought together in a number of combinations to 'design' an apprenticeship training programme.
- 3.326 An apprenticeship system which stimulates providers to deliver the type of apprenticeships that employers want, and encourages more technical higher level apprenticeships is required. Arrangements need to be centred on the needs of Welsh employers and be flexible enough to meet those needs, whilst ensuring portability across the UK.
- 3.327 Against this backdrop the Welsh Government is seeking to develop a responsive and streamlined system that can adapt to differing economic and social stimulus and be calibrated to meet skills challenges. This is an opportunity to design a Welsh solution and develop a permanent and sustainable vehicle for articulating employer demand, which will enable alignment of planning and development of apprenticeships, post-16 technical education and workforce training.
- 3.328 Non-statutory measures are already being put in place to improve the existing system. These includes the Wales Apprenticeship Advisory Board which was established in April 2018. As an independent enterprise led Board, with representatives from business, trade unions, further education bodies and the Welsh Government, this Board serves to provide advice and recommendations on matters relating to the content of apprenticeship frameworks and priorities in relation to their development in Wales. Informed by input from Regional Skills Partnerships, this is intended to help improve the scope and impact of the apprenticeship offer in Wales.

- 3.329 Qualifications Wales is also a part of the mechanism for improving the quality and reach of the apprenticeship programme, ensuring that qualifications contained in apprenticeships meet employer and apprentice needs.
- 3.330 The Welsh Minister's policy intention in respect of apprenticeships cannot though be fully delivered through refinement of the existing system. The underpinning legislative framework was not designed with Wales in mind and cannot deliver the apprenticeship system the Welsh Government is now seeking to implement.
- 3.331 The current legislative framework:
- is based on arrangements which are too heavily dependent on a system put in place by the UK Government, which does not cater to the distinct needs of the Welsh economy and Welsh society;
 - provides for a specification of apprenticeship standards in Wales which is not sufficiently flexible and responsive to the changing needs of Welsh industry; and
 - does not allow for changes to be implemented with the speed needed in a rapidly-changing skills environment.

Purpose and intended effect of the Bill

- 3.332 The Bill provides an overview of what a Welsh Apprenticeship is. An apprenticeship can take place under an approved Welsh apprenticeship agreement, or be an alternative Welsh apprenticeship. The latter is designed to capture what are called non-standard completion situations; such as where an apprentice's role is made redundant during the currency of their apprenticeship; or where they are working other than in an employer employee relationship, such as voluntary work.
- 3.333 To be a Welsh apprenticeship the work element of the apprenticeship must take place wholly or mainly in Wales.
- 3.334 A key feature of a Welsh Apprenticeship is the need for an apprenticeship agreement to be in place. The Bill provides that such an agreement is one where a person works for another for reward, in an occupation where an apprenticeship framework is in force at the time the apprentice and employer enter into an apprenticeship agreement. The apprenticeship agreement must provide for the apprentice to receive training to assist them to complete the relevant apprenticeship framework. The Welsh Ministers may in regulations specify other conditions as to the content of apprenticeship agreements.
- 3.335 The Bill provides that an apprenticeship framework is a document that specifies the requirements that must be met for an apprentice to complete an approved Welsh apprenticeship. An apprenticeship framework is comparable to a curriculum that must be completed in order that an apprentice can complete their apprenticeship, it may contain particular qualifications, and levels of attainment, as well as what type or amount of training an apprentice should receive to become proficient.

- 3.336 To be an approved apprenticeship framework a framework must comply with requirements that the Welsh Ministers specify. The intention is Ministers will have strategic stewardship of the Welsh apprenticeship system, but with its operation and the delivery of apprenticeships being undertaken by the Commission.
- 3.337 Ministers may specify requirements around the occupations to which a framework must relate, general standards of attainment, general types of qualification and the amount of training needed to complete a framework. Requirements may also relate to how an apprenticeship framework is prepared, updated and withdrawn.
- 3.338 The Bill provides that Welsh Ministers will be able to issue, modify and withdraw requirements but they must publish them and include the date upon which they have effect. The Welsh Ministers must consult the Commission and other appropriate persons before issuing or withdrawing a requirement.
- 3.339 The use of requirements moves away from the current approach of the 2009 Act which necessitates a statutory instrument to give effect to the Specification of Apprenticeship Standards for Wales. The Bill will allow for a more responsive and collaborative apprenticeship system.
- 3.340 The Commission will be responsible for preparing and publishing apprenticeship frameworks, or securing others to prepare them on its behalf. Apprenticeship frameworks must comply with any requirements specified by the Welsh Ministers. A key element of the Commission's role will be the active oversight of apprenticeship frameworks by reviewing them, revising them, or withdrawing frameworks as appropriate.
- 3.341 A key facet of this active oversight of apprenticeship frameworks will be a requirement that the Commission maintain and publish a register of apprenticeship frameworks which will be a repository for Welsh apprenticeship frameworks. The register will have to include details of each framework, including when it was published, revised or withdrawn. The Welsh Ministers may via regulations specify other information that the register must contain.
- 3.342 The Commission may issue certificates (and copies of certificates) to apprentices who complete their apprenticeship. Operational details including the process for applying for a certificate, and its content will now be up to the Commission and not the Welsh Ministers. The Commission may charge a fee, but as is currently the case Ministers will specify the maximum amount of the fee that can be charged for certificates.
- 3.343 The Commission will be able to delegate its power to publish frameworks and issue certificates to others. This is designed to enable maximum operational flexibility, and moves away from the current approach of Welsh Ministers determining such arrangements. The Commission may issue guidance or directions to a person to whom it has delegated such functions to, and pay remuneration to such persons acting on its behalf.
- 3.344 The Bill makes provision to ensure that apprentices are made aware of any variations to their apprenticeship agreements that may mean it is no longer valid.

3.345 The Bill also makes clear that an approved Welsh apprenticeship is a statutory apprenticeship and not a common law apprenticeship.

3.346 The Bill provides that where the Commission engages another person to prepare apprenticeship frameworks on its behalf, and with that person's consent the framework is published by the Commission, the ownership of the copyright which subsists in the framework transfers to the Commission.

3.347 The Bill also continues the current approach of allowing those who are Crown servants to be able to undertake apprenticeships.

Part 5 – Learner Protection, Complaints Procedures and Learner Engagement

Learner Protection arrangements

Current position

3.348 The policy objective is to support the implementation of consistent arrangements across the tertiary education sector to protect the interests of a learner in the event of a course or campus closure, a provider failure or a learner choosing to transfer to another course or provider. The main focus of the provision is to minimise the impact of these events on the learning of individuals and reduce the risk of that individual dropping out of learning.

3.349 There are pockets of good practice across the tertiary education sector in respect of protecting the interests of learners if the progress of their learning is disrupted by an event such as a course or campus closure or a provider failure. However, there is a need for a consistent and comprehensive approach across the tertiary education sector.

Purpose and intended effect of the legislation

3.350 The Bill provides that learner protection arrangements will be set out in learner protection plans. A learner protection plan is defined in the Bill as a document setting out the tertiary education provider's arrangements for:

- protecting the interests of persons undertaking a relevant course in the event of the course ceasing to be provided for any reason; and
- supporting a person who is undertaking a relevant course of tertiary education provided by or on behalf who wishes to transfer to another course of tertiary education (whether that course is provided by, or on behalf of, the tertiary education provider or another person).

3.351 Provision has been included to enable the Commission to give notice to a tertiary education provider asking it to submit a learner protection plan to the Commission on or before the date specified in the notice. For the purpose of this a "relevant course" is defined as any course provided by or on behalf of a registered providers or where the provider is not registered, a course of tertiary education (higher education, further education and training or apprenticeship) provided by it, or on its behalf, which is funded by the Commission.

- 3.352 Discretion is provided to the Commission to determine which providers will be required to submit a learner protection plan to reduce the possibility of providers being required to develop a plan where it is not appropriate or proportionate for them to do so.
- 3.353 The Commission will not provide notice to a local authority to submit a learner protection plan in relation to school sixth form provision. Arrangements are in place to secure the transfer of data about pupils when they move from one school to another, whether due to a school or course closure, a change in personal circumstances or pupil preference. Although the learner protection provisions do not apply to local authorities in relation to school sixth forms, as they have their own arrangements, it would be helpful for the Commission to consult with them when the guidance is developed so that they can be involved in sharing good practice.
- 3.354 The requirement to have approved learner protection plans in place, following notice from the Commission, will be a registration condition, a mandatory contractual term or condition of funding depending on the provider's relationship with the Commission.
- 3.355 Provision has been included in the Bill to enable the Commission to establish arrangements for the development and approval of learner protection plans. The Commission will be required to issue guidance on the preparation and revision of learner protection plans. In preparing the guidance the Commission must consult with such persons as the Commission considers appropriate. This would include consulting with local authorities and school sixth forms.
- 3.356 It is intended that a proportionate approach is adopted in the development of learner protection plans, which does not result in additional unnecessary burden for providers. Learner protection plans would be in a format appropriate to the provider and its structures, and could be incorporated into other documents where appropriate.
- 3.357 The Commission may approve a learner protection plan with or without modifications. If the Commission is not satisfied that a plan meets the appropriate criteria for approval it is expected that the Commission would enter into dialogue with the provider to resolve any issues of concern. In the unlikely event that agreement cannot be reached between the Commission and the provider on the content of a plan, the Commission may approve a plan with or without modifications. Where a tertiary education provider wishes to amend its approved learner protection plan, they must send a revised plan to the Commission, and the Commission may approve a revised learner protection plan with or without modifications.
- 3.358 Provision is included in the Bill to require the Commission to monitor the effectiveness of learner protection plans and include in its annual report of learner protection plans during the financial year to which the report relates.

Arrangements for addressing learner complaints

Current position

- 3.359 Currently only higher education students are able to refer their unresolved complaint to an independent body. The 2004 Act allows for the designation of a body to operate a student complaints scheme. The Office of the Independent Adjudicator is the designated body for handling unresolved student complaints in higher education in England and Wales. The Office of the Independent Adjudicator's role currently extends to 'qualifying institutions' defined under the 2004 Act.

Purpose and intended effect of the legislation

- 3.360 The policy objective is to ensure that providers have clear policies and procedures in place to enable a learner to make a complaint regarding their learning experience and that these are communicated effectively to an independent body.
- 3.361 A duty has been placed on the Commission to take such steps as appear to it appropriate to ensure that a tertiary education provider has in place a procedure for investigating complaints about an act or omission of the provider; made by persons who are undertaking or have undertaken relevant courses and takes reasonable steps to make the procedure known to persons undertaking relevant courses.
- 3.362 For the purpose of these provisions, a "relevant course" is defined as any course provided by or on behalf of a registered provider or where the provider is not registered, a course of tertiary education (higher education, further education and training or apprenticeship) provided by the provider, or on its behalf which is funded by the Commission.
- 3.363 A "tertiary education provider" is defined as a registered provider or a person other than a registered provider in receipt of financial resources provided or secured by the Commission in respect of higher education, further education and training or apprenticeships. The definition does not include school sixth forms as robust well-established learner complaint arrangements already in place underpinned by legislation for schools. However, it would be beneficial to broaden consultation with local authorities and school sixth forms in relation to learners aged 16 or above, to encourage these learners to take more of an active participation in the quality of their learning experience (rather than their parents, who are, in most cases, the complainant in raising complaints in sixth forms).
- 3.364 Provision has been included that enables Welsh Ministers to make regulations specifying, as a qualifying institution for the purposes of the student complaint scheme:
- a registered provider or
 - a provider that is not registered and is in receipt of financial resources from the Commission.
- although the Welsh Ministers will not be able to specify local authorities in relation to school sixth form provision.
- 3.365 This will enable providers to be brought into the scheme gradually, allowing time for the Office of the Independent Adjudicator and individual providers build their capacity.

Learner engagement code

Background

- 3.366 The Hazelkorn report identified that the post compulsory education and training system was not sufficiently learner focussed. Subsequent consultations and policy development supported the need to strengthen the provision for learner voice than is currently available and ensure a more joined up approach to learner engagement.
- 3.367 Proposals to address this area will affect Post 16 learners and tertiary education providers. A tertiary education provider is defined as a provider that is registered with the Commission or in receipt of funding from the Commission in relation to higher education, further education and training of apprentices.
- 3.368 To bring all post-16 educational providers together under one body to improve learner representation across the sector, ensuring learners have an equal voice in how they learn, how they are taught and they receive value for money.
- 3.369 The legislation is intended to influence the Commission to promote collaboration between providers and strengthen links with others. This should result in enhanced support for learners, including clearer learning pathways and better information on the options available.

Purpose and intended effect of the legislation

- 3.370 The Bill provides for there to be learner representation on the board of the Commission. It is intended that this will mean learner views from across the student population within Wales are represented.
- 3.371 The Commission will have a duty to develop, consult and publish a Learner Engagement Code, intended to ensure the interests of learners are effectively represented in making decisions made by the provider about matters that may be of interest to learners. The Code should allow learners the opportunity to participate and have the opportunity to give their views to the provider about the education and training they receive.
- 3.372 In carrying out these functions the policy intention is that:
- there will need to be a transition period (to be determined), to allow the Commission to develop the code and to allow time before the requirement for learning providers to sign up commences.
 - the Code may make a different provision for different purposes and different providers, although each provider will need to maintain the same level of learner engagement.
 - the Code will need to allow for a degree of proportionality. For example, it would not be expected that providers delivering one day courses would need to provide the same extent and evidence of engagement with learners as those providing longer term courses.
 - the Commission will be required to ensure that all tertiary education providers as defined in the Bill, sign up and adhere to the Learner Engagement Code.
 - the Learner Engagement Code will be mandatory, ongoing registration condition or part of terms and condition of funding (depending on the provider's relationship with the Commission).

- provision is included in the Bill to require the Commission to monitor the effectiveness of Learner Engagement Codes and include in its annual report any conclusions of Learner Engagement Codes during the financial year to which the report relates.

Part 6 - Information, Advice and Guidance

Background

- 3.373 In 'Maximising the Contribution of the Post-Compulsory Education and Training System to the Achievement of Welsh National Goals', published in April 2018, Professor Harvey Weingarten outlines that the current monitoring system lacks a process for tying together the various pieces of information already collected, in order to understand the performance of the system as a whole and the contribution of individual providers to meeting strategic objectives and targets.
- 3.374 The White Paper consultation and the technical consultation explored whether the new Commission should take ownership of datasets currently owned by the Welsh Government and other agencies, such as HEFCW, and whether a duty should be placed upon learning providers/examining bodies to share data about learners' characteristics and attainment, and if there were any further powers, duties or other matters that should be considered in developing proposals for these functions further.
- 3.375 The majority of respondents across all the existing sectors agreed that the new Commission should take ownership of all datasets. They felt that this would provide an opportunity to review the existing provision, ensuring there is robust evidence on which to base decision making and it was also seen as an opportunity to review the collection of this data as a whole to ensure that the quality of the data and the comparability of data across all sectors.
- 3.376 There was general agreement in all sectors that a duty should be placed on providers to monitor and share this data with the Commission, however, it was noted that this duty should avoid increasing providers' workload.

Information sharing

- 3.377 In order for the Commission to carry out its role in relation to the tertiary education sector in Wales, to oversee its work and performance, to set and monitor its strategic and operational priorities, and to distribute funds in accordance with its statutory responsibilities, the Commission will need to collect and use information from across the sector. In addition, the Commission will have a strategic role in influencing learning providers' data, statistics and research responsibilities.
- 3.378 In order to achieve these policy objectives, the Bill includes provision in relation to the providing of information, advice and guidance. This includes:
- a duty on the Commission to give advice and information on request of the Welsh Ministers and power to do so;
 - a power for the Welsh Ministers to give information to the Commission;
 - a duty for certain tertiary education providers and other bodies to give information on request to the Commission;

- power for various public bodies to share information with the Commission;
- a duty to share information relating to applications for admission to higher education courses.

3.379 The Bill provides for the Commission to share information with the Welsh Ministers, other specified person and administrative/public bodies, together with any other person it considers appropriate.

3.380 The Bill provides for the Commission to be a devolved authority for the purposes of section 91(3) of the Education and Skills Act 2008. This allows the Commission, alongside the Welsh Ministers, to access certain information held by the Secretary of State and HMRC.

3.381 In relation to information sharing, it is intended that the Commission will be a public authority for the purposes of the Data Protection Act 2018, and as such will be required to be compliant with the provisions of that Act as well as the General Data Protection Regulations. In doing so the Commission will need to ensure that any data requested, held, used, shared etc. is in relation to the carrying out of the Commissions functions.

3.382 The Welsh Ministers or the Commission will be able to carry out, or secure the provision of funding for, research in relation to education and training in Wales, including any matter connected to education and training. The result of such research may then be published, provided no individual can be identified from the publication.

3.383 The Bill also provides for the Welsh Ministers to be able to require “application-to-acceptance” information from organisations, such as UCAS, who provide admissions services to Welsh higher education providers, for qualifying research purposes. The Welsh Ministers can request the information be shared with the Welsh Ministers the Commission or an approved person. Application-to-acceptance information relates to applications for admission to higher education courses provided by higher education providers in Wales, offers and rejections, and acceptance of such offers.

3.384 The Bill allows for this information to be used to inform “qualifying research”, which means research in relation to:

- choices available in higher education in Wales;
- consideration of offers;
- equality of opportunity; and
- other topics approved by the Welsh Ministers.

3.385 This information is intended to help inform the strategic priorities of the Commission, and future policy.

3.386 To protect this information, an approved body may give information obtained under section 129 (application to acceptance information) to an approved researcher, but an approved researcher must not pass the information on to another approved researcher or another approved body. An “approved person” is a body approved by the Welsh Ministers to receive this information for research purposes (“approved body”) or an individual approved by the Welsh Ministers or an approved body (“approved researcher”).

3.387 The Welsh Ministers, the Commission and an approved person may publish the product of research carried out using application-to-acceptance information, provided that:

- a purpose of publishing is to provide statistical information;
- no individual may be identified; and
- no information that may be regarded as commercially sensitive is published.

3.388 The Bill also requires the Commission to identify good practice in relation to data sharing by the persons and bodies it funds or regulates: for example by issuing guidance dealing with IT systems and information security. The Commission will be able to review and update or replace its guidance as and when it considers necessary.

3.389 It is also intended that the Commission will be an official statistical body.

Part 7- Miscellaneous and General

Higher Education Corporations in Wales

3.390 In 2015, the Law Commission undertook a consultation on Technical Issues in Charity Law as part of its Charity Law: Selected Issues project. This looked at a number of proposed technical changes to charity law and included proposals relating to the way higher education institutions, and charities more widely amend their governing documents. These proposals were geared towards streamlining and simplifying the procedures for amending governing documents.

3.391 The Law Commission's final report was published in September 2017¹ and, amongst other recommendations, made specific recommendations in respect of the amendment of governing documents for higher education institutions in Wales.

3.392 The recommendations relating to higher education institutions in Wales supported the retention of the approach to the amendment and simplification of higher education institutions' governing documents that was set out in the Welsh Government's 2006 guidance to universities in Wales². However, the Law Commission's final report identified problems in relation to the application of the guidance for higher education corporations as a result of the statutory requirements placed on their governing documents under Education Reform Act 1988 ("the 1988 Act"). The Law Commission considered that these statutory requirements created a barrier for higher education corporations and prevented them from carrying out an overhaul of their governing documents in accordance with the 2006 guidance in a similar manner to chartered universities.

3.393 As a result, the Law Commission recommended that the current statutory requirements placed on higher education corporation governing documents under the 1988 Act be removed so that the guidance could be applied in the same way to all higher education institutions regardless of their constitutional underpinnings.

¹ The Law Commission | Technical Issues in Charity Law

² Deregulating Higher Education Institutions' governance arrangements

- 3.394 The technical consultation set out the Welsh Government's support for the broad approach recommended by the Law Commission. In particular, the technical consultation sought stakeholder views on the removal of the current legislative requirements in the 1988 Act that apply to higher education corporation governing documents, in order to address the issues identified by the Law Commission in respect of the application of 2006 guidance for these bodies.
- 3.395 Amongst those stakeholders responding to the technical consultation, there was general opposition to the removal of the current statutory requirements placed on the contents of higher education corporation governing documents at the same time as progressing the wider reforms. The majority of higher education respondents were of the view that arrangements for amending governing documents should not be changed at this stage but felt that this could be revisited once the Commission was established and operational and should be subject to a full and proper consultation.
- 3.396 As a result of the feedback received from stakeholders, it was decided that the proposal to remove the current statutory requirements placed on the governing documents of higher education corporations in Wales, in accordance with the Law Commission's recommendation, would not be taken forward at this time. Instead, provision has been made in the Bill that would allow this proposal to be revisited at a later date in full consultation with the Commission, the higher education sector and other relevant stakeholders.
- 3.397 To enable future consideration of this matter, the Bill makes amendments to the 1988 Act that will extend the Welsh Ministers existing powers to amend or repeal certain requirements placed on the contents of higher education corporation governing documents under the 1988 Act via order.
- 3.398 Currently, the Welsh Ministers order making powers under the 1988 Act only apply to a limited number of the requirements placed on higher education corporation governing documents under Schedule 7A of that Act. These are the requirements under paragraphs 3 to 5 and paragraph 11 of the Schedule. This means that any future changes to those requirements that are outside the scope of the current powers could not be made in the same way or to the same timeframe as they would be subject to a separate legislative process.
- 3.399 The provisions in the Bill will address this by extending the Welsh Ministers current order making powers so that they apply to all of the statutory requirements placed on higher education corporation governing documents under Schedule 7A, with the exception of paragraph 1, and to those requirements under section 125(2) to (4) of the 1988 Act.
- 3.400 This will allow future changes to any or all of the statutory requirements within the scope of the new extended powers to be considered and taken forward in the same way via statutory order made by the Welsh Ministers. This will provide a more consistent and responsive approach that will allow any future changes that are considered necessary to be made more quickly than is the case under current arrangements.
- 3.401 The provisions in the Bill will provide an effective way to address the type of situation identified by the Law Commission in its final report by enabling the removal of potential barriers faced by higher education corporations in applying guidance or changing good governance best practice as a result of the current legislative requirements placed on their governing documents. In particular, the provisions will provide a means to revisit and, if considered appropriate, take forward the proposals set out in the technical consultation in relation to the removal of current statutory requirements for higher education corporation governing documents, in line with the Law Commission's recommendation, at a time when the Bill has been implemented and the Commission's assurance and regulatory arrangements for higher education governance are known.

- 3.402 The Bill places the Welsh Ministers under a duty to consult the Commission and any other persons they consider appropriate before bringing forward an order to amend or repeal the statutory requirements placed on the governing documents of a higher education corporation. This will ensure that the Commission, the Welsh higher education sector and any other relevant stakeholders are fully consulted in respect of any proposed changes before they are made. Orders made by the Welsh Ministers under these powers will also be subject to scrutiny by the Senedd.

Welsh Ministers' powers to dissolve a Higher Education Corporation in Wales

- 3.403 Currently, section 128 of the ERA 1988 enables the Welsh Ministers, by order, to dissolve a higher education corporation and transfer its property, rights and liabilities to any person appearing to the Welsh Ministers to be wholly or mainly engaged in the provision of educational facilities or services of any description; any body corporate established for purposes which include the provision of such facilities or services; HEFCW; or the Welsh Ministers.
- 3.404 There are no equivalent powers for the Welsh Ministers to dissolve a university in Wales established under Royal Charter. In Wales, a university's Royal Charter may be revoked by exercise of Her Majesty's prerogative where the charter is surrendered to the Crown or by primary legislation where the charter is revoked and the corporation dissolved.
- 3.405 The Welsh Government consider it necessary to retain the Welsh Ministers' power to dissolve a higher education corporation in circumstances where a request has not been made by the institution itself. Therefore, the Bill does not provide any changes of substance to the existing provisions under section 128 of the 1988 Act.
- 3.406 Should the power to dissolve only be exercisable at the request of the institution as is now the case in England, there is a risk that in certain circumstances no such request would be made by the higher education corporation. In such a scenario, the Welsh Ministers would not be able to dissolve the institution or transfer its assets and liabilities. This would mean the statutory corporation would remain on the statute book and would require an Act of Parliament or of the Senedd to remove it. The Welsh Government do not consider this to be a desirable position.

Consultation about careers services

- 3.407 Some responses to the consultation on the Draft Bill (see Chapter 4) indicated that the Commission should have a clearly defined role in supporting careers information, advice and guidance for the post 16 sector, which should be impartial, consistent and collaborative and avoid duplication.

- 3.408 The Bill has been amended to include a duty for the Welsh Ministers to consult the Commission when exercising their powers to secure careers advice under sections 8 and 9 of the Employment and Training Act 1973. As it currently stands Careers Wales is the body responsible for delivering careers information, advice and guidance to schools and to support further education and training on behalf of the Welsh Ministers.
- 3.409 This policy approach, and legislative change, will encourage partnership and collaborative working between Welsh Ministers, the Commission and Careers Wales, to improve the quality of careers information, advice and guidance and reduce the likelihood of duplication and overlap.

Chapter 4. Consultation

Towards 2030: A framework for building a world-class post-compulsory education system for Wales

- 4.1 In 2016, Professor Hazelkorn published her review “Towards 2030: A framework for building a world-class post-compulsory education system for Wales”³ which examined the oversight of post-compulsory education and training in Wales.
- 4.2 There were two primary recommendations in the review:
- (a) the Welsh Government should develop an overarching vision for post-compulsory education and training sector; and
 - (b) the Welsh Government should establish a new arm’s length body responsible for the oversight, strategic direction and leadership of the sector.

White Paper: Public Good and a Prosperous Wales – Building a reformed PCET system

- 4.3 Following these recommendations, the Welsh Government launched a White Paper “Public Good and a Prosperous Wales – Building a reformed PCET system”⁴, in June 2017 setting out high-level proposals for reform of the post-compulsory education and training system in Wales.
- 4.4 This included the establishment of the Commission, which would be responsible for higher and further education, work-based learning and adult learning. The decision as to whether sixth forms would fall under the remit of the Commission was still to be decided.

- 4.5 In addition to the written consultation, the Welsh Government hosted three roadshows around Wales where key stakeholders fed in their views and issues in a workshop format. The learner voice was considered at special sessions and also within two Skills Cymru events, with some young people under 16 also taking part and offering their views in response to key questions.
- 4.6 The written consultation received 92 responses, with the stakeholder events accommodating a total of 214 delegates with circa 165 learners from across the various sectors.
- 4.7 A specific consultation aimed at young people and protected groups was also commissioned. This consisted of 13 interactive workshops across Wales, gathering views from almost 200 learners.
- 4.8 Overall, the responses suggested that learning providers, institutions and learners broadly supported the proposals for reform.

Technical consultation – Public Good and a Prosperous Wales – the next steps

- 4.9 In April 2018 the Welsh Government published “Public Good and a Prosperous Wales - the next steps”⁵ to consult on a set of detailed proposals for the reform of the post compulsory education and training system in Wales, including technical proposals for the shape and operation of the new Commission. In addition, the consultation set out the way in which the Welsh Government’s expenditure on research and innovation should/could be overseen and coordinated.
- 4.10 One of the key concepts of the consultation was the need for the future direction, vision and aspirations for the sector to be flexible, future proof and shaped by the new Commission.
- 4.11 The consultation consisted of a written consultation and 19 thematic interactive workshops with individuals and organisations from across Wales. A total of 422 written responses were received.
- 4.12 The responses to the technical consultation remained broadly supportive of the principles for reform including:
 - the need for consistency across the sector and the need for all providers to be subject to similar regulatory arrangements;
 - a clear need for the Commission to monitor and improve quality across the sector and a need to align provision across the sector;
 - an alignment of the inspection regime with the regulatory functions of the Commission to ensure appropriate monitoring and avoid duplication;
 - a need for wider engagement with staff and learner stakeholders;
 - the introduction of the learner protection and learner complaints procedures;
 - a need for stronger regulatory function for the Commission with a range of proportionate intervention options;

⁵ Welsh Government | Public Good and a Prosperous Wales - the next steps

- the need for the Commission to only use dissolution as a route of last resort and that a full consideration of the impact on learners, staff and the wider economy should be considered;
- for there to be longer planning cycles of five years and for planning and funding powers to rest with the Commission;
- the need to publish full data relating to providers and their performance against targets with an alignment to existing public data;
- a direct transfer of funding to the Commission which replicates the current funding system but with an opportunity to ensure a simplified funding system which worked across the sector, allows a light touch approach to terms and conditions and allows for a direct link to outcome agreements and planning;
- a planning and funding system with greater emphasis on employability outcomes and demand-led provision; and
- the Commission should be under a specific duty in relation to the Welsh language.

4.13 A number of areas of thinking included:

- a need for the Bill to allow for a degree of flexibility and future proofing to allow the Commission freedom to operate without being closely aligned to the Welsh Government;
- a need to carefully construct the relationship between the Welsh Government and the Commission, with a focus on strategic priorities and the ability for the Commission to set its own direction with the need for a balanced approach to retaining academic freedom;
- a need for Welsh Ministers to have intervention powers but for these to be carefully considered and proportionate;
- for the Commission to have greater power to provide adequate protection and best serve the interests of wider stakeholders such as learners and staff, with adequate representation of all sectors, staff and learners on the Commission and its board;
- consideration for a complete single registration and regulation scheme across the sector;
- Welsh language should be embedded across all activities given the importance of the Welsh Education Strategic Plan and given the recommendations of the Weingarten review;
- further consideration of the funding model and independence of the Coleg Cymraeg Cenedlaethol;
- in relation to school sixth forms, responses were mixed, but there was a general consensus that there should be consistency across the post-16 education landscape with a clear role for the Commission but for the Welsh Ministers to have a role in ensuring a coherent approach to pre and post 16 education provision and planning in a local area;
- a need for the Commission to have a role in funding ITE provision;
- a need to design the research and innovation funding mechanisms separate to the funding of education and to use terms and conditions of grant or contracts to allow a broad and varied funding mechanism for research and innovation in Wales;
- a need to ensure the funding arrangements do not adversely affect additional learning need provision and funding arrangements;

- if necessary, the need for direct funding for requirements in the national interest, should be administered by the Commission rather than direct from the Welsh Ministers; and
- general support for apprenticeship funding provision to be brought within the remit of the Commission, but for this to be future proof.

4.14 Given the technical nature of the Bill and its limited appeal to the wider public, it was originally not felt appropriate to undertake an open consultation on a Draft Bill. However, in light of the COVID-19 pandemic and the subsequent postponement of the Bill's planned introduction, the decision to publish the Bill in draft was seen as an opportunity to further engage with stakeholders, examine the detailed policy proposals and determine their full impact.

Draft Tertiary Education and Research (Wales) Bill consultation

- 4.15 On the 14 July 2020, the Welsh Government published a consultation on the Draft Tertiary Education and Research (Wales) Bill.
- 4.16 In addition, in November 2020, the Welsh Government also published its vision for the post compulsory education and training sector in Wales.
- 4.17 The consultation ran for 20 weeks, in order to provide stakeholders with more time to consider the Draft Bill, in light of the additional challenges they were facing due to the pandemic.
- 4.18 The consultation contained a series of questions that covered different aspects of the Draft Bill, including a specific question that sought stakeholder views on the Draft Bill in light of the pandemic, and a general question enabling stakeholders to propose other additional levers to support the reform agenda for post-compulsory education and training in Wales.
- 4.19 A number of technical briefings were held with stakeholders throughout October and November 2020 to provide further background and context to the Draft Bill. The briefings were held virtually due to Coronavirus restrictions. Stakeholders were represented from across the sector, and the sessions allowed stakeholders to raise questions to aid their understanding of the proposals, and to assist their response to the consultation. The consultation closed on 4 December 2020. It received 65 responses.
- 4.20 The consultation demonstrated broad support for the new Commission, but also generated some more technical and detailed responses which prompted further exploration of a range of policy and legislative options.
- 4.21 A summary of the responses to the Draft Bill consultation was published on 25 February 2021.
- 4.22 Following consideration of the consultation responses and ongoing policy development, a number of changes to the Bill have been made. Table 4.1 sets out the changes made to the Draft Bill prior to its introduction into the Senedd, and the reasons for those changes. The section numbers below refer to the sections of the Bill as introduced, unless otherwise stated.

Changes made	Reason
Part 1: Strategic framework for tertiary education and research – Commission’s strategic duties Section 2 of the Draft Bill which provided for ‘General duties of the Commission’ has been removed and replaced by nine strategic duties (see sections 2 -10 of the Bill as introduced). The requirements for the Commission’s strategic plan (section 4 of the Draft Bill and section 12 of the Bill as introduced) have been expanded to include a requirement that the strategic plan set out how the Commission intends to discharge the strategic duties	Amended in light of stakeholder responses to the consultation whereby stakeholders highlighted the need for the Bill to provide a clear statement of the strategic direction of the Commission and its reasons for existing. It was considered more appropriate to replace the general duties with a suite of strategic duties, covering the range of matters which the Commission will be required to promote, encourage or undertake. These strategic duties are intended to frame the strategic focus of the Commission and underpin the delivery of its functions.
Part 1: Strategic framework for tertiary education and research – academic freedom The Draft Bill included provision in respect of the academic freedom of providers of higher education at section 2(1)(g) and s2(3), these provisions have been removed from the Bill for introduction. New section 15 of the Bill (as introduced) requires the Commission and the Welsh Ministers to have regard to the importance of protecting the academic freedom of providers of higher education in Wales when exercising any of their functions under the Bill. In addition, new section 16 of the Bill (as introduced) requires the Commission and the Welsh Ministers, when exercising any of their functions under the Bill, to have regard to the importance of protecting the freedom (within the law) of academic staff at providers of higher education in Wales to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • question and test received wisdom, and • put forward new ideas and controversial or unpopular opinions without placing themselves in jeopardy of losing their jobs or privileges they may have at the provider	Amended in light of stakeholder responses to the consultation Responses to the consultation called for clearer and more comprehensive protections for academic freedoms. The new provisions are intended to ensure the duties on the Commission and the Welsh Minister around protecting academic freedoms are clear and comprehensive, capturing all functions they may exercise under the Bill

Part 1: Strategic framework for tertiary education and research – Welsh Ministers guidance, directions and additional functions New sections inserted: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> (a) requiring the Commission to have regard to guidance issued by Welsh Ministers when exercising its functions (section 18). (b) Enabling the Welsh Ministers to give general directions (section 19) to the Commission about the performance of its functions. (c) Enabling the Welsh Ministers to confer, via regulation, supplementary functions onto the Commission (section 20). 	Identified during drafting process and intended to replicate existing powers the Welsh Ministers hold in relation to HEFCW.
Part 2: Registration of tertiary education providers – registration conditions Section 18 of the Draft Bill has been removed from the Bill for introduction and replaced with a more general registration condition, as set out in Chapter 1 of Part 2 of the Bill, together with a strategic duty on the Commission to promote equality of opportunity (section 3 of the Bill as introduced). The provisions of section 18 of the Draft Bill in respect of a fee limit condition have been retained, with some relevant modifications, and are provided for in section 30 of the Bill as introduced.	Amended in light of stakeholder responses to the consultation which indicated that Access and Opportunity Plans (formerly Fee and Access Plans) are too bureaucratic and prescriptive. These provisions have been removed as part of a move to a more strategic, outcomes focused approach, and will provide a more flexible regulatory requirement for the Commission to administer.
Part 3: Securing and funding tertiary education and research – funding of sixth forms The Draft Bill had the effect of enabling the Commission and the Welsh Ministers to provide funding to the governing body of a maintained school in Wales providing post-16 education in relation to further education or training (section 88) or tertiary education through the medium of Welsh (section 93(2)). The Bill for introduction has been amended, through the insertion of a new subsection (4) into both sections, so as to prevent the Commission from providing funding, or making arrangements for a local authority to provide funding, to the governing body of a maintained school in Wales providing post-16 education in relation to further education or training (section 94) or tertiary education through the medium of Welsh (section 100(2)).	Development of an existing policy intention which was not fully realised in the Draft Bill The Draft Bill was not consistent with the policy expectation that school sixth form provision will be funded under specific provisions within the Bill, namely section 98 of the Bill as introduced. However, the policy intention is that the Commission should be enabled to provide funding to the governing bodies of individual schools, or make arrangements for local authorities to provide funding, to support innovative activities.

In order to enable the Commission to fund innovative activities, section 94(5) of the Bill (as introduced) enables the Commission to provide funding, or make arrangements for a local authority to provide funding, to the governing body of a maintained school in Wales that provides post-16 education for the purpose of innovative activities. An ‘innovative activity’ is defined in section 94(6) an activity that: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> (a) in the Commission’s opinion will contribute to the raising of standards of tertiary education, and (b) is described in a document prepared by the Commission and approved by the Welsh Ministers.
Part 3: Securing and funding tertiary education and research – education and training for persons aged 19 plus The Draft Bill, at section 86, required the Commission to secure the provision of reasonable facilities in Wales for further education and training suitable for the requirements of adults 19 years old or over. This provision is retained at section 92 of the Bill as introduced and expanded to include new provision in section 91 of the Bill. The new section requires the Commission to secure the provision of proper facilities in Wales for relevant education and training for eligible persons that is suitable to their requirements. The Welsh Ministers are required to specify relevant education in regulations, whilst an eligible person is a person over 19 years old or over who and falls within the description specified in regulations the Welsh Ministers may make.	Development of an existing policy intention which was not fully realised in the Draft Bill, informed by stakeholder responses to the consultation which included calls for a stronger funding duty for further education and training in relation to adults over 19 years old. The duty on the Commission in respect of education and training for adults aged 19 or over, as provided for in the Draft Bill is insufficient to expand lifelong learning opportunities, particularly in relation to further education and training. The retention of funding duties in the Learning and Skills Act 2000 is also insufficient

Part 3: Securing and funding tertiary education and research - collaborating bodies: consent The Draft Bill enabled a provider in receipt of funding from the Commission, under sections 80(1), 81(3), 88(1), 94(1) and 95(1) or regulations made under section 84, to pass the funding to a collaborating body. For a person to be a collaborating body the Commission must have given consent to financial resources being paid to it by the person receiving funds from the Commission. A new section 105 has been inserted into the Bill as introduced to provide a framework of controls in respect of the Commission's consent for the passage of funds from directly funded providers, organisations or individuals to collaborating bodies under the specified funding powers (sections 85(3), 86(4)(a), 94(3)(a), 101(2)(a), 102(4) of the Bill as introduced).	Identified during drafting process Whilst the Draft Bill required the consent of the Commission for the passage of funds to collaborating bodies it did not set out any requirements surrounding the giving of such consent. The framework of controls is intended to allow the Welsh Ministers and the Commission to protect the interests of students, the proper use of public money and the reputation of the Welsh tertiary education and research sector whilst retaining the original policy intent of allowing a wide range of collaborative working.
Part 3: Securing and funding tertiary education and research and Part 5: Learner protection, complaints procedures and learner engagement – Learner Engagement Code and school sixth forms New provisions have been added at sections 98 and 121 of the Bill (as introduced) so as to require the governing bodies of local authority maintained schools in Wales, which provide education to those above compulsory school age (i.e. sixth form) to comply with the requirements of the Learner Engagement Code.	Amended in light of stakeholder responses to the consultation which raised concerns regarding a lack of parity across the post-16 sector due to the exclusion of sixth form learners from the Learner Engagement Code.
Part 3: Securing and funding tertiary education and research – financial support directions A new section 106 enables the Welsh Ministers to issue directions to the Commission about provision of financial support to relevant persons, where it appears to the Welsh Ministers that the financial affairs of the relevant person has been, or is being, mismanaged.	Identified during drafting process and intended to provide the Welsh Ministers with a power equivalent to their existing powers in relation to HEFCW.
Part 4: Apprenticeships Section 101 of the Draft Bill required the Welsh Ministers to specify occupational sectors for the purposes of apprenticeship frameworks.	Amended in light of stakeholder responses to the consultation A number of consultation respondents were concerned about the division of powers

Section 101 has been removed from the Bill for introduction, with provision instead included in section 111 of the Bill as introduced enabling the Welsh Ministers to specify a requirement in relation to occupational sectors for the purposes of apprenticeship frameworks. Before doing so the Welsh Ministers must consult with the Commission. This reflects the Welsh Ministers' ability to specify high level requirements but not the content of individual apprenticeship frameworks. Under the revised provisions, determination of specific qualifications will be the remit of the Commission, as will the process of certification.	between the Welsh Ministers and the Commission regarding their respective functions relating to Apprenticeships.
Part 7: Miscellaneous and general New provisions at section 136 include a duty for the Commission to be consulted on careers services.	Amended in light of stakeholder responses to the consultation regarding the role of the Commission in relation to careers information, advice and guidance.
Schedule 1: Commission for Tertiary Education and Research Paragraph 11 of Schedule 1 to the Draft Bill provided for the established of the Research and Innovation Wales Committee and for the appointment of the Chair and members of the Committee by the Welsh Ministers Schedule 1 to the Bill as introduced provides for the establishment of the Committee, now referred to as the Research and Innovation Committee, at paragraph 11, whilst paragraph 12 of that same Schedule provides that the Welsh Ministers will appoint the Chair to the Committee.	Amended in light of stakeholder responses to the consultation where the public appointment of the Chair and members of the Research and Innovation Wales Committee was highlighted as a limitation on the independence of the Commission from the Welsh Government and added to further administrative burden.
Schedule 4: Minor and consequential amendments Additional consequential amendments to existing legislation provided for in Schedule 4 to the Bill.	Identified during drafting process

Chapter 5. Power to make subordinate legislation

- 5.1 The Bill contains provisions to make subordinate legislation and issue determinations. Table 5.1 (subordinate legislation) and Table 5.2 (directions, codes and guidance) set out in relation to these:
- the person upon whom, or the body upon which, the power is conferred;
 - the form in which the power is to be exercised;
 - the appropriateness of the delegated power;
 - the applied procedure; that is, whether it is “affirmative”, “negative”, or “no procedure”, together with reasons why it is considered appropriate.
- 5.2 The Welsh Government will consult on the content of the subordinate legislation where it is considered appropriate to do so. The precise nature of consultation will be decided when the proposals have been formalised.

PART 2 – REGULATORY IMPACT ASSESSMENT

Chapter 6. Regulatory Impact Assessment Summary

- 6.1 A Regulatory Impact Assessment has been completed for the Bill and it follows below.
- 6.2 There are no specific provisions in the Bill which charge expenditure on the Welsh Consolidated Fund.
- 6.3 The following tables present a summary of the costs and benefits for the Bill as a whole. The tables have been designed to present the information required under Standing Order 26.6 (viii) and (ix).

Covid-19 Pandemic

- 6.4 While the cost estimates set out in this Regulatory Impact Assessment assume early introduction of key transitional roles and establishment of the new Commission from 2023, it is recognised that the full scope of implications of the Covid-19 crisis for the proposed reforms (including the implementation of the Bill) is not yet known. The development and establishment of the Commission continues to be a priority for the Welsh Ministers.

Tertiary Education and Research Wales Bill
Preferred option: Introduce legislation to – Dissolve HEFCW and establish a new Commission with responsibility for oversight of tertiary education and research (see Chapters 7 to 18 for options appraisal and further details on each options).
Stage: Introduction	Appraisal period: 2021-22 – 2030-31	Price base year: 2021-22
Total Cost £45,034,000	Total Benefits £-	Net Present Value (NPV): -£38,636,000
Present value: £38,636,000	Present value: £-

Administrative Costs

Costs All current costs for management and monitoring of the tertiary education and research sector fall ultimately to the Welsh Ministers; as the direct delivery agent and funder. This includes the duty to fund HEFCW. The Bill proposes that the Welsh Ministers have a duty to fund the Commission. This cost responsibility will include the costs associated with the creation of the Commission and the Welsh Government partnership and policy teams.

Ultimately, the Commission will be responsible and accountable for the exercise of their budget, including running costs, audit and accounts in the same way as any other sponsor body. These are set out in Schedule 1 to the Bill.

The creation of the Commission will cost an additional £45m in running costs over the appraisal period (2021-22 – 2030-31). More detail is provided in Chapter 19 - Costs and Benefits.

The net total cost of £45.0m is the difference between the £153.4m 'do nothing' option, i.e. the continuation of HEFCW and the retention of existing Welsh Minister functions with the associated Welsh Government staff and the estimated total cost of establishing the Commission at £198.5m, as demonstrated in the cost summary table below.

Cost description	Years	Cost (£,000)
Transitional costs	2021-22 to 2023-24	9,949
Welsh Government staffing and associated costs	2021-22 to 2022-23	22,976
HEFCW staffing and associated costs	2021-22 to 2022-23	7,308
Recurrent Commission running costs	2023-24 to 2030-31	158,221
Total costs	2021-22 to 2030-31	198,454
Less: 'Do Nothing' costs	2021-22 to 2030-31	-153,420
Net additional costs	2021-22 to 2030-31	45,034

The costs have been calculated over a 10 year period (2021-22 to 2030-31).

The transitional costs are estimated at £9.9m split across 2020-21 to 2022-23. It is anticipated that ICT and location costs (estimated at £6.7m) will be capitalised, although the final value to be capitalised will depend on technical accounting guidance.

The bulk of these costs are IT costs at £4.9m. Other transitional costs, include:

- redundancy of £2m (a worst case scenario figure from KPMG's work);
- £1.85m on location (including lease, charges such as connection costs);
- £0.93m on early recruitment, salaries and non-payroll costs of key staff; and
- £0.24 on board costs.

The creation of a new body will result in additional running costs necessary to support a new stand-alone organisation and the partnership team within the Welsh Government. Overall on an annual basis the new Commission is estimated to have annual running costs in the region of £20m, compared to the current Business as Usual costs of £15m per annum.

No non-cash costs, such as depreciation, have been included and the cost impact of the provisions on other public bodies is unknown.

In summary, the Commission will cost an extra £45,034,000 (over the 10 year forecast period) to create and will have increased recurrent costs of £4,983,000 per annum over current arrangements. The detailed assumptions which form the basis of the cost calculations can be found in Appendix A to this Regulatory Impact Assessment
Transitional: £9,949,000	Recurrent: £188,505,000	Total: £198,454,000	Present Value: £170,634,000
Cost-savings It has not been possible to quantify any cost savings as yet, however bringing together the funding and payments teams from the Welsh Government and HEFCW may have the potential to create synergies and savings. Until that work has been completed, the creation of the new Commission is not expected to deliver any cost savings. The costs in the box below represent the business as usual costs. These are presented here to demonstrate the basis of the calculation of the additional costs associated with the preferred option.

Other Costs

Indirect costs (costs to other bodies) These costs and/or benefits are unknown at present. It is anticipated that the following bodies and organisations may be affected by the provisions in the Bill and hence, may also incur additional costs or cost savings: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Providers of higher education in Wales; • Providers of further education in Wales; • local authorities; • The Open University; • National Union of Students Wales; • work based learning providers; • Quality Assurance Association; • Estyn; • Education Workforce Council; and • Independent Adjudicators Office.

It has not been possible to quantify these costs as they will depend upon decisions taken by the Commission, any assumptions made by the Welsh Government at this time, in order to inform this Regulatory Impact Assessment, may pre-empt these decisions.

Further evidence and research is planned to help determine additional indirect costs including as part of the post implementation review (see Chapter 22).

However, while they have not been quantified, information about the indirect impacts and consequences is set out in Chapter 19 of this Regulatory Impact Assessment and in the Alma Economics Report at Appendix B.

Key evidence, assumptions and uncertainties

A key cost driver is the location strategy to be adopted by the new organisation. This could have a significant impact on the number of staff who transfer across to the new organisation, as well as the locations costs themselves.

- No inflationary factors or discounting has been applied to our forecast figures
- There is considerable uncertainty around the total cost of creating bespoke data collection software for the Commission, currently £1,150,000 has been included.
- Given the number of uncertainties around the creation and operation of the Commission, a variance rate of around 30% on the forecast figures should be considered.
- Detailed assumptions can be found in Appendix A.

Chapter 7. Options

- 7.1 This chapter sets out a structured appraisal of the long list of options for approaching reforms (see Chapter 3 for a detailed rationale for reform) to the tertiary education sector in Wales.
- 7.2 An initial options appraisal against a set of nine key objectives for reform was undertaken in September 2016 by senior Welsh Government officials. These options were then considered by Welsh Ministers in December 2016 and were presented for consideration by stakeholders during two consultations exercises in 2017 and 2018 (see Chapter 4).
- 7.3 Following an extensive exercise to refine the vision, mission and goals for the Commission and the development of a benefits realisation plan the nine key objectives were updated to reflect this process and new and significant challenges facing the sector, which were not in play at the time of the original options appraisal.
- 7.4 There are five high level goals and 11 high level objectives with associated benefits. These benefits will be discussed in Chapter 19.
- 7.5 The goals for the Commission are consistent with the Welsh Government's priorities for tertiary education, as articulated in the Welsh Government's Strategic Vision. They will deliver a system that is cognisant of the six performance domains recommended in 'Maximising the contribution of the post-compulsory education and training system to the achievement of Welsh National Goals⁶', and contribute directly to the goals set out in the Well-being of Future Generations Act⁷.
- 7.6 The high level goals are for:
- (a) A system that strengthens Wales' economic wellbeing and foundations, encourages enterprise, responds to employer needs and enables a relevant and growing research base,
 - (b) A system that enables learning, assessment and progression through the medium of Welsh,
 - (c) A learner focused system that promotes lifelong learning and delivers effective choice and guidance, and equitable access to appropriate learning pathways and opportunities,
 - (d) A high resilience, integrated, sustainable and responsive system that promotes collaboration, excellence; and regulates with autonomy, and
 - (e) A system supported by collaborative and engaged providers that enhance the communities they serve.
- 7.7 The high level objectives for the Commission, are for the system to:
- be responsive to employer needs and address skills gaps.
 - improve research institutions ranking (currently defined by Research Excellence Framework ranking), reputation and research funding.
 - improve apprenticeship opportunities.

⁶ Welsh Government | Maximising the Contribution of the Post-Compulsory Education and Training System to the Achievement of Welsh National Goals

⁷ Welsh Government | The Well-being of Future Generations

- raise standards for all; improving learner participation, progression, performance and outcomes.
- improve the curriculum offer.
- improve the learner experience and capture the learner voice.
- improve the reputation, agility and direction of tertiary education and training.
- introduce an improved, compliant and effective data collection, analysis and dissemination system that ensures timely, accessible and relevant information about tertiary education in Wales is available for all who need it.
- reduce unnecessary course duplication and competition.
- improve the coherence and consistency of financial and performance monitoring, and quality assurance.
- improve community use of tertiary education facilities and greater connectivity.

Structured approach to options appraisal

7.8 An options appraisal workshop and a series of meetings with key senior Welsh Government officials from Higher and Further Education Divisions, Education Directorate, the Chief Scientific Advisors Office and Legal Services Department, and the Minister for Education's Special Advisor, were undertaken in September 2019 to inform this Regulatory Impact Assessment. The process for re-appraising selected options for reform is outlined below.

7.9 The options appraised (from the 'Business as Usual' (BAU) option and the preferred option (resulting in the bringing forward of the Bill) were:

- (a) Option 1: Business as usual.
- (b) Option 2: Consolidation across the sector, and use of existing powers to modify the duties and responsibilities of HEFCW.
- (c) Option 3: Adopting the approach developed in England.
- (d) Option 4: Centralisation:
 - 4a: Retaining all further education/apprenticeship/local authority maintained school sixth form functions within the Welsh Government and transferring all HEFCW functions to the Welsh Government.
 - 4b: As Option 4a, but with a separate body responsible for research.
- (e) Option 5: Establishing a small scale Tertiary Education Authority (TEA) to absorb most of HEFCW's functions and take on responsibility for certain other functions.
 - 5a: the Welsh Government would retain responsibility for further education / apprenticeships / local authority maintained school sixth form policy, planning funding and contracting. The TEA would be established to absorb most of HEFCW's functions and take on responsibility for regulation and governance of further education, apprenticeships, some aspects of local authority maintained school sixth form delivery and higher education. It would also be responsible for securing external inspection for all of the post16 sectors, supporting leadership development and continuing professional development, dealing with student complaints/appeals, monitoring financial health and research funding.

- 5b: As Option 5a, but also giving the TEA responsibility for developing labour market intelligence and Regional Skills Partnership functions and advising the Welsh Government on the future strategy for tertiary education.
 - 5c: As Option 5b, but with a separate body, Research and Innovation Wales, to oversee research.
- (f) Option 6: Establishing a large scale Tertiary Education Authority (“the Commission”) to take on all of HEFCW’s functions and other functions across the sector.

Options Appraisal and Evaluation Process

7.10 All options were cross referenced and evaluated against the following agreed set of high level objectives outlined above (see paragraph 7.7).

Scoring Criteria

7.11 Each option was evaluated and scored in accordance with the following scale:

Score	Criteria
-1	Option would result in a worsening / weaker position.
0	Option would not achieve the objective / i.e. unlikely to improve upon existing arrangements.
1	Option would partially achieve the objective / i.e. likely to improve upon existing arrangements but significant shortcomings and/or concerns remain.
2	Option would achieve the objective for the most part / i.e. likely to improve upon existing arrangements and only minor shortcomings and/or concerns remain.

7.12 All scores were recorded and following the workshop average scores were produced. A summary table is presented at the end of this section (see table 7.1).

Benchmarking and Impact

7.13 In order to normalise the scores and to measure the potential impact of each option, the ‘do nothing’ option (which preserves Business as Usual) is used as the benchmark position. As such the do nothing option is scored as zero on all counts.

Classification

7.14 Upon completion of the appraisal / scoring process each option was classified as either Discounted, Preferred, or Possible.

- 7.15 The classification of each option is underpinned by supporting rationale, drawing on a detailed analysis of the potential advantages and disadvantages of each option discussed at length and reviewed in each workshop. A comparison of the anticipated benefits of option 6 (establishing the Commission) with the potential benefits arising from other options was also presented and discussed. A detailed discussion of the benefits arising from the establishment of the Commission is provided in Chapter 19 of this Regulatory Impact Assessment.
- 7.16 The outcomes for appraisal purposes identified:
- The extent to which the options support the achievement of the Welsh Government's high level objectives for the Commission: and
 - Whether the options accord with / promote the WFG Act - Key Goals; and the performance domains recommended in 'Maximising the Contribution of the Post Compulsory Education and Training System to the Achievement of Welsh National Goals'- Weingarten Report.
- 7.17 Following the completion of the options appraisal process options 2, 3 and 5 and their sub-options were discounted due to a variety of factors alone or in combination. These were:- scoring low against the high level objectives, not providing benefits across the whole sector or being undeliverable i.e. there would be no political and/or stakeholder support.
- 7.18 Therefore, three options for approaching the reform of the tertiary education sector in Wales are outlined below; business as usual, centralisation and the setting up of the Commission, the advantages and disadvantages of each are presented.

Option 1: Business as usual (Discounted)

- 7.19 This would involve retaining all current structures and functions as they are.

Description of the key elements of this option

- 7.20 A range of organisations, some Welsh-based and others operating within the English or UK post-compulsory sector, oversee and monitor governance, regulation, quality assurance and performance review. The organisations with key responsibilities in relation to post-compulsory education and training in Wales are:
- (a) the Welsh Government,
 - (b) HEFCW,
 - (c) Estyn, and
 - (d) the Quality Assurance Agency.
- 7.21 Local authorities also have a role with regard to sixth form education. Thus, they may make proposals to establish or remove sixth forms, which are subject to approval by the Welsh Ministers.
- 7.22 In recent years there has been a change in the policy landscape. There has been a significant increase in the number of learners, providers and programmes in Wales and an emphasis on mergers, to improve strategic management, increase efficiency and enhance quality.

- 7.23 The Welsh Government has responsibility for policy, strategy and funding of post-compulsory education, including sponsorship of HEFCW. Further education has been directly governed and funded by the Welsh Government since 2006. Although broad higher education policy is set by the Welsh Government, it is delivered through HEFCW.
- 7.24 HEFCW, a Welsh Government Sponsored Body, established under the 1992 Act, is responsible for funding higher education in Wales and for administering funds made available by the Welsh Government to support education and research at universities and teaching by the Open University in Wales. It also funds higher education courses at further education institutions. With effect from 1 August 2015, HEFCW became responsible for certain aspects of the new regulatory system for higher education, established by the 2015 Act. Full implementation took place from 1 September 2017.
- 7.25 A framework document between the Welsh Government and HEFCW sets the context within which HEFCW operates and the terms and conditions under which it receives funds from the Welsh Government. The Ministerial remit letter sets the high level strategic priorities for the Council.
- 7.26 Restrictions contained within HEFCW's founding legislation limit the ability of Welsh Ministers to direct the Council except in the limited circumstances specified in the 2015 Act. The remit letter is therefore the Welsh Government's request to the Council to focus on specific policy aims. The letter is merely advisory, in strict statutory terms, the Council is not bound to comply.
- 7.27 Outside its statutory regulatory role, HEFCW relies on terms and conditions of funding to influence institutional behaviour. This funding amounts to approximately 11% of the total annual budget of Welsh higher education institutions. However, changes in the Higher Education funding regime have reduced the level of direct funding over which HEFCW has responsibility. As more funding is paid directly to institutions in the form of tuition fees, HEFCW's influence has diminished. This has been partly addressed in relation to widening access, quality assurance and financial sustainability, through implementing the 2015 Act.
- 7.28 This will require a strong partnership approach for the Welsh Government is to achieve its broader policy aims. While the statutory duty for quality assessment of higher education in Wales lies with HEFCW, changes are being made that may impact on delivery.

Quality Assurance

- 7.29 Estyn, the Inspectorate for Education and Training in Wales, is responsible for inspecting quality and standards in education and training providers, including schools, further education institutions, work based learning and adult community learning providers. Sixth form provision is inspected by Estyn as part of whole school inspection. As they are not inspected independently, specific judgements on the quality of sixth forms are not available separately to the overall judgements on schools.

- 7.30 QAA, operating under a service level agreement with HEFCW, has oversight of higher education programmes delivered in further education institutions, as well as within universities. Higher education delivered by further education institutions is subject to QAA review. This means that some institutions fall within the remit of both Estyn and the QAA.
- 7.31 The Welsh Government is responsible for planning policy and funding further education, sixth forms, apprenticeships and employability programmes and adult learning.
- 7.32 Local authorities are responsible for planning sixth forms, improving standards and taking action in the case of underperformance.

Research

- 7.33 Currently, research operates under a dual funding system. Research Councils provide hypothecated, competitively awarded funding, on a UK-wide basis, for individual projects. Funding is also provided by an un-hypothecated block grant ('quality-related') which is allocated to Universities to support research staff and infrastructure. This is allocated on the basis of performance in the Research Excellence Framework⁸ conducted every 6-7 years. Quality related funding is effectively devolved and is currently administered by HEFCW.
- 7.34 HEFCW receives funds from the Welsh Government for research, innovation and engagement, the bulk of which is used to fund quality-related funding. HEFCW funds only 3* and 4* research, as measured by the Research Excellence Framework. Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) distributes quality-related funding according to a similar, though not identical, quality related based formula.

Key advantages of Option 1

- 7.35 The Hazelkorn⁹ report found that:
 - (a) Wales has a functioning post-compulsory education and research system, and a commitment to strengthening its role and contribution to society and the economy, enhancing quality and participation;
 - (b) the current system broadly meets learner and societal needs with the current approach working to some extent in that learning is being delivered in the post-compulsory education and research sector and the overall quality of performance is good;
 - (c) coherence between sixth forms, further education and higher education has improved; and
 - (d) there are examples of good to excellent relationships between higher education institutions, further education institutions and work based learning and adult community learning providers around specific initiatives – although this could be described as episodic.

⁸ Research Excellence Framework

⁹ Welsh Government | Towards 2030: A framework for building a world-class post-compulsory education system for Wales

- 7.36 HEFCW's role as an intermediate body is acknowledged by some stakeholders as beneficial. This option is understood by providers and intermediaries and certain sectors may prefer to maintain the status quo. Local authority maintained school sixth forms are well integrated within compulsory education.
- 7.37 This is a low cost option - there are no additional upfront reform costs. This would be subject to the current system being able to mitigate any financial impacts that may result from emerging operational challenges.
- 7.38 An approach is already in place to drive forward quality within the schools sector, which is expected to continue. With the ongoing developments in the curriculum, the outputs of Successful Futures will be taken forward into the key stage 4 and key stage 5 curriculum and teaching practice.
- 7.39 Curriculum for Wales 2022¹⁰ seeks to allow for a broadening of learning, supporting settings and schools to be more flexible in their approaches, and provides education leaders and practitioners with greater agency, enabling them to be innovative and creative. At the heart of this are the four purposes of the curriculum, setting out the aspirations for all children and young people by the age of 16, enabling them to be successful learners, who play an active part in their community and wider society, and who are prepared to thrive in an increasingly complex world.

Key Disadvantages of Option 1

- 7.40 The purpose and intended effect of the Bill are explained in Chapter 3 and cover the policy objectives and specific disadvantages of not reforming the post-compulsory education and training system. However, the key risks are outlined below.

Complexity and fragmentation

- 7.41 Overall, the post-compulsory education and training sector is too complex, with overlapping organisations and duplication of resources and programming, including complex governance, regulation, quality assurance and performance arrangements.
- 7.42 There is a lack of collaboration between different parts of the sector to meet learner needs. Further education institutions and higher education institutions are often focused on their own agendas, with limited evidence of genuine working relationships between them¹¹. There is a risk that failure to reform will not address the lack of joined-up planning between sixth forms and further education.
- 7.43 Consequently, resources could be wasted on regulation, quality assurance and performance management systems which, across the sector, are diverse and complex, and ultimately prevent improvements in quality of provision and the learner offer. With no single organisation with an overview or responsibility for the full range of provision there could be gaps in provision at geographic and subject level.

¹⁰ Welsh Government | Introduction to Curriculum for Wales guidance

- 7.44 Maintaining the status quo would perpetuate the long-standing fragmentation of the system, making it significantly more difficult to implement the Programme for Government.
- 7.45 There is unhelpful competition between sectors seeking to attract the maximum number of learners onto their courses, regardless, in some cases, of whether they are in the learners' best interests. This leads to duplication and gaps in provision. If steps are not taken to reduce unhelpful competition between providers, wasteful duplication may persist, preventing efficient use of public money and preventing resources being targeted towards provision that is needed/priority areas.
- 7.46 There is insufficient connectivity between provision and the identification of skills gaps for future Welsh societal, cultural and economic development needs. Without reform to the way skills gaps are identified and provided for, there is a risk that the burden upon employers of unfilled vacancies and suboptimal productivity resulting from an inadequate labour pool, stands to worsen.^{12 13} This will create negative consequences for prosperity and secure employment within our communities.
- 7.47 There is disconnect and discontinuity between pre and post-16 (16 to 19) curriculum planning in schools and wider. Current arrangements are not effective and not sufficient to meet community and post 16 needs. Although curriculum reform is happening, without consolidation of the sector it may not deliver the required improvements in the 16 to 19 sphere – ergo overall quality of provision will not improve.
- 7.48 There is an inconsistent approach to assessment, evaluation and performance measures across the sector, which causes confusion within schools (see consultation document). Inconsistency is also apparent in terms of practitioner standards (i.e. Qualified Teacher Status).
- 7.49 Issue of sub optimal course provision in both sixth forms and further education institutions may continue to remain largely ignored.

Levers to influence

- 7.50 HEFCW levers are regarded as insufficient to influence universities. In recent years, changes in funding arrangements for higher education have reduced HEFCW's ability to encourage higher education institutions to deliver the Welsh Government's priorities because more funding is now paid directly to institutions, in the form of tuition fees.
- 7.51 The new regulatory system set up under the 2015 Act has helped to mitigate the situation, at least with widening access, quality and financial sustainability. However, there remains a need to strengthen the regulatory oversight provided by the 2015 Act and accountability derived from the 1992 Act - as highlighted in the

¹² City and Guilds Group | People Power: Does the UK economy have the skilled people it needs for the future?

¹³ OECD | Getting Skills Right: United Kingdom

A strategic approach

- 7.52 As detailed in Chapter 3, the Welsh Government has developed a strategic vision for post-compulsory education and training, focusing on meeting the education, training and research needs and aspirations of the people, businesses and communities of Wales.
- 7.53 Sixth forms, colleges, universities, training and adult learning providers are crucial to meeting the key challenges that Wales will face in the near future, including:
- recovery from the Covid-19 pandemic
 - a new relationship with the European Union
 - dramatic longer term technological, environmental, cultural and demographic change
- 7.54 The sector, as currently structured, may not be well placed to reflect strategic Welsh Government objectives and support the realisation of the strategic vision alongside responding to these challenges and others arising from developments in England and elsewhere.
- 7.55 The combined and cumulative effect of these challenges has given rise to concerns about the current and future financial health of providers of tertiary education in Wales. The Commission, when established, will have improved systems for monitoring and overseeing the sector. The Commission will also have system-wide planning and funding levers at its disposal which will mean it is better placed to identify emerging issues and to respond in order to help mitigate the risks of institutional failure and consequent financial risks for learners, sponsors, and the Welsh Government.

Augar Review¹⁴

- 7.56 The UK Government's review of Post-18 education and funding, published on 30 May 2019, is likely to have a significant impact on the financing arrangements for tertiary education in Wales for years to come.
- 7.57 The review proposed a reduction in the full-time undergraduate tuition fee, with top-up grant funding to institutions for economically important subjects (broadly interpreted as STEM – Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics).
- 7.58 Other key recommendations were:
- extending the student loan repayment period from 30 years to 40 years
 - reducing the interest charged on student loans while students are studying
 - capping the overall amount of repayments on student loans to 1.2 times their loan
 - reducing the income threshold for student loan repayments from £25,000 to £23,000
 - reintroducing maintenance grants of £3,000 for disadvantaged students

¹⁴ Department for Education | Post-18 Review of Education and Funding: Independent panel report

- introducing maintenance support for level 4 and 5 qualifications
- a first free full level 2 and 3 qualification for all learners

- 7.59 The UK Government's response to Augar has been postponed several times since the publication of the review, primarily due to Brexit, the General Election and the Covid-19 pandemic. A response is currently alongside the spending review later in 2021.
- 7.60 The Welsh Government would not necessarily have to operate the same fee regime and delivery model as England, but policies operated by the UK Government determine the policy parameters eligible for student loan cover from HM Treasury. A top-up teaching grant funding regime for institutions and maintenance grants for students would be expected to result in a Barnett formula consequential for the Welsh Government. The implementation of these recommendations would have a differential impact across the Higher Education sector in Wales, reflecting variation in subject mix and the extent of provision at a foundation level. Most institutions could stand to receive a modest financial benefit under the proposed tuition fee regime, but one or two could be exposed by their low levels of STEM provision and high numbers of full-time enrolments at foundation level. The key risk for all institutions is the extent to which any cut in tuition fees is accompanied by the recommended grant funding.
- 7.61 The provisional analysis of the implications is based on several assumptions relating to unknown details of the proposals. Assurances have been given by UK Government that a full consultation process is planned (Green Paper and White Paper), followed by a process of managed change. In addition, the capacity for Student Loans Company to implement policy changes not already confirmed is severely limited. In the broader context, the likely timing of any changes would coincide with the start of an upturn in the 18-year-old demographic trend, which may provide opportunities for institutions to increase their full-time undergraduate recruitment. In addition, increases in postgraduate and part-time undergraduate provision are anticipated, following student finance reform, which are also making more Welsh Government funding available to the higher education sector.

Competition

- 7.62 The removal of the cap on student recruitment in England and the reduction in the overall number of school leavers in recent years has increased the competition for students between providers of higher education, further education and apprenticeships. Several universities in Wales have done well in this new environment, where their courses are offered in areas of growing attraction to students, including biological sciences, engineering and technology, social studies and subjects allied to medicine. For some institutions, increased competition has created recruitment challenges.
- 7.63 There has been a general downward trend in the number of 18-year-olds in Wales since 2012 (with the exception of 2015). Over the same period, the number of new entrants into full-time higher education has generally been increasing. The annual growth in new full-time entrants has slowed in the last couple of years but 2018/19 figures showed the increase continued. New entrant numbers could decline by between 2% and 4% annually over the next few years, until the 18-year-old population begins to increase from 2021/22.

- 7.64 The demographic upturn will begin to filter in to the wider tertiary education cohort (starting with 16-year-olds) population from 2019/20. By the time it begins to influence higher education intake, it could coincide with the implementation of any reforms arising from the UK Governments post-18 education review and/or the potential end of any Brexit transition or withdrawal arrangements.

Employability

- 7.65 Probably the most important for most students, parents and sponsors of tertiary education in Wales, is the employment prospects of graduates. Here there are lots of challenges for the future. Artificial intelligence and digitisation, de-carbonisation and an ageing society are going to mean the need for new skills, new combinations of skills, education throughout peoples' lives and a greater focus on provision being available close to home and at work. The current pattern of demand for jobs from employers places a premium on engineering, data analysis and ICT, construction and professional health care. Unfortunately, universities, colleges and apprenticeship providers across the UK have not been expanding their provision in these areas quickly enough to meet employer demands.
- 7.66 The proportion of first degree graduates from universities in Wales in work or further study, six months after qualifying in 2016/17, ranged between 90% and 99% at an institutional level. This range is consistent with those for other UK nations. At a UK level, employment rates are known to vary according to other variables, particularly the subject of study. However, not all graduates are employed in jobs requiring degree level qualifications and employers report unmet demand for certain skills and qualifications within the labour market.
- 7.67 Without reform to the way skills gaps are identified and provided for, there is a risk that the burden upon employers of unfilled vacancies and sub-optimal productivity resulting from an inadequate labour pool, stands to worsen. This will create negative consequences for prosperity and secure employment within our communities.

Learner pathways

- 7.68 The present system is insufficiently learner focused with a lack of clear learning and career pathways for learners of all ages into and through tertiary education.
- 7.69 Learners do not always have the information and advice they need to make the best learning and career choices. The accessibility of the information and advice available is also not reflective of the expectations of a digital age. Significant changes have been implemented and improvements made in recent years, although there is still more work to be done.
- 7.70 Without improvements to learner pathways, particularly between vocational, technical and academic routes, some learners will be prevented from achieving their potential and the much-needed increase in the proportion of workers qualified to a high level will not be realised.

Research and Innovation

- 7.71 In Wales, research and innovation activity is relatively small scale; whilst research performance has improved, capacity for improvement remains limited. Coordination mechanisms and capacity building have taken place and are evolving, but there is more work to do. Current arrangements do little to facilitate research and innovation becoming a more integral part of tertiary education provision – particularly at the teaching level because of the disparate nature of the delivery structures.
- 7.72 UKG invests less in Welsh research and innovation than in the rest of the UK. EU structural and development funds have filled a gap in capacity-building but these are set to be phased out in the coming years. Wales is engaging strongly with the emerging place based agenda in the UK Government and is establishing a common understanding of research and innovation strengths in order to communicate these better externally.
- 7.73 Wales already has research capacity (numbers of researchers and quantity of research funding awarded annually) which is proportionately much lower than in England and there is an opportunity for a more strategic approach to be developed. This will help avoid losing potential research funding coming to Wales at a time when there is well-corroborated evidence that our capacity is already too low.
- 7.74 Additionally, the level and pace of research and innovation decision making under current arrangements is potentially less responsive to changing world needs than if a new external body over which greater powers are exercisable by the Welsh Government, thus facilitating greater coordination and alignment between Government and the new body on research and innovation matters. The Reid report: ‘Review of Government funded research and innovation in Wales’ highlights the need for greater coordination and alignment between the disparate structures that support research and innovation in Wales.

Data collection and knowledge sharing

- 7.75 The June 2018 Weingarten Review of Systems for Monitoring and Improving the Effectiveness of Post-compulsory Education in Wales¹⁵ found that:

‘The most critical and serious deficiency in the current system, is its inability to provide government with what it most needs to know – specifically, a clear holistic picture of the contribution of each institution towards the achievement of the most important Welsh priorities and how the PCET system, overall as a system, is performing and how well it is advancing the country towards its desired objectives. Without this information, neither the government nor the institutions can make informed or evidence-driven decisions about the effectiveness of their policies or programs’.

- 7.76 The current absence of an effective data collection, analysis and dissemination system across the tertiary education sector will lead to a sub-optimal evidence base to inform policy development and decision making at all levels and lead to missed opportunities to improve quality and focus on learner destinations.

Summary

- 7.77 The advantages of this option are outweighed by disadvantages. The sector is facing significant challenges, particularly those outlined under a strategic approach, and, as noted by Professor Hazelkorn, 'a step change is needed' and difficulties may arise in explaining why Wales is maintaining the status quo when England has made substantial changes.
- 7.78 Maintaining the status quo would perpetuate challenges for the Welsh Government in forging a partnership with HEFCW and the Higher Education sector to drive forward its priorities and ensure accountability for its funding. The need for an independent regulator for Wales has strong support, as evidenced by the technical consultation response, therefore business as usual is not an acceptable option.
- 7.79 Business as usual will perpetuate fragmentation, complexity and lack of joined up strategic planning and will not provide a clear line of sight across the whole tertiary education sector. Coherence and consistency of approach is essential for improvement. This option has been discounted and is therefore presented only as a counterfactual to the two options discussed below.

Option 4. Centralisation, retaining all Further Education and sixth form functions within the Welsh Government and transferring all HEFCW functions to the Welsh Government (Possible)

Description of the key elements of this option

- 7.80 This would result in no change for sectors dealing with further education, apprenticeship and local authority maintained school sixth form provision. It would result in significant changes for the higher education sector as it would transfer HEFCW's current responsibilities for regulation, funding, and quality assurance etc. to the Welsh Government.
- 7.81 As the Welsh Government would have direct control over strategy, planning and funding, it would strengthen Welsh Government leverage over the tertiary education sector (and the higher education sector in particular) as a whole.
- 7.82 This option has two variants:
- Option 4a: Retaining all further education / work based learning / sixth form functions within the Welsh Government and transferring all HEFCW functions to the Welsh Government.
 - Option 4b: As Option 4a, but with a separate body responsible for research, namely, Research and Innovation Wales.

Key advantages of Option 4a and 4b

- 7.83 There would be increased Welsh Government control over strategic direction, with the Welsh Government more able to drive collaboration across the sector and ensure a more coherent and consistent approach in the interests of learners, could lead to improved learner pathways, more seamless transitions and better information, advice and guidance. It could also help eliminate needless differences throughout the tertiary education sector through greater simplicity and the removal of layers of bureaucracy.

- 7.84 Centralisation would bring planning and funding together in the same organisation – thus creating (as with option 6) a single line of sight, albeit within the Welsh Government as opposed to being at arm's length. As such, if delivery arrangements for this option were designed along similar lines to the Commission, similar benefits could potentially be realised (see Chapter 19).
- 7.85 This approach would allow greater Welsh Government protection of institutions against the potential challenges of the more market driven approach in other parts of the UK.
- 7.86 There would be the potential to manage all research funding centrally, through a co-ordinating body that is able to defend Welsh interests at the UK level, under a strong, clear and well-formulated national research strategy. The strategy would link the research needs of the economy, society and government with the research capacity within the Higher Education and the industrial research base. There could be economic benefits of research and innovation being a part for everything that happens, including at a teaching level.

Key disadvantages of Options 4a and 4b

- 7.87 The key risk is in relation to institutions' Office for National Statistics (ONS) classification. All institutional units within an economy are classified by the ONS, against a number of indicators, to one of six sectors. Currently, further education institutions and higher education institutions are classified as Non-profit Institutions Serving Households (NPISH), which places them within the private sector. Any changes that increase the level of control exerted by the Welsh Government over these bodies could create a significant risk that the ONS would look to reclassify them, for National Accounts purposes, as public sector organisations.
- 7.88 Such a move would have significant consequences for the Welsh Government and for institutions. In particular, surpluses and losses would become Welsh Government funds and would have to be managed within the Welsh Government education budgets.
- 7.89 Centralisation / ONS classification may also have implications for the treatment of capital – adversely impacting the Welsh Government capital budget, and could significantly affect monies allocated to the Welsh Government from UK government.
- 7.90 The extent to which the ONS risk applies to this option is likely to depend on how much control the Welsh Government would have over higher education institutions.
- 7.91 Primary legislation would be needed to dissolve HEFCW, transfer its functions and set up a new research body, or give relevant powers to an existing body.

- 7.92 A centralisation arrangement such as this is likely to be less flexible and responsive than an arm's length body due to the historic restraints of the machinery of government. This option also has the potential to draw the Welsh Government into the minutiae of institutions' day to day operations. It would not be an efficient use of a Minister's time to be drawn into day-to-day operations of the higher education sector.
- 7.93 If option 4a (full centralisation) were adopted the level and pace of decision making in research and innovation would potentially be less responsive to changing world needs than an external body. This would lead to greater insularity due in part to the lack of external strategic level challenge and machinery of government limitations – reducing the government's ability to be sufficiently agile and responsive to the needs of industry. It would also reduce the ability to position research and innovation as a distinctive face to engage with UK Research and Innovation.
- 7.94 Ultimately a Bill to progress this options is unlikely to pass due to strong opposition and lobbying on behalf of the higher education sector. There would be strong opposition by the higher education sector to the removal of an 'arm's length' body, particularly because of concerns about institutional autonomy and the Haldane principle.
- 7.95 UK Research and Innovation says that “Central to public funding of research in the UK is the 'Haldane Principle'. It ensures that decisions about which research projects to fund are made by experts in the field. However, as government answers to the tax-paying electorate, it is government that sets the overall strategic direction that research should take. The intention is that excellence is the main criterion for investment in research and that it is conducted in the best interests of the country”.
- 7.96 Those aims could, however, be maintained with an independent committee reporting to the Minister, with a well-respected Chair or an independent advisory board set up via legislation.

Summary

- 7.97 The advantages of this option are outweighed by the disadvantages. Whilst Centralisation could potentially realise similar benefits to the creation of the Commission, ultimately the potential risks related to ONS reclassification and resistance from the higher education sector mean that this option has been discounted.

Option 6. Establishing a large scale Tertiary Education Authority, to take on all of HEFCW's functions and other functions across the tertiary education sector (Preferred)

Description of the key elements of this option

- 7.98 This option involves the transfer of powers and agreed functions of the Welsh Ministers and all HEFCW functions to a Commission for Tertiary Education and Research.

- 7.99 In terms of levers, the Welsh Government would set out its requirements in the founding legislation and in the control framework. The legislation would specify the functions, powers and duties of the Commission. The control framework would determine the degree of control and influence the Welsh Government would have over the Commission itself and, ultimately, over the sector as a whole.
- 7.100 It is proposed that the following sectors would be brought together - further education, school sixth forms, higher education, apprenticeships, and adult community-based learning.
- 7.101 All functions currently carried out by the Welsh Government in relation to further education and apprenticeships would transfer to a new, arms-length, Welsh Government Sponsored Body. These functions would include planning, funding, contracting, ensuring quality, financial monitoring and audit.
- 7.102 All functions carried out by HEFCW would also transfer to the new Commission. The entire tertiary education sector would thereby be brought together under one regulatory body.
- 7.103 The Commission would be granted powers to fund research, innovation and the exploitation of these, in line with the strategic plan agreed between the Commission and the Welsh Ministers. The current powers of HEFCW in relation to distribution of quality-related research funding will be transferred to the Commission and a Research and Innovation committee will be established.
- 7.104 The Bill and delivery of associated schemes would transfer the powers and agreed functions of the Welsh Ministers and HEFCW to the Commission.
- 7.105 The Commission would be responsible for tertiary education, research and innovation as follows:
- the provision, planning, funding and regulation of further education, including further education forming part of an apprenticeship in relation to Wales and including the funding of adult (age 19+) learning provided by county borough councils in Wales and part-time courses offered by other providers of further education;
 - funding and regulation of the provision of higher education, including higher education forming part of an apprenticeship in relation to Wales;
 - the funding of research and innovation in Welsh tertiary education institutions and collaborating bodies;
 - the development, issue and review of Welsh apprenticeship frameworks and the issuing of Welsh apprenticeship certificates;
 - the funding and delivery of local authority maintained school sixth form provision and elements of post 16 schools based provision; and
 - oversight and regulation of the quality and standards of education and training in the tertiary education, training and research sector, provided by, or on behalf of, those institutions within its quality assurance remit, whose activities are wholly or principally carried on in Wales.

Key advantages of Option 6

- 7.106 The Welsh Government would have the power to take steps to ensure that the approach of the whole sector reflects its strategic objectives and thereby serves the people of Wales. The proposed Commission would provide greater alignment, long term, between the priorities of the Welsh Government and the activities / outcomes of tertiary education.
- 7.107 There would be a single line of sight with one arm's length body to oversee the whole tertiary education sector, which will improve strategic planning and help to prevent duplication and gaps in provision. The Commission will promote collaboration between institutions / providers and strengthen links with others, including schools and businesses. This will lead to reduced complexity and stronger and more secure national and regional planning. It would strengthen the link between research and education, and the delivery of a tertiary education system that is better placed to respond to macro-changes; to plot paths for learners; and to bring the sector together in a way that provides for genuine life-long learning and skills development.
- 7.108 The Commission would also promote more effective synergies as the body would fund both Further Education and Higher Education.
- 7.109 There would be a more joined up and collaborative tertiary education system that provides clear progression routes / learning pathways and would be easier for learners to navigate. The Commission would provide high quality information, advice and guidance on the learning routes available across the sector.
- 7.110 There would be enhanced support for learners, including clearer and better information on the options available.
- 7.111 The Commission would possess sufficient levers to influence universities as appropriate, this would address the current issues faced by HEFCW.
- 7.112 Establishing the Commission would help address issues around poor data collection and lack of sector wide intelligence by developing a consistent and effective data collection system across the whole sector.
- 7.113 Establishing the Commission would provide the opportunity to implement a consistent approach across the sector regarding investigating complaints and managing appeals, thus demonstrating a commitment to meeting the needs of learners.
- 7.114 With one organisation working to identify skills gaps in the labour force, to create learning opportunities to fill them, and to facilitate access and progression to them for learners, the energy of the whole sector will be focused on optimising outcomes for learners and the economy.
- 7.115 Bringing research funding into the Commission will allow it to effectively monitor the extent to which research is supporting economic growth and opportunities for learners, and to take steps to ensure that no funding is provided for research that does not support these outcomes.

- 7.116 Establishing the Commission would bring the sector together in a way that would allow coherent and comparable quality assurance processes to be implemented. It would enable the collection of data for administration and performance monitoring to become streamlined and comparable, and help ensure a consistent approach to investigating complaints and managing appeals, across the sector.
- 7.117 The creation of the Commission would provide an opportunity to align professional standards and qualifications to practice (teaching at tertiary education level) across Post 16 provision.
- 7.118 This option would also allow for alignment of policy intentions with the 2018 Act for post 16 learners.
- 7.119 Establishing the Commission may also provide an opportunity to address the inconsistent approach to assessment, evaluation and performance improvement across the sector.

Key disadvantages of Option 6

- 7.120 The scale of change could, potentially, be disruptive for the tertiary education sector; transition would need to be carefully managed.
- 7.121 An arm's length body may be insufficiently accountable. Careful consideration would therefore need to be given to the relevant statutory provisions and the nature of the relationship between the Welsh Government and the Commission.
- 7.122 If the statutory provisions within which the new body will operate, and its relationship with the Welsh Government are not sufficiently robust, it may be difficult to ensure its strategic approach reflects Government priorities and that it has the power and authority to deliver everything that is required.
- 7.123 Some stakeholders (further education, apprenticeship providers, and local authority maintained school sixth forms) would be further removed from the Welsh Ministers.
- 7.124 There could be concerns about the possible lack of accountability of such a large tertiary education authority. The Commission would be a powerful new arm's-length body with wide-ranging powers and a significant budget (in excess of £500 million per annum based on current spend in relevant areas). It could prove difficult to ensure that such a powerful body remains sufficiently accountable to the Welsh Ministers over time. The proposals to strengthen legal requirements relating to strategic planning, creating effective synergies as a result of the Commission's responsibilities for funding the whole sector would be designed to mitigate this. However, much will still depend on board level and senior staff appointments to help ensure relationships between the Commission, the Welsh Ministers and Welsh Government officials are positive but robust.
- 7.125 The sheer breadth of the Commission's functions may make it more challenging for government to steer and challenge its activities appropriately. Its functions will be highly complex. To properly hold such an organisation to account will require that the Welsh Government retain sufficient capability within the Welsh Government civil service to help shape policy and provide effective scrutiny across the full range of the Commission's activities. That in turn may raise questions about the efficacy and value for money of moving many of these functions outside of government.

- 7.126 The Commission may not achieve the culture shift required to achieve the desired reforms if the new body consisted predominantly of the staff currently responsible for broadly similar functions. This could be addressed primarily by effective, strong and innovative leadership in the setting up of a new organisational culture.
- 7.127 At this stage it cannot be ruled out that the costs of operating any new system could be more than the cost of current arrangements. As these costs are currently unknown, a comparison between the costs of operating a new system with the cost of the current arrangements cannot be made. However, it is anticipated that a large number of benefits would be realised through the establishment of the Commission (see Chapter 19). Whilst it is difficult to compare the costs and benefits in an objective way a judgement has to be based on whether the additional costs are justified by the benefits.
- 7.128 There is a potential for research and innovation to become the 'poor relation' of education by becoming a funding mechanism for institutions if it is subsumed into the higher education funding route but this will be mitigated by the creation of the Research and Innovation committee and the public appointment of the committee Chair.

Summary

- 7.129 The Welsh Government identified option 6, the creation of a single body to fund and regulate the whole of the tertiary education sector, as the preferred option as this is the only option with the potential to address all of Professor Hazelkorn's recommendations. Responses to the White Paper consultation also indicated strong support for option 6.
- 7.130 Maintaining business as usual would perpetuate challenges for the Welsh Government. Issues of fragmentation, complexity and lack of joined up strategic planning would not be sufficiently addressed and it would not be possible to provide a clear line of sight across the whole tertiary education sector.
- 7.131 Whilst option 4 may be able to deliver a number of the benefits attributed to the preferred option, it would not be able to realise the whole range of beneficial outcomes attributable to the preferred option. Option 6 fully delivers the key objectives of reform to the tertiary education sector and is therefore the Welsh Government's preferred option.

Chapter 8. Detailed options for reform - Governance of the Commission

Current arrangements and the case for change

HEFCW

- 8.1 HEFCW is a Welsh Government sponsored body established under 62(1)(b) of the 1992 Act.
- 8.2 It is the body responsible for the regulation of higher education in Wales, under powers contained in the 2015 Act, and for administering funds made available by the Welsh Ministers for the purpose of providing financial support to providers of higher education in Wales for activities relating to the provision of higher education, research and associated activities. It also provides funds for prescribed higher education courses at further education colleges.
- 8.3 In 2021/22 HEFCW will manage a budget in excess of £213m. Its Chief Executive is the designated Accounting Officer, having a specific responsibility relating to the use and safeguarding of public funds made available by the Welsh Government.
- 8.4 The 1992 Act specifies that the Council shall consist of not less than 8 nor more than 12 members, including the Chair and Chief Executive.
- 8.5 As the statutory regulator of higher education in Wales it has specific statutory duties and powers in relation to:
- Approving and monitoring compliance with fee and access plans and monitoring fee limits;
 - assessing the quality of higher education; and
 - developing a Financial Management Code and monitoring the compliance of providers of higher education with the Code.
- 8.6 It also provides information, advice and guidance to the sector and acts as the intermediary body between the Welsh Ministers and the higher education sector, reporting to the Welsh Ministers on the delivery of the Welsh Government's priorities for higher education in Wales.
- 8.7 HEFCW currently has a Quality Assessment Committee constituted under section 25 of the 2015 Act. Its terms of reference indicate a membership of up to 10 members. As of April 2021, its membership consists of 9 members (including three from HEFCW); two observers and HEFCW officers in attendance.
- 8.8 HEFCW also has powers under section 8 of Schedule 1 of the 1992 Act enabling it to establish a committee for any purpose. The 1992 Act enables the Council to set the number and terms of members and provides for the membership to include persons who are not members of the Council.
- 8.9 Under these powers HEFCW has established a non-statutory Research Wales Committee to advise Council on its Research, Innovation and Engagement strategies, make recommendations (including recommendations in relation to the Council's Research Wales Innovation Fund), engage with stakeholders and consider any matters referred to it by the Council. The Committee's terms of reference indicate a membership of up to 14 ordinary members, to include at least two members of Council. The Committee chair and deputy chair are also Council members. As of April 2021, the Committee has 12 members (of which four are from HEFCW's Council); five observers and several HEFCW officers in attendance.

- 8.10 The Bill proposes that HEFCW be dissolved, and that the new Commission is created with the powers and duties it will require to act as the major regulator and funder for tertiary education and research. As well as the funding and oversight of learning providers across the sector, the Commission needs to be able to respond positively to the changes introduced at UK level, by creating a vehicle to engage and collaborate with UK Research and Innovation (UKRI) on behalf of Wales, to take responsibility for the strategic and dynamic use of public funds for research and innovation.

Partnership Team

- 8.11 The Partnership Team is the main contact point between HEFCW and the Welsh Government. It is responsible for the oversight and performance management of HEFCW in line with the Welsh Government's arrangements for the oversight of its sponsored bodies.

- 8.12 The Partnership Team fulfils the following principal functions:

- Monitoring and liaising with HEFCW with regard to its annual grant in aid budget and its financial position throughout the year.
- Confirming the Minister for Education's policy priorities for the higher education sector through the Minister's remit letter to the Council.
- Monitoring HEFCW's operational and financial performance against business and financial plans and remit letter activities, and advising Ministers as appropriate.
- Assessing and monitoring risks associated with the delivery of HEFCW's key objectives.
- Overseeing arrangements for the appointment of the chair and members of HEFCW.
- Monitoring compliance with the Welsh Government's oversight, governance and accountability framework for Welsh Government Sponsored Bodies.
- Acting as a conduit between HEFCW and Welsh Ministers on the delivery of higher education.

Public Bodies Unit

- 8.13 The partnership team is supported by the Public Bodies Unit, further information on the role and functions of this unit can be found at paragraph 3.108 – 3.110.

Options considered and preferred approach

- 8.14 Chapter 7 sets out an appraisal of approaches to tackling the issues facing the tertiary education and research sector. Given that the preferred option, the creation of the Commission, has been agreed, the governance arrangements for the new organisation must change in order to reflect the new body's changed powers and duties.

- 8.15 A number of different approaches to composing the governance structure of the Commission were considered.

Option 1 - Business as Usual

- 8.16 A no-change (Business as Usual) scenario would only apply if the reform to create the Commission were not taken forward, as the dissolution of HEFCW and the establishment of the new body require a new governance structure to be put in place.

Key advantages of Business as Usual

- 8.17 There would be no disruption to current arrangements

Key risks of Business as Usual

- 8.18 There are no risks specific to the current governance arrangements.

Option 2 – The Preferred Option - A moderately-sized governance board with statutory Research and Innovation and Quality Committees

- 8.19 HEFCW would be dissolved and the new Commission established, with responsibility for oversight of learning and research across the tertiary education sector.
- 8.20 The Bill proposes that the Welsh Government establish a governing board of between seven and seventeen members, to include the Chief Executive, for the new organisation. The Bill will also require the Commission to establish the Research and Innovation Committee (with a chair appointed by Welsh Ministers and the remaining membership determined by the Commission) and a Quality Committee whose membership will be determined by the Commission.
- 8.21 The Chair of the Research and Innovation Committee will be the deputy chair of the Commission.
- 8.22 The Commission will have the ability to create its own additional committees as it considers appropriate to carry out its functions.
- 8.23 All committees would be accountable to the Commission's board.
- 8.24 The Commission relationship with the Welsh Government would be overseen by a Welsh Government partnership team.
- 8.25 Members of the Commission and the Chair of the Research and Innovation Committee would be appointed via a public appointments process.
- 8.26 The Commission's board would be recruited and selected based upon their skills, knowledge and experience, rather than to represent a particular sector. One ordinary board member would need to have experience of and capability in representing the needs of learners in tertiary education.

- 8.27 In addition, a number of advisory board members would be included on the board, via a nominations process. The advisory members would represent a staff member trade union representative; at least one member representing learners in tertiary education and at least two representative members of the wider tertiary education workforce trade unions to represent academic and non-academic staff.
- 8.28 The technical consultation proposed for two learner representatives to be part of the board. Stakeholder responses to the proposals, indicated a preference for learner representatives to act as observers (see option 3 below) to allow the Commission flexibility, and for the inclusion of workforce representation. However subsequently, the National Union of Students (NUS) raised concerns in relation to the role of learners in only an observer role. The preferred approach includes representation from the workforce and also provides for learners as both full board and advisory members to ensure there are adequate representatives on the board to represent key stakeholders.

Key advantages of the preferred approach

- 8.29 Constituting the governance of the Commission in this way is intended to ensure that the board would be composed of individuals with the skill and motivation to improve the whole sector. It would also provide a sound basis for representation of key stakeholders.
- 8.30 A statutory basis for the Research and Innovation Committee would give this area greater prominence, and would provide a vehicle to engage and collaborate with UK Research and Innovation on behalf of Wales.
- 8.31 It would allow the allocation of research funding to be managed in a more strategic and dynamic way than at present. There would be enhanced alignment and cross working between education, training, research and innovation, in part through the pivotal role of the Chair of the Research and Innovation Committee.

Key risks associated with the preferred approach

- 8.32 The Commission's remit would be very broad. A Board membership of up to 17 members to help deal with the variety of business may be challenging for the Chair to manage and obtain involvement and engagement from each member.

Option 3 – a larger Governance Board and a suite of statutory committees.

- 8.33 A third option was set out in the Technical Consultation, which was made the subject of wide consultation during the spring of 2018.
- 8.34 This approach suggested legislating for the establishment of a Governance Board of nine to fifteen members, including the Chair, CEO and learner representatives, and a Research and Innovation Committee of six to nine members.

- 8.35 It proposed the setting in legislation of the establishment of a further seven committees to look at key areas across tertiary education:
- protection of learners needs;
 - addressing the needs of employers, businesses and apprenticeships;
 - Audit and Compliance;
 - Remuneration;
 - Quality;
 - Widening Participation;
 - Welsh Language.

Key advantages of Option 3

- 8.36 Including learner representatives as members of the Board would demonstrate the commitment being made to learners and the Commission's focus on learner needs. Learner representation features within the preferred Option.
- 8.37 Similarly, the creation of eight statutory committees gave each of the areas proposed, additional weight and influence within the Commission.

Key risks of Option 3

- 8.38 In response to the consultation¹⁶, stakeholders expressed the view that including learner representatives as appointees to the Board introduced a risk to the independence of their involvement, and suggested that they should instead attend as observers.
- 8.39 There was also a concern that in option 3, workforce representatives were not included and the Board would therefore not reflect their perspective.
- 8.40 Finally, stakeholders felt that there was a risk that stipulating this large number of statutory committees would create a risk that the Commission would not be able to flexibly adapt to address emerging priorities in future. There would also be a risk that a large amount of resources would be required to facilitate such a high number of statutory committees.

Summary

- 8.41 The preferred option enables the Commission to determine committees that it may require to fulfil its functions. In addition, the Commission, as a sponsored body, will be governed by the Welsh Government Framework Document, which includes the requirement for an Audit committee.

Chapter 9. Detailed options for reform - The relationship between the Welsh Government and the Commission

Current arrangements and the case for change

- 9.1 Currently, as a sponsored body, HEFCW receive an annual remit letter from the Welsh Government setting out priorities for the following year to be delivered through the funding they are allocated. HEFCW issues a Corporate Plan in response to the Welsh Minister's Annual Remit Letter and also prepares an operational plan which sets out day to day priorities.
- 9.2 In Welsh Government there is small team, part of whose role is to manage the HEFCW sponsorship role. The existing functions relate to the sponsorship of an arms-length body, including the preparation of the annual Remit letter, and attendance at quarterly monitoring meetings of the operational plan and funding.
- 9.3 The Higher Education Division within the Welsh Government holds the budget to fund HEFCW through a single budget line. HEFCW are responsible for managing their own running costs, in addition to allocating funding.
- 9.4 Currently HEFCW's remit is higher education and research only. One of the principal policy aims in establishing the Commission is to create a body which is able to deal with the strategic planning and funding aspects of the tertiary education system in Wales as a whole including research and innovation (see Chapter 3).

Options considered and preferred approach

Option 1 - Business as usual

- 9.5 A no-change (Business as Usual) scenario would only apply if the reform to create the Commission were not taken forward, as the dissolution of HEFCW and the establishment of the new body require a new governance structure to be put in place.

Key advantages of Business as Usual

- 9.6 There would be no disruption to current arrangements. HEFCW would continue to fund higher education provision, research and related activities and funding allocated to HEFCW would continue to be managed via the Welsh Government sponsor team.

Key risks of Business as Usual

- 9.7 The current system could fail to take advantage of the opportunity to adopt a more strategic approach to planning and funding the sector as a whole. There is also a risk that the Welsh Government's priorities would not be reflected in the planning and funding of the sector in a coherent and collaborative way.

- 9.8 Currently the mechanism of the annual remit letter doesn't always facilitate long term planning and there is a risk that the business as usual approach would mean this would continue.
- 9.9 There would be a lost opportunity to encourage the entire tertiary education sector to provide sustainability, coherence and effectiveness across sixth forms, further education, higher education and apprenticeships providers.

Option 2 – The preferred approach – Strategy for tertiary education and research

- 9.10 A new statutory duty would be imposed on the Welsh Ministers to prepare and publish a statement of priorities, setting out the long-term overarching policy and strategic direction for the tertiary education sector and research and innovation in Wales.
- 9.11 A related duty would be imposed on the Commission to prepare a strategic plan, taking into account the statement of priorities. The Commission will be required to submit their strategic plan in response to the statement of priorities within 6 months of it being published by the Welsh Ministers. The Commission must have consulted on the draft before submission.
- 9.12 A suite of nine strategic duties would be provided for on the face of the Bill. These would cover a range of matters which the Commission will be expected to promote, encourage or undertake and are intended to frame the strategic focus of the Commission and underpin the delivery of its functions.
- 9.13 The statement of priorities, the strategic duties and strategic plan are intended to form a strategic planning framework which will guide the Commission's investment in tertiary education and research, and the discharge of the full range of its functions in support of the priorities as set out in the Welsh Ministers' statement.
- 9.14 The proposal is to place the Welsh Ministers under a general, ongoing, duty to prepare, publish and maintain the statement of priorities, with the ability to amend or revise these priorities from time to time following future elections or future reshuffles / coalitions. There will be flexibility for the priorities to be amended, however the revisions are not expected to be radical in nature, unless there is a change in government resulting in a change in direction.
- 9.15 It is envisaged that over time the Commission will develop the expertise and the knowledge to suggest possible future priorities for Welsh Ministers to consider.
- 9.16 The proposed way of managing the relationship between the Commission and Welsh Ministers is a novel one, and is distinct from the approach currently used to manage HEFCW. There will necessarily be some similarities within the partnership arrangements; i.e. a framework agreement and a partnership team to support and challenge the Commission, but the high level mechanism for holding them to account and set out in the legislation will be different.

Key advantages of the preferred approach

- 9.17 By providing the Commission with a Statement of Priorities and expecting it to base its strategic plan on those priorities a mechanism is being created by which the body can be held directly accountable for working towards the policy aims of the elected representatives of the people of Wales.

- 9.18 The statement will be published meaning that providers will have a full understanding of what Welsh Ministers consider to be priorities and can plan accordingly.
- 9.19 The fact that the Statement is expected to be valid for the term of a government will enable the Commission to plan more effectively for that period and to provide increased stability for their providers.
- 9.20 Since the Commission will be required to consult stakeholders on the strategic plan, drawn up in response to the statement of priorities, there will be an opportunity for those affected to contribute to the planning process and raise any concerns they may have.
- 9.21 There will be a clear and public 'line of sight' between the Government's priorities and how the Commission envisages providers contributing towards them. This should also make reporting on the delivery of those objectives clearer.
- 9.22 By including strategic duties in relation to the key activities the Commission will be expected to encourage, promote or undertake, these matters will be required to be considered across the Commission's relevant functions.

Key risks associated with the preferred approach

- 9.23 If the Welsh Ministers' priorities change significantly during the lifetime of a government and therefore during the period over which the statement was envisaged to extend, the potential benefit of the longer planning cycle could be lost.
- 9.24 If the funding for the priorities becomes subject to cuts during the lifetime of the statement then the potential benefits could be significantly reduced.

Chapter 10. Detailed options for reform - Welsh Ministers Provision (Welsh Medium)

Current arrangements and the case for change

- 10.1 Funding is currently provided by the Welsh Ministers to support both the development and delivery of Welsh-medium tertiary education. The Welsh Ministers provide funding either directly to tertiary education providers or via intermediary organisations including HEFCW and the National Centre for Learning Welsh (the National Centre) to support the provision of tertiary education through the medium of Welsh and the teaching of Welsh. HEFCW is currently subject to Welsh language standards as specified by the Welsh Language Standards (No 6) Regulations 2017.
- 10.2 The Welsh Ministers also provide funding to organisations including the Coleg Cymraeg Cenedlaethol (the Coleg) to support the development of Welsh-medium tertiary education through activities such as academic planning and promoting and incentivising Welsh medium education.
- 10.3 The Welsh Government outlined its vision to achieve a million Welsh speakers by 2050 in its strategy, Cymraeg 2050: A million Welsh speakers. To achieve this target, transformational change is required across the educational sector. The Commission will have a critical role to play in the context of the following key aims within the strategy:
- Aim 4: Post Compulsory Education
To develop post-compulsory education provision which increases rates of progression and supports everyone, whatever their command of the language, to develop Welsh language skills for use socially and in the workplace.
 - Aim 5: The education workforce, resources and qualifications
Plan in order to increase and improve substantially:
 - The education and training workforce which can teach Welsh and teach through the medium of Welsh;
 - The resources and qualifications needed to support increased provision.
- 10.4 The majority of respondents to the White Paper consultation considered that the Commission should be responsible for Welsh-medium learning in the tertiary education sector. Numerous responses also closely linked the Commission with the Cymraeg 2050 Strategy. The responses to the White Paper consultation reiterated a requirement for the Commission to take a proactive and strategic role in developing Welsh-medium provision. This view was reinforced in responses to the subsequent technical consultation.

Options considered and preferred approach

Business as Usual

- 10.5 A Business as Usual (no-change) scenario would only apply if the proposal to create the Commission were not taken forward, as it is the dissolution of HEFCW and the establishment of the new body requires a new approach to supporting the development and delivery of Welsh-medium tertiary provision.

Key advantages of Business as Usual

- 10.6 There would be no disruption to current arrangements. Welsh Ministers would continue to support both the development and delivery of Welsh-medium tertiary provision either by providing funding directly to tertiary education providers or via intermediary organisations such as HEFCW, the Coleg and the National Centre. Staff working in these organisations would not be subject to any change or disruption. Providers would not experience any significant change to the existing arrangements for funding Welsh-medium tertiary education put in place by the Welsh Government.

Key risks of Business as Usual

- 10.7 The current system could fail to take advantage of the opportunity to adopt a more strategic approach to the planning and funding of Welsh-medium education across the tertiary education sector as a whole.

Option 2 – The preferred approach

- 10.8 It is proposed that the strategic duties to be placed on the Commission will include a duty in relation to Welsh medium tertiary education. This duty will focus on encouraging individuals to participate in tertiary education through the medium of Welsh; ensuring that there is sufficient tertiary education provided through the medium of Welsh to meet reasonable demand; and encouraging the provision of tertiary education through the medium of Welsh.
- 10.9 Whilst it will be a matter for the Commission to determine how it discharges this duty, some examples of how it is envisaged this requirement may be implemented and appropriately monitored by the Commission include:
- planning strategically to positively promote and increase Welsh-medium tertiary education;
 - encouraging providers to deliver, develop and increase their Welsh-medium tertiary education, which could be, if appropriate, by way of Outcome agreements;
 - encouraging providers to plan progression routes so that Welsh speakers can continue their learning post 16 and develop their Welsh language skills and to offer opportunities to use the Welsh language in order to create a bilingual workforce;
 - monitoring availability and take up of Welsh-medium learning opportunities, and any subjects where the demand for Welsh-medium learning cannot be met currently.
- 10.10 The Welsh Ministers will continue to be able to allocate financial resources to support both the development and delivery of Welsh-medium tertiary provision. For example, it is envisaged that Welsh Ministers will continue to provide funding directly to the National Centre and Coleg in the short to medium term following the establishment of the Commission.

- 10.11 The Welsh Ministers will be able to allocate financial resources to the Commission in respect of all categories of tertiary education. The Commission will be able to allocate funding to providers to deliver Welsh-medium tertiary education. For example, the Commission could provide funding for Welsh-medium premiums to offset the costs of providing learning activities through the medium of Welsh. The Bill also enables the Commission to allocate funding to providers to teach Welsh.
- 10.12 The Commission will also be able to allocate funding to persons for purposes connected to the provision of tertiary education through the medium of Welsh and the provision of Welsh language acquisition courses. This could include activities to support the development of provision such as practitioner training, promotion of learning opportunities to prospective learners, developing and sharing learning resources and coordination of learning opportunities across providers. This could also include funding to carry out research in relation to Welsh-medium education and training in Wales.
- 10.13 The Commission will be required to include in its annual report to the Welsh Ministers information on the extent of Welsh-medium tertiary education provided and the extent Welsh was taught to persons above compulsory school age in a given year and compare the provision with that provided in previous years.
- 10.14 It is also proposed that provision be included in the Bill so that the Commission will be within Schedule 6 to the Welsh Language (Wales) Measure 2011 so that it can be required to comply with Welsh language standards.

Key advantages of the preferred approach

- 10.15 Including a duty related to Welsh-medium education within the Commission's strategic duties, will require the Commission to adopt a strategic approach to the planning and funding of Welsh-medium education across the tertiary education sector. The policy aim is to increase the availability of Welsh-medium courses and to encourage individuals to study through the medium of Welsh.
- 10.16 Requiring the Commission to comply with the Welsh Language standards would ensure that it considers the Welsh Language in all of its activities, promotes the Welsh language, ensure that Welsh has an active role in the organisation's internal administration, and that the language is accessible to the public.
- 10.17 Welsh Ministers will continue to provide funding directly to the National Centre and Coleg in the short to medium term following the establishment of the Commission. The Coleg expanded its remit during 2018 to include further education and work based learning sectors which will involve a period of change and development. The activities of the National Centre are distinct and specific in response to the demand by individuals to learn Welsh and to the aims of the Welsh Government in response to Cymraeg 2050.
- 10.18 The Welsh Government considers there to be risk, that if the funding for the Coleg and National Centre was allocated to the Commission, the progress made by these organisations in term of developing capacity of providers to deliver Welsh-medium tertiary education would be lost.

Key risks associated with the preferred approach

- 10.19 There is a risk that Welsh Ministers continuing to providing funding the Coleg and the National Centre may lead to duplication of work and the inefficient use of resources.
- 10.20 The Commission would be expected to work closely with the Coleg and the National Centre to avoid duplication of effort and maximise the impact of interventions. This collaborative working will be reinforced by sponsorship arrangements.

Chapter 11. Detailed options for reform - Registration and regulation

Current arrangements

- 11.1 HEFCW currently exercises a number of functions under the provisions of the 2015 Act. The regulatory framework introduced by the 2015 Act provides for regulatory controls to be applied to institutions in Wales, which benefit from their courses being automatically designated for the purpose of Welsh Government student support at the higher level of fee support.
- 11.2 The 2015 Act enables HEFCW to ensure that regulated institutions comply with fee limits and fair access commitments; make provision for the assessment of the quality of education delivered by and on behalf of regulated institutions; and provide oversight of the financial management of regulated institutions.
- 11.3 A separate administrative system (specific course designation) is currently operated to deal with higher education institutions whose courses are designated on a case-by-case basis at the lower rate of support. Providers subject to specific course designation are not regulated institutions under the 2015 Act, for the most part they do not receive funding from HEFCW (unless they provide part-time higher education courses) and they may not be charities. These providers are designated by the Welsh Ministers under the case-by-case designation policy, which is now administered by HEFCW.
- 11.4 The 2015 Act was introduced in Wales as a response to the changing balance of funding of higher education.
- 11.5 The principal source of funding for higher education in Wales is now tuition fee income as opposed to annual grant funding from HEFCW. The changes in the way higher education is funded have led to changes in HEFCW's responsibilities, with more emphasis being placed on the Council's regulatory role under the 2015 Act. This includes determining applications for approval of fee and access plans, which gives an institution access to higher tuition fee income supported by the statutory student finance system. Tuition fee loans and/or grants are paid direct to institutions via the Student Loans Company and on behalf of learners, under regulations made by the Welsh Ministers.
- 11.6 At present, further education providers continue to be primarily funded and regulated through Welsh Government grant funding, and the terms and conditions attached to this funding. However, a number of further education providers are included within the higher education regulatory system operated by HEFCW for the purposes of their own higher education provision.

Case for change

- 11.7 The proposal to establish the Commission as the body responsible for the planning, funding and regulatory oversight of post-16 education and training in Wales means that changes are required to the current statutory functions of both the Welsh Ministers and HEFCW in this area, in order to confer new functions on the Commission. The regulatory framework created by the 2015 Act will need to be re-outlined in legislation following the planned dissolution of HEFCW.

- 11.8 Beyond the immediate need to replicate the regulatory provisions of the 2015 Act, the establishment of the Commission offers an opportunity to build upon recent experience and learning to develop a cohesive, consistent, and future-proof regulatory system for the entirety of tertiary education. This framework will need to account for the diversity of provision and mission within the tertiary education sector, as well as the diversity of funding streams and historic ways of working with both Welsh Government and HEFCW.
- 11.9 This policy area aligns closely with the Commission's powers in relation to planning and funding (see Chapter 13).

Options considered and preferred approach

Option 1 - Business as usual

- 11.10 A no-change (Business as Usual) scenario would only apply if the reform to create the Commission were not taken forward, as the dissolution of HEFCW and the establishment of the new body require a new registration system to be put in place.

Key advantages of Business as usual

- 11.11 There would be no disruption to current arrangements. HEFCW would continue to fund higher education provision, research and related activities and funding allocated to HEFCW would continue to be managed via the Welsh Government's sponsor team. HEFCW staff would not be subject to any change or disruption and would continue to fund eligible providers. Welsh Government teams would continue to plan and fund post16 provision (other than higher education) and staff currently supporting these areas would not be subject to any change or disruption.
- 11.12 The regulatory provisions of the 2015 Act would continue to operate, including Fee and Access Plans, provisions on quality, and oversight of financial management and institutional governance.

Key risks of Business as usual

- 11.13 As outlined in the Hazelkorn report, there are a number of risks continuing business as usual in the oversight of post compulsory education and training sector in Wales. In regards to regulation and oversight providers, the following risks are worth highlighting from that report:
- Accelerating competition within the UK and internationally, alongside changes in higher education governance in England, pose challenges but also present opportunities for Wales.
 - Insufficient strategic thinking by government or by the institutions, at all levels, leading to insufficient collaboration, lack of critical mass, and too much competition for limited resources with little benefit for Wales.
 - An absence of an overall vision for the post-compulsory system aligned to the social, cultural and economic needs of Wales, regionally and nationally, now and in the future.

- Confusion around the overlapping roles, and duplication of resources, between and across different institutions, between further and higher education, and between different agencies.

11.14 The introduction of the Bill has also presented an opportunity for policy to be revised in light of post-legislative scrutiny of the 2015 Act and stakeholders' feedback on the effects of its implementation. The Government has considered the recommendations of the Children, Young People and Education Committee's report on the implementation of that Act, and has agreed to implement many of its recommendations.

11.15 Any changes to funding arrangements for higher and further education providers, whether initiated in Wales or necessitated in Wales as a result of changes in England, might also require further changes to the regulatory framework. There is a risk that current regulatory arrangements are too inflexible to adapt to future public needs and the future challenges for skills and education in Wales highlighted in the Hazelkorn report.

Option 2 – The preferred approach – Single regulatory system operated by the Commission

11.16 Under the preferred option, the registration and regulatory functions of the Commission will encompass the regulatory relationship between the Commission and providers of tertiary education. In particular, it covers the Commission's powers to regulate tertiary education providers which are designated for Welsh Government student support, the accountability of these providers for access to both student support and also grant funding, and providers' obligations in regards to widening access.

11.17 The following summarises the major points of the determined policy approach for regulating tertiary education providers:

- (a) The Commission will be required to establish a register of tertiary education providers.
- (b) The Welsh Ministers, (through regulations), will be able to specify the categories of registration which must be made. These categories will relate to the categories of tertiary education provider for which a regulatory register is deemed necessary.
- (c) The Welsh Ministers (through regulations), will specify which registration categories will be subject to formal regulation including:
 - fee-limits,
 - equality of opportunity conditions, and
 - eligibility for grant funding from the Commission.
- (d) The Commission will also be able to determine conditions of registration in addition to those listed above, which are also outlined in the Bill.
- (e) All registered providers will be subject to mandatory conditions of registration related to quality, governance and financial viability.

Key advantages of the preferred approach

The merits of registration

- 11.18 It is essential that the Commission is empowered to appropriately regulate tertiary education providers, who might be funded through a range of different mechanisms, including:
- higher and further education grant funding,
 - Welsh Government student fee support,
 - research and innovation funding, and
 - work directly contracted by the Commission.
- 11.19 The Welsh Government has concluded that a registration system will be the most effective and flexible legal means by which to implement appropriate regulation across a diverse tertiary education sector.
- 11.20 In particular, a registration model has been determined as the most effective way by which the Welsh Ministers and the Commission can regulate access to Welsh Government student support, which has become the dominant model of funding in the Welsh higher education system following recent funding reforms, as well as grant funding allocated by the Commission.
- 11.21 An effective and future proof system of regulating tertiary education providers in Wales will need to deliver the following:
- proportionate accountability and transparency for tertiary education providers in Wales in receipt of Welsh Government funded tuition fee support and/or direct grant funding from the Commission, particularly in regards to educational quality, financial assurance, and provider governance.
 - regulatory requirements that are adjustable to changing circumstances in funding, provider structure, and public need.
 - continued and appropriate autonomy for education providers, whilst also ensuring the delivery of Welsh Government strategic objectives.
 - value for money for taxpayers together with assurances about the use of public funds.

Future proofing

- 11.22 It is important that regulation of the tertiary education sector is able to align appropriately with changing funding arrangements. For example, primary legislation was required in both Wales (2015) and England (2017) to adjust to the changes in higher education funding introduced in 2012. Whilst it is not possible to eliminate the possibility of needing further primary legislation, it is prudent to design a regulatory system that can adapt to possible future policy and funding changes. This is why it is essential that the Welsh Ministers can specify, through regulations approved by the Senedd, the categories of registration and the levels of student support to which each of these categories will entitle providers.
- 11.23 Furthermore, a registration system can enable changes to conditions of registration to be made in order to respond to changing regulatory priorities. With some exceptions specified in the Bill (the 'mandatory' initial and ongoing registration conditions), it will be possible for conditions of registration to be added or removed from the register by the Commission following consultation.

Assurance and value-for-money

- 11.24 The register will enable the Commission to require that providers meet initial, ongoing, and sometimes specific conditions of registration in order to continue to be eligible to be designated for the purposes of Welsh Government student support, as well as to receive discretionary forms of grant funding available from the Commission. The registration system will establish a clear link between the benefits arising from access to this funding, and the need to ensure that tertiary education providers are publically accountable and can contribute to the Commission's strategic priorities.
- 11.25 The introduction of multiple registration categories will also enable more transparent regulation of providers who are currently designated on a case-by-case basis for the lower levels of Welsh Government higher education fee-support. This will mean that case-by-case designation is only required on a truly exceptional basis, and most providers currently so designated are expected to register with the Commission. It is intended that this should reduce annual administration for both providers and the Commission by removing the need for annual re-designation of courses.

Continuity

- 11.26 It is intended that the registration system initially be applied to those providers seeking designation of courses for Welsh Government student support - courses which the Commission will not be under a duty to secure proper/and or reasonable facilities for under its funding duties and powers.
- 11.27 Under current arrangements, the providers primarily expected to register would be higher education providers. Conditions of registration will predominantly be comparable to current regulatory requirements overseen by HEFCW, several of which are outlined in the 2015 Act. These include conditions in respect of quality, financial management, governance, fee-limits for qualifying courses, and equality of opportunity, but there will also be clarification of requirements in respect of learner protections, learner complaints, and learner voice and representation (see Chapters 16 and 17). These will form the basis of the Commission's regulatory powers in respect of providers designated for Welsh Government student support.
- 11.28 Providers predominantly in receipt of non-discretionary grant funding from the Commission will primarily be regulated through the terms and conditions to which the funding is subject. However, the register has been designed to enable registration of these providers in the future if this is deemed necessary for the purposes of regulation and determining access to public monies.

Key risks associated with the preferred approach

Proportionate regulation

- 11.29 It will be essential for the Commission to ensure that conditions of registration are proportionate to both the regulatory risks identified by the Commission and the benefits to which an institution becomes entitled (i.e. public monies) as a result of registering.

11.30 It will be important that the Commission's administration of the register is not overly bureaucratic or burdensome on providers, and so distracting providers from delivery of their core business. The Commission will be required by the legislation to ensure that its administration of the register is proportionate to the regulatory risk, and to keep its ongoing registration conditions under review at all times.

Confusion with Office for Students' register

11.31 It was noted in consultation that the introduction of a register of providers may cause confusion with the English register of higher education providers maintained by the Office for Students. It is intended that the Commission will make clear the distinction between the two registers as a function of devolved administration, and further that the register will be primarily a legal means of regulation as much as a form of public information, although information regarding the register will be mandated by legislation to be published.

Option 3 – establish a register of higher education providers only 11.32 The Commission would be required to establish a register of higher education providers only, with categories, conditions and benefits of registration fully outlined in primary legislation.

Key advantages of option 3

11.33 A register with full details outlined in primary legislation would give full security and surety to providers regarding their long-term regulatory requirements. It would reduce the quantity of secondary legislation required prior to establishment of the Commission and its register.

Key risks associated with option 3

Inflexibility

11.34 A regulatory framework fully outlined in primary legislation would risk being too rigid to meet future policy needs or to adapt to any future reform. It would be unable to introduce new regulatory conditions if required by changing circumstances, or withdraw regulatory conditions if they became redundant.

Higher education exclusivity

11.35 The form and shape of tertiary education providers is changing, and clear distinctions between higher and further education providers are increasingly becoming less clear. It would therefore be inappropriate to design a regulatory system built around maintaining distinctions between tertiary education providers, when a key aim of the Bill is to create greater coherence in regulation and direction across the sector.

Risk of need for further primary legislation

11.36 Any changes to a regulatory system fully detailed in primary legislation would risk a need for future primary legislation, in the event that regulatory risks evolve or change. This would risk either using up valuable and limited Senedd and Welsh

Government time to produce and scrutinise such legislation, or risk regulatory failure within the sector were new primary legislation to be undeliverable.

Chapter 12. Detailed options for reform - Quality assurance and enhancement

Current arrangements and the case for change

- 12.1 Learning providers in all tertiary education sectors have their own quality systems. There are arrangements for external quality assessment or inspection in each part of the system, which validate providers' own quality assurance processes and provide independent accountability for public funding. Various different bodies are responsible for these.
- 12.2 HEFCW has developed a quality Assessment Framework in line with its statutory remit for the quality of regulated higher education providers under the 2015 Act.
- 12.3 Under this framework, regulated higher education providers are able to commission any agency on the European Quality Assurance Register to undertake external quality reviews of their provision but currently have chosen to contract QAA as a sector through the higher education representative body, Universities Wales. It is understood by the Welsh Government that there is a framework agreement between Universities Wales and the QAA, plus individual contracts between the QAA and each provider.
- 12.4 Further education, work based learning and adult learning providers are inspected by Estyn under its own statutory powers under Section 75 of the 2000 Act. Sixth forms are inspected by Estyn as part of secondary school inspections but currently, Estyn does not make specific judgements on the quality of sixth form provision, or publish separate reports on sixth forms¹⁷. In consultation with stakeholders, Estyn has developed a common inspection framework for all sectors of education and training that it inspects. Estyn, as a Crown Body, is currently funded by, and reports to, Welsh Government.
- 12.5 The Hazelkorn report recognised that the current quality assurance landscape is particularly complex, with different inspection regimes and different sets of responsibilities. For example, Estyn has responsibility for inspecting schools, further education, work based learning and providers of post-16 education and training other than higher education: while the QAA, operating under a service-level agreement with UW, has oversight of higher education programmes delivered in further education institutions as well as within universities.
- 12.6 There is a need for an approach which allows the Commission to evaluate the effectiveness of the tertiary education system as a whole in meeting strategic goals and priorities; its capacity to meet current and future economic and societal needs; and the progress and outcomes of learners of all levels of ability.

¹⁷ Estyn has recently consulted (December 2019) on changes to inspection arrangements for 2021 onwards, including how Estyn reports on sixth form provision in core inspections.

Options considered and the preferred approach

Business as Usual

12.7 A no-change (Business as Usual) scenario would maintain the current legislative and operational basis for quality assurance in higher and further education.

Key advantages of Business as Usual

12.8 The key advantages of the no change (business as usual) option are:

- least financial impact
- providers are familiar with the system and existing bodies involved;
- continuity of quality assurance of tertiary education provision;
- the current systems appear effective and well regarded, and relationships between QAA, Estyn and providers are well established.

12.9 In responses to the White paper there was considerable overlap in what respondents valued in the current arrangements, and what they thought any new system should include. This included building on and adapting best practice from existing models, rather than 'reinventing the wheel'. Some respondents, particularly higher education institutions, highlighted what they saw as the strengths of current approaches. The peer-led aspect of QAA reviews was particularly valued. Additionally the QAA's focus on enhancement was endorsed as something that could be built on in order to achieve system-wide consistency and clarity of purpose.

12.10 There was a consensus at the stakeholder focus group for the Technical Consultation that the Commission should be able to engage different organisations (implicitly QAA and Estyn) to do the quality assurance work, but to require them to work together in order to deliver a more coherent whole. It was argued that this would achieve the spirit of what is sought, without moving to a single agency model. This was echoed in the written feedback to the Technical Consultation; there was an appetite from some respondents to retain the current Estyn and QAA arrangements, and in some cases to work towards greater alignment and cohesion between the two.

Key risks of Business as Usual

12.11 If the creation of the Commission went ahead without corresponding legislative powers for quality assessment, HEFCW would cease to exist and no one body or organisation would have a statutory responsibility for the quality of higher education. The inconsistencies in the responsibilities and powers for different sectors across tertiary education would remain.

12.12 Hazelkorn indicated that there was a broad view that the overall quality and performance of both the further and higher education sectors is good, and that they broadly meet learner and societal needs.

12.13 However, many challenges were noted including:

- Further education institutions and higher education institutions being too focused on their own agendas, with little evidence of genuine working

- relationships and too little discussion about the needs of learners, their pathways and transitions across the system;
- the system as a whole being too focused on the short to medium terms, rather than a longer term vision for learners;
- criticisms made by different parts of the system about the quality of education and the level of preparedness for learners progressing;
- stakeholder identification of the need for better coordination and collaboration across the system, and for more positive relationships between sectors;
- having strict boundaries is no longer desirable given the diversity of the tertiary education sector and its institutions; and
- while a lot of data is being gathered, it's not necessarily being thought about in a coherent cross-governmental way.

12.14 Therefore perpetuating these inconsistencies would cause difficulties for the Commission to have a holistic view of the quality and standards across the tertiary education system and result in some of the challenges noted by Hazelkorn remaining unaddressed.

Option 2 – The preferred approach

- 12.15 The Commission will have a duty to monitor, and promote improvement in the quality of tertiary education across Wales. In carrying out this function, the Commission will be expected to be guided by its strategy, which is in turn guided by the statement of priorities published by Welsh Ministers.
- 12.16 The Commission will have a power to produce and publish a quality assurance framework. The framework will set out the Commission's policy in regards to quality, quality assessment, inspection and quality improvement, and will be subject to prior consultation with tertiary education providers, Estyn, and other stakeholders as the Commission sees fit.
- 12.17 Estyn and the designated body for quality assessments in higher education (see below) will be required to take account of any quality framework published by the Commission when conducting inspections and assessments respectively.
- 12.18 In higher education, the Commission will have a duty to assess, or make arrangements to assess, the quality of higher education provided in Wales by each tertiary education provider registered, or seeking to be registered, by the Commission, and education provided on behalf of each institution registered with the Commission.
- 12.19 The Commission will be able to designate a body to conduct quality assessments of higher education providers. It is expected that this designated body will be on the ENQA register of approved agencies. The functions of the designated quality body will be as follows:
- To conduct assessments of the quality of higher education provided in Wales by registered institutions, at intervals as prescribed in regulations.
 - To conduct assessments of the quality of higher education provided in Wales by institutions seeking to be registered by the Commission.
 - To provide the Commission with information and advice as required regarding the quality of higher education provided in Wales by registered institutions.

- 12.20 In order to perform its quality assessment functions, the designated body will have the power to charge providers of higher education fees, as is the current arrangement between higher education providers and the QAA.
- 12.21 In further education, Estyn will retain its duty to inspect education (other than higher education) or training for persons aged 16 or over where the provider is given financial support by the Commission, or by a local authority in Wales which is in turn funded by the Commission. Estyn's right of entry into providers which it inspects will remain unchanged.
- 12.22 As set out in current legislation, Estyn will be required on the quality of education or training inspected, the standards achieved by those receiving the education or training, and whether financial resources made available to the provider of the education or training are managed efficiently and used in a way which providers value for money.
- 12.23 Whilst Estyn will retain its current independence in terms of the activities it undertakes and reports it produces in relation to post-compulsory education and training, it will be under a duty to have regard to the advice and guidance of the Commission (including strategic priorities for quality improvement and assurance) in exercising its functions.
- 12.24 The Commission will be made jointly responsible with Welsh Ministers for the funding for Estyn. This will represent a change from the current arrangements under section 104(4) of the Government of Wales Act 1998, under which the Welsh Ministers fund Estyn exclusively. The Commission will provide Estyn with funding as it considers appropriate in respect of post-16 inspections, and have regards to what Estyn considers appropriate in discharging its inspection duties.
- 12.25 Officials intend that the overall funding made available for Estyn's activities will be maintained, but that a proportion of Estyn's current budget would have to be rerouted through the Commission upon its establishment in 2023, and would become contingent on a new annual plan and remit letter. Estyn's advice will be sought on an appropriate estimate of the cost of post-16 activities which should be made the responsibility of the Commission. The Commission would have discretion to make additional resources available to Estyn from within its own budget for additional inspections and for further advice and information that Estyn might be able to provide on matters of quality assurance and improvement.

Key advantages of the preferred approach

- 12.26 The advantages of the preferred approach are as follows:
- will provide continuity of quality assurance and address stakeholders' desire for quality systems to build on the existing arrangements;
 - reflects consultation feedback that quality assurance requirements may need to apply differently to learning at different levels and in different contexts, and reflect the different context, mission and role of each institution and sector, avoiding a 'one size fits all' approach;
 - helps ensure that the Commission should have autonomy to develop its own quality framework and drive forward priorities in quality improvement policy across the tertiary education sectors, informed by the Weingarten Review.

- carries a relatively limited financial impact for Estyn and tertiary education providers.

Key risks associated with the preferred approach

- 12.27 In agreeing a plan of inspections and funding for its activities in post-16 education and training with the Commission, Estyn will need to ensure that its independence as an inspectorate continues to be protected. The Commission, in delivering its commitment to securing education and training for young persons aged 16 to 19 and adults over 19 of sufficient quality, will need to ensure that Estyn continues to conduct and report on inspections without fear or favour, in order to ensure continued improvement in the quality of education on offer.
- 12.28 An effective working partnership between the Commission, Welsh Ministers, Estyn, and the designated body for higher education quality assessments will be essential to ensuring fair, efficient and effective quality assurance and assessment continues across all tertiary education sectors.
- 12.29 By taking an evolutionary rather than revolutionary approach, there will likely continue to be differences in approach to quality assurance and assessment across the tertiary education sectors, particularly between higher and further education, at least in the early years of the Commission's existence. It will take time for the distinct cultures of quality assurance to complement each other and to enable the Commission to build a truly comprehensive picture of quality across the tertiary education system.

Option 3 – single designated body to assess quality

- 12.30 The Technical Consultation consulted on using a single designated body to assess the quality of all provision across the tertiary education sectors. This would involve wholesale reform of Estyn's inspection duties in further education, and the creation of a new designation process to find a body capable of conducting quality assessment and improvement work across a diverse range of further education, higher education and apprenticeship providers. The designated body would be funded through a mix of Commission funding and provider subscriptions, and report directly to the Commission.

Key advantages of option 3

- 12.31 Designation of a single quality assessment body would provide a fully 'clean break' from current arrangements and begin a process of bringing full coherence in quality assessment and improvement across further and higher education. This could lead to more holistic assessments of the value and effectiveness of diverse parts of the tertiary education sector in Wales and enable more focused and evidence-based allocations of public funds. It would also require significantly more collaboration between the further and higher education sectors in terms of pedagogy, curriculum, professional development, and general assurance functions.

Key risks associated with option 3

- 12.32 It is not clear that there is an organisation within Wales with the required knowledge, experience or expertise to assess and assure quality across higher education, further education and apprenticeships.
- 12.33 Creation of a new body would likely carry additional costs, and be disruptive to existing ways of working with providers, which stakeholders have indicated largely operate well.
- 12.34 A single body operating across higher and further education may fail to meet the requirements of the ENQA register of approved agencies. This might jeopardise the critical UK-wide and international comparability of Welsh higher education quality assurance.

Chapter 13. Detailed options for reform - Strengthening the link between planning and funding

Current arrangements

- 13.1 The current arrangements for planning and funding tertiary education provision are split between the functions of the Welsh Ministers and those of HEFCW. Post-16 education and training other than higher education has been directly funded by the Welsh Government since 2006.
- 13.2 The Welsh Government currently allocates funding to further education institutions via recurrent grants. It contracts with a variety of education and training providers to deliver apprenticeships and traineeships below degree level, awards funding to local authorities in support of school sixth form education and also funds a range of adult continuing education.
- 13.3 The Welsh Government provides funding to HEFCW for higher education including degree level apprenticeships and HEFCW in turn allocates funding to eligible institutions.

Higher education

- 13.4 The planning and funding of higher education is mediated through HEFCW. The Welsh Ministers may provide funding to HEFCW for the purpose of supporting higher education and for teacher training provision. They may attach terms and conditions to such funding within the parameters of the relevant legislation.
- 13.5 The funding the Welsh Ministers provide to HEFCW is un-hypothecated and it is a matter for HEFCW to determine the allocation of those resources, taking account of Welsh Government's priorities. Currently the Welsh Ministers issue non-statutory guidance to HEFCW to communicate their policy priorities in the form of an annual remit letter, and impose terms and conditions in the form of a "Framework Document" that accompanies the funding provided to HEFCW.
- 13.6 The activities supported by HEFCW's funding predominantly relate to the provision of HE, teacher training and other activities of higher education institutions in Wales but also include the provision of certain higher education courses by further education institutions in Wales. HEFCW may attach terms and conditions to financial support provided to institutions as it thinks fit.
- 13.7 It is HEFCW's responsibility to determine how the grant funding received from the Welsh Government is to be allocated to individual institutions. In carrying out its funding activities under the 1992 Act, HEFCW must consult institutions about its proposed application of conditions of funding, and have regard to specified factors, including the denominational or other distinctive characteristics of institutions.
- 13.8 The amount of funding allocated by HEFCW to institutions for the purpose of supporting higher education has significantly decreased as a consequence of the tuition fee and student support system introduced from the 2012/13 academic year. The principal source of funding for Higher Education in Wales has now become tuition fee income as opposed to annual grant funding from HEFCW although it is envisaged that increased amounts of grant funding may be available in future years as a consequence of changes to the student support regime introduced following implementation of the Diamond Review.

- 13.9 The changes in the way higher education is funded have led to changes in HEFCW's responsibilities, with more emphasis being placed on the Council's regulatory role under the 2015 Act. This includes determining applications for approval of Fee and Access plans, which gives an institution access to higher tuition fee income supported by the statutory student finance system. Tuition fee loans and/or grants are paid direct to institutions via the Student Loans Company and on behalf of learners, under regulations made by the Welsh Ministers.

Post-16 (non higher education) Funding

- 13.10 Currently, under the 2000 Act, the Welsh Ministers must secure the provision of proper facilities for education and training (other than higher education) suitable to the requirements of persons who are above compulsory school age but have not attained the age of 19 and the provision of reasonable facilities for education and training (other than higher education) suitable to the requirements of persons aged 19 and above. The effect of these two duties is that the Welsh Ministers will give priority to meeting the learning and skills needs of young people up to the age of 19. In performing their duties in respect of both age groups the Welsh Ministers must take into account a number of factors, including the education and training required in different sectors of employment. They must also bear in mind that other bodies, both statutory and private, provide education and training and therefore they might reasonably expect education and training to be secured by other bodies without drawing on their resources. In practice the Welsh Ministers will secure the provision of education and training from a range of providers.
- 13.11 The Welsh Ministers are also under a duty to promote participation in post-16 education and training and to encourage employers to become involved in its support and delivery. Examples of activity supported under this function include funding the Learning and Work Institute to undertake research and deliver marketing campaigns for Adult Learners Week; World Skills and Skills Competition Wales; promotion of apprenticeships as well as a range of post-16 social media activity.
- 13.12 Welsh Ministers may secure the provision of financial resources to (amongst others) persons providing or intending to provide post-16 education or training, persons providing goods or services in connection with the provision by others of post-16 education or training and persons undertaking research relating to education or training as well as those receiving or proposing to receive post-16 education and training. As well as funding of the provision of post-16 education and training, financial resources may include money intended for awards to students which is distributed by institutions e.g. financial contingency funds.
- 13.13 The Welsh Ministers are able to impose conditions to the funding they allocate, such as access to documents and accounts, as well as requiring a person in receipt of financial support to give the Welsh Ministers such information as they may request. The Welsh Ministers may also require providers of post-16 education and training to charge fees, make awards and recover sums of money against specified criteria. The Welsh Government currently issues a financial memorandum to funded institutions which together with an annual grant letter, set out the conditions imposed on the provision of grants or grant in aid to institutions providing further education.

- 13.14 In addition, the Welsh Ministers may make grants to local authorities on the condition that such grants are to be applied as part of the authority's schools budget for the purposes of, or in connection with, the provision by schools of education suitable to the requirements of persons above compulsory school age. Such allocations support school sixth form provision.
- 13.15 The Welsh Ministers are empowered to develop schemes for the assessment of the performance of persons providing post-16 education and training. These functions allow the Welsh Ministers to make arrangements for the assessment of the quality of the provision funded, and to take judgements about quality into account in deciding which providers they continue to fund. The intention is that the Welsh Ministers secure value for money, and that learners receive provision of a high quality.
- 13.16 The Welsh Ministers must establish systems for collecting information which ensure that their decisions with regard to education and training are made on a sound basis. Additionally, the Welsh Ministers may secure facilities for providing information, advice or guidance about education and training and connected matters, including employment. These functions are relied on principally in connection to evidence gathering and work that contributes to the Welsh Ministers' evidence base for taking decisions about education and training.
- 13.17 In addition to their functions under the 2000 Act the Welsh Ministers also have functions with the Secretary of State for making appropriate arrangements for the purpose of assisting persons to select, train for, obtain and retain suitable employment.
- 13.18 The Welsh Ministers also have functions under the 2002 Act relevant to funding and are able to give financial assistance to any person in connection with a variety of purposes in respect of education and may give or make arrangements for the giving of financial assistance e.g. the Educational Maintenance Allowance and the Welsh Government Learning Grant Further Education schemes.
- 13.19 Although there is no specific statutory power dealing with planning, requirements for planning (and funding) related activity for further education institutions, adult learning and sixth form provision are administered via annual terms and conditions of funding.
- 13.20 A Post-16 Planning and Funding Framework was introduced in 2014 which operationalised and brought consistency and alignment to the planning and funding of further education institution mainstream provision and local authority maintained school sixth form provision. In addition, the Welsh Ministers write annually to principals and chief executives of funded further education institutions notifying them of their policy priorities and also to local authority chief education officers.
- 13.21 Currently the Welsh Government imposes terms and conditions of funding by way of annual grant award letters issued to further education institutions and local authorities. Terms and conditions of contract are applied to providers of apprenticeships. Regional Skills Partnerships recommendations are communicated annually to further education institutions and work based learning providers via separate mechanisms. Responses are monitored and impact assessed via the relevant Welsh Government funding teams.

Case for change

- 13.22 Establishing the Commission will necessitate revised arrangements for the planning and funding of tertiary education. Certain funding functions currently operated by the Welsh Ministers will need to be amended and new functions will need to be conferred on the Commission. However, the Welsh Ministers will need to be able to continue to fund certain education and training in connection with the delivery of employability interventions.
- 13.23 Additionally, the proposed relationship between the Welsh Ministers and the new Commission (to be mediated through a statement of priorities and the production of a strategic plan) requires a reconfiguration of the current relationships between the Welsh Government and providers of post-16 education and training. Establishing the Commission and abolishing HEFCW means that new arrangements will need to be made for the relationship between the Commission and providers of post-16 education and training. Establishing of a line of sight between the strategic priorities of the Welsh Government through the Commission's strategic plan to the activities of funded learning providers has acted as a driver for establishing the proposed planning and funding system.

Options considered and preferred approach

Business as usual

- 13.24 A no-change (Business as Usual) scenario would only apply if the reform to create the Commission were not taken forward, as it is the dissolution of HEFCW and the establishment of the new body that requires a new planning and funding structure to be put in place.

Key advantages of Business as usual

- 13.25 There would be no disruption to current arrangements.
- 13.26 HEFCW would continue to fund higher education provision, research and related activities and funding allocated to HEFCW would continue to be managed via the Welsh Government sponsor team. HEFCW staff would not be subject to any change or disruption and would continue to fund eligible providers.
- 13.27 Welsh Government teams would continue to plan and fund post-16 provision (other than higher education) and staff currently supporting these areas would not be subject to any change or disruption. Providers would not experience any significant change to the existing planning and funding arrangements put in place by the Welsh Government or HEFCW as appropriate, other than routine operational changes that may already be in train.

Key risks of Business as usual

13.28 The different types of tertiary education providers would continue to be separately funded without the oversight of a single body responsible for the planning and funding of provision. This could mean a lack of coherence of provision for learners, or a centrally managed system to identify gaps and unnecessary duplication. It would be difficult to:

- achieve seamless and well planned pathways for learners across all sectors;
- ensure a continuous and consistent focus on quality of provision; and
- enable value for money, without central oversight of the whole system.

Option 2 – The preferred approach

13.29 The proposals are for the Welsh Ministers to be enabled to:

- fund the Commission;
- taking account of academic freedom and institutional autonomy, attach terms and conditions to the funding, such as requiring the Commission to enter into an ‘outcome agreement’ with persons whom it proposes to fund; and
- continue to fund further education and training and certain courses of higher education as they may currently do under the 2000 Act.

13.30 The Welsh Ministers current duties and functions in relation to securing proper and reasonable facilities for post-16 education and training (other than higher education) or functions very similar to them, would in future be vested in the Commission.

13.31 In addition the proposal is for the Commission to be enabled to:

- fund tertiary education (higher education, further education, apprenticeships, adult community based education and school sixth form education) as well as research and innovation, in line with the objectives in the Commission’s approved Strategic Plan;
- apply terms and conditions to their funding;
- determine funding allocations to providers and local authorities on the basis of negotiated funding and outcome agreements and / or contracts; and
- utilise performance and monitoring information, labour market intelligence and research to inform its funding allocations.

13.32 Currently, the planning and funding of tertiary education is achieved through a variety of mechanisms, depending on the type of provision, the category of provider and the aim of the programme or course. It is proposed that the Commission’s planning and funding relationships with providers and local authorities could be achieved though the negotiation of outcome agreements, other than where provision and services are secured by means of contracts.

13.33 It is envisioned that these would, in effect, be “performance contracts” to be negotiated between the Commission and providers in receipt of recurrent funds, and between the Commission and local authorities in respect of funding allocated for school sixth form provision.

13.34 Should the Welsh Minister specify outcome agreements as a requirement in the funding terms and conditions (see paragraph 3.227), or the Commission chose to implement outcomes agreement, the proposal is that these outcome agreements should be the mechanism by which the Commission seek to ensure the alignment of the activities of recurrently funded learning providers with the Welsh Government's strategic priorities.

- 13.35 The Commission will need to take into account the Welsh Government's strategic priorities and its response to them, as set out in its approved strategic plan, and translate that plan into action. It is envisaged that this will be achieved, in part, through the decisions the Commission takes when allocating funding to providers and local authorities. In addition to recurrent funds, ad hoc funding allocated by the Commission to providers and other organisations will be subject to terms and conditions of funding. The expectation is that the Commission will ensure such funding is aligned with the priorities in Commission's approved strategic plan.

Key advantages of the preferred approach

- 13.36 The primary difference between the current arrangements and how the proposed Commission would work is an ability for it to take a 'whole systems' view and to plan and fund accordingly – the aim is that the Commission will promote coherence across the tertiary education sector as whole. The proposed planning and funding system should ensure a line of sight between the Welsh Government's priorities for post-compulsory education, training and research, the Commission's strategic plan and the activities undertaken by funded providers.

Key risks associated with the preferred approach

- 13.37 The introduction of the planning and funding system provided for in the Bill would inevitably mean some changes to the current arrangements operated by the Welsh Government and HEFCW.
- 13.38 The proposed approach may be more resource intensive than current arrangements for both the Commission, providers and local authorities, at least when they are initially introduced.

Option 3 – Regulation and Outcome Agreement Model

- 13.39 The technical consultation proposed a system of regulation and outcome agreements. The proposal was that for learning providers and those delivering higher education provision to receive funding, they would need to:
- Deliver tertiary education and/or be engaged in or undertake research/innovation activities;
 - Operate wholly or principally in Wales - possibly be a charitable institution.
- 13.40 Regulation and outcome agreements could be drawn up, for approval by the Commission, to make them eligible for funding or ensure their course provision attracted Welsh Government student support from Welsh Government. Work based learning providers would not be required to draw up a regulation and outcome agreement as this must be fulfilled via their contractual obligations, inclusive of issues covered in regulation and outcome agreement. It was proposed that regulation and outcome agreements would be used as an enforcement mechanism in the event of a regulatory breach by the provider.

13.41 The proposal was that regulation and outcome agreements would come in two parts: Part I: regulatory requirements, and Part II: agreed outcomes.

Key advantages of option 3

13.42 The regulation and outcome agreement model would combine regulatory oversight with eligibility to receive funding from the Commission

13.43 This option sought to introduce a single planning, funding and regulatory system based on Regulation and Outcome Agreements, building upon a mix of the strengths identified from the models proposed within the White Paper. The regulation and outcome agreement model aimed to provide consistency of approach to regulation and accountability.

Key risks associated with option 3

13.44 Having considered how the model could operate, there were concerns about how the Commission could, for the time being, have a sufficient degree of certainty about providers to be funded to ensure the ongoing availability of proper and reasonable facilities for post-16 education and training (other than higher education). An approach based on applications to the Commission for approval of regulation and outcome agreements could result in uncertainty about the providers who are eligible to receive funding from the Commission. In contrast, for higher education there are no requirements to secure the provision of proper and reasonable facilities and the majority of higher education courses are currently supported by income derived from student fees as opposed to funding received from HEFCW.

13.45 The consultation feedback demonstrated a mixed response to the proposal to base the Commission's planning, funding and regulatory functions on regulation and outcome agreements. There was some significant opposition to the regulation and outcome agreement model, even though a focus on outcomes was welcomed. Additionally, responses suggested that the Commission should recognise there is no 'one size fits all' solution when planning and funding post-16 provision and it was proposed that the Commission should continue to operate flexible planning and funding systems across the post-compulsory sector, at least in the first instance, while seeking to align and consolidate systems over time.

Chapter 14. Detailed options for reform - Research and Innovation

Current arrangements and the case for change

- 14.1 Government provided research and innovation funding in Welsh tertiary education institutions operates on a 'dual-support' basis.
- 14.2 Competitively awarded research funding is awarded by UK Research and Innovation, comprising the seven Research Councils and Innovate UK. The Research Councils are a reserved matter and outside of the legislative competence of the Welsh Government.
- 14.3 Core 'quality-related' grant funding is distributed by HEFCW, based upon institutions' performance in the Research Excellence Framework. HEFCW also distributes postgraduate research funding and higher education innovation funds.
- 14.4 HEFCW distributes quality-related research funding, higher education innovation funding, and postgraduate research funding to higher education institutions. Welsh Government does not stipulate how these funds are distributed beyond giving HEFCW a broad steer on strategic matters.
- 14.5 The Welsh Government Office for Science also organises research funding programmes, such as the Sêr Cymru programme.
- 14.6 To take forward the first recommendation from the Reid Review¹⁸, the already well-established Welsh Government London Office was enhanced to help promote research and innovation activity in Wales with an increased emphasis on the Welsh Government's research and innovation functions.
- 14.7 As well as higher education institutions and the bodies that are currently funded, other public sector bodies when working with higher education institutions have potential to benefit from research and innovation where they are collaborating providers, but generally do not receive regular funding at present.
- 14.8 Setting up the Commission will provide the strategic oversight to engage with UK and international funding bodies on behalf of Welsh institutions in a rapidly changing research and innovation landscape.
- 14.9 Research capacity in Wales is proportionately lower than in England. Recent evidence suggests that Welsh researchers operate at a high level but that there are too few researchers in key areas. Recent reports by Halligan & Bright¹⁹, Elsevier²⁰ and Research Excellence Framework 2014²¹ highlight the quality of research in Welsh higher education institutions, but also illustrate the smaller research capacity in Wales relative to the rest of the UK.

²⁰ Elsevier for HEFCW and the Welsh Government | International Comparative Performance of the Welsh Research Base 2013

²¹ Research Excellence Framework 2014

14.10 The UK Government has published a 'Research and Development Roadmap' setting out action it intends to take to meet its commitment to increasing investment in research and development to 2.4% of GDP by 2027. The creation of the UK Shared Prosperity Fund (to replace EU structural funding) and the Advanced Research and Invention Agency will also significantly change the research and innovation environment for Welsh research institutions and businesses.

Options considered and the preferred approach

Business as Usual

14.11 The creation of the Commission and dissolution of HEFCW necessitates a review of research and innovation funding functions. No change (Business as Usual) would only apply if the Commission were not established.

Key advantages of Business as Usual

14.12 There would be no disruption to current arrangements.

Key risks of Business as Usual

14.13 The lack of strategic oversight of research and innovation means that the proportion of financial support that is currently being allocated to different research areas, to different levels of technology readiness, to different types of organisations, and to collaboration, knowledge sharing and innovation activities is sub-optimal. It does not support the development of technology, priority research areas, range of organisations and learning to the extent that it could. A continuation of this position creates a serious risk that Wales will fall further behind the rest of the UK in technology and research and its potential to support economic growth will not be fulfilled.

14.14 Without an organisation that can focus on promoting and engaging Welsh research and innovation, the changes that have taken place in England and in relation to the UK Research Councils are likely to put research organisations in England in a better position to compete for UK Government and Research Council funding than organisation in Wales. There is a risk that the share of UK research funding arriving in Wales will reduce.

Option 2 – The preferred approach

14.15 The Commission, will take on responsibility for overseeing research funding currently undertaken by HEFCW, and will be tasked with aligning funding in with other, competitively-awarded research capacity funding from both UK and Welsh (e.g. Sêr Cymru) sources.

14.16 The Commission will have a Research and Innovation Committee. The committee would oversee the Commission's research and innovation functions, comprising experts in the fields of research and innovation and some members of the Commission.

- 14.17 The Board of the Commission would have overall responsibility for ensuring that its activities across the tertiary education sector and those of the research and innovation committee are fully aligned with national strategic goals. It should maintain close engagement and collaboration with other funding sources, such as UKRI. The Commission will engage with Research England on common responsibilities such as the Research Excellence Framework.
- 14.18 Welsh Ministers will be granted powers to provide research and innovation funds to the Commission and to specify the general research areas eligible to receive this funding. Welsh Ministers will not be able to specify precise research and innovation projects that the funding should be directed to and this will not impact on institutions academic freedom.
- 14.19 The Commission will be placed under a duty to:
- Monitor the performance of its funding programmes;
 - promote the results of research and innovation and exploitation of the knowledge associated with it to a wide audience;
 - pay due regard to strategic guidance from Welsh Ministers; and
 - to engage with relevant bodies, to be agreed with Welsh Ministers on an annual basis.

Key advantages of the preferred approach

- 14.20 The Commission would be the national strategic delivery mechanism for research and innovation funding in Welsh tertiary education institutions.
- 14.21 It would allow alignment and coordinated focus of research and innovation with the development of skills, education and apprenticeships provision against specific strategic areas, e.g. compound semiconductors, dementia and mental health, nuclear, agri-tech, low carbon buildings, etc.
- 14.22 Allows easy prioritisation of all the above towards national priorities determined by Welsh Government.

Key risks associated with the preferred approach

- 14.23 Potential for the Commission to be seen to be too close to higher education and other delivery bodies.
- 14.24 Potential for lack of coordination with research and innovation funding delivery retained by Government.

Option 3 – Separate arms-length body for Research and Innovation

- 14.25 A consideration was given to the research and innovation activities being removed entirely from the tertiary education body and that these be placed in a separate, arms-length body as is the case in the UK, or as was the case when research and innovation funding was provide by the Welsh Development Agency. Although there was no suggestion of recreating the Welsh Development Agency, there was a suggestion that a research and innovation specific body be created in a manner not unlike the research councils in the UK. This suggestion was rejected because of the potential conflict with the creation of the Research Councils (now UKRI) and the decision to include research in the tertiary education body (thus creating the Commission for Tertiary Education and Research).

Key advantages of option 3

14.26 There would have been advantages to this separate body in that it would have a very specific focus and remit on research and innovation specialising in research and innovation for Wales and able to engage directly with UKRI.

Key risks associated with option 3

14.27 The risk of this option was that it would be too far removed from the educational aspects of tertiary education, especially in HE, and consequently the synergies, alignment and coordination of research and innovation with education, training and skill development would be missed; especially given the very small scale compared to structures adopted by the UK in the creation of the separate bodies UKRI and Office for Students. Hence, the advantages of bringing these together in Wales outweigh the disadvantages.

Chapter 15. Detailed options for reform - Supporting and developing apprenticeships in Wales

Current arrangements

- 15.1 Currently the apprenticeship programme (other than degree apprenticeships) is delivered via contracted work based learning providers (allocated through a full procurement exercise).
- 15.2 The Welsh Government's Further Education and Apprenticeship Division are responsible for developing apprenticeship policy, managing programme delivery and quality assurance. The Welsh Government holds the apprenticeship budget.
- 15.3 There is also an independent Provider Assurance Governance Service based within Welsh Government who audit apprenticeship providers, from their learner plans to wage slips. The Provider Assurance Governance Service provide risk-based monitoring reviews of European Social Fund (ESF) funded external training providers based all across Wales who are contracted to deliver Work Based Learning programmes on behalf of the Welsh Government.
- 15.4 Details of the current apprenticeship system in Wales are set out in paragraph 3.214 – 3.321.

Case for change

- 15.5 The underpinning legislative framework contained in 2009 Act was not designed with Wales in mind and does not now cater to the distinct needs of the Welsh economy and Welsh society.
- 15.6 Demand for apprenticeships is changing as employers demand skills at higher levels and young people are looking towards apprenticeships as an alternative to traditional full-time undergraduate provision. Currently, the arrangements in respect of the specification of apprenticeship standards for Wales are inflexible and unresponsive to the changing needs of industry; changes cannot be implemented with the speed needed in a rapidly changing skills environment.
- 15.7 In addition, the ability of Sector Skills Councils and sector bodies to fill their role has diminished under UK Government apprenticeship reform, weakening their remit to give employers a voice and create high quality occupational routes.
- 15.8 The planning, funding and management of apprenticeships would be better aligned with the skills needs of Wales, and with other provision for learners, if it were to fall within the remit of the Commission.

Options considered and the preferred approach

Business as Usual

- 15.9 A Business as Usual (no-change) scenario would only apply if the reform to create the Commission were not taken forward.

Key advantages of Business as Usual

- 15.10 The main advantage of 'Business as Usual' is that the system is already understood and in place. Although this may not be the most effective system, learners and employers are able to access apprenticeship provision and the system has achieved results.
- 15.11 There is also the advantage that retaining the current system will mitigate any risks attached to staff changes and consequent loss of knowledge and expertise in relation to apprenticeships that could potentially be caused by transfer to a new body.
- 15.12 The apprenticeship system is currently being reformed, changes have already been implemented to the way apprenticeships are commissioned and delivered in Wales to improve the quality of apprenticeships. However, the existing legislative restrictions will not allow the full system change required to become responsive to meet the skills needs of the Welsh economy and the potential impact of the changes to apprenticeship standards in England.

Key risks of Business as Usual

- 15.13 Although the current system is able to deliver apprenticeships in Wales the underpinning legislation was not designed with Wales in mind, and is therefore not flexible or responsive enough to meet employer's needs and the changing needs of the Welsh economy.
- 15.14 If apprenticeship provision is retained within Welsh Government, and therefore managed separately from the rest of the tertiary education sector, there is a risk of important gaps in the available provision, duplication between providers, and a failure to create clear learning pathways along which learners can progress without repetition.

Option 2 – The preferred approach

- 15.15 The preferred approach involves the repeal of the existing provision in the 2009 Act and the creation of new arrangements, leading to a more flexible apprenticeship system to help meet the varying needs of learners and industry in Wales whilst ensuring portability across the UK.
- 15.16 The approach would help ensure apprenticeship frameworks are developed and delivered to meet the skill needs/level of the economy. The current legislation underpinning apprenticeship development and delivery, as outlined above, is no longer flexible enough to cater for the rapidly changing skills needs of employers and learners.
- 15.17 The specification of apprenticeship standards for Wales will be replaced by a new flexible Welsh apprenticeship specification which is broader in scope with clearer requirements for the development of apprenticeship frameworks.
- 15.18 The duty, in section 38 of the 2009 Act, which states that the Welsh Ministers must specify sectors of skill, trade or occupation will be repealed. This will be replaced with a requirement that the Commission ensures that apprenticeship frameworks are relevant to occupational groups, as specified by the Welsh Ministers within the Welsh apprenticeship specification.

- 15.19 The Bill would provide that apprenticeship frameworks would be able to include industry recognised standards alongside the traditional qualifications. The Commission would be able to contract with external bodies for the development of apprenticeship frameworks or develop them in house.
- 15.20 All frameworks would be issued by the Commission or a person it has delegated its functions to, with the Commission under a duty to keep all frameworks under review. The Commission would be able to withdraw or modify apprenticeship frameworks
- 15.21 The Commission will be required to keep and publish a register of issued Welsh apprenticeship frameworks.
- 15.22 The Commission (or a person it delegates functions to) will be able to issue apprenticeship certificates, the power to charge a fee for this will be maintained. The contents of an apprenticeship to be prescribed within the Welsh apprenticeship specification.

Key advantages of the preferred approach

- 15.23 The proposed changes are intended to result in a new apprenticeship system which is more flexible, meets the varying needs of learners and industry in Wales, whilst ensuring portability across the UK. The system should ensure apprenticeship frameworks are developed and delivered to meet the skill needs and level of the Welsh economy.
- 15.24 The introduction of the Welsh apprenticeship specification and the ability therefore to implement changes without lengthy legislation processes will help to ensure a more flexible system, which is responsive to the needs of industry.
- 15.25 The Commission, with its oversight of the whole tertiary education sector will be able to help ensure a coherent system with clear pathways for learners to progress. It will help to remove duplication and support equal value between vocational and academic studies with higher level and Degree apprenticeships available as an alternative to traditional full-time undergraduate provision.
- 15.26 As the rest of the tertiary education sector will be managed by the Commission, it makes sense that apprenticeship provision would also be included within its remit otherwise there is the risk that vocational and academic studies will not have equal value and coherence across the sector.
- 15.27 Option 3 was proposed in the technical consultation however, comments from stakeholders and further internal review suggested that this option needed refinement in order to work. Option 2 is the preferred option as it takes into account these comments and proposes changes to mitigate the risks.

Key risks associated with the preferred approach

15.28 Respondents to the technical consultation suggested that there may be a risk that the Commission would not have the expertise to manage the full scope of the apprenticeship system and that elements should be retained by sector experts. However, these concerns have been taken on board and the legislation will stipulate that the Commission will be able to delegate its responsibilities to another body whilst retaining oversight.

Option 3

15.29 This option mirrors the proposals in option 2 except for:

- Apprenticeship frameworks are replaced with new apprenticeship pathways.
- The Commission, rather than the Welsh Ministers, has the power to specify additional matters to be included in the contents of apprenticeship certificates.
- Learning providers delivering apprenticeships up to level five will not be initially required to draw up regulatory outcome agreements as the necessary accountability requirements will be covered in their existing contractual obligations.
- The technical consultation suggested that degree apprenticeships, at level six, would be funded via a grant to the Commission and therefore subject to the regulatory outcome agreements process.

Key advantages of Option 3

15.30 As the proposals include a new process for apprenticeship provision and development it was felt that new terminology would be advantageous and that these new frameworks would be renamed as pathways.

15.31 The proposals to give the Commission rather than the Welsh Ministers the power to specify additional matters to be included in the contents of apprenticeship certificates would give the Commission the flexibility to amend certificate contents where necessary without the laborious process involved in amending legislation.

15.32 It is anticipated that the management of the relationship between providers and the Commission through the regulatory outcome agreement process (as originally proposed within the technical consultation) could help ensure that apprenticeship provision is managed in a similar way to other provision within the tertiary education sector.

Key risks associated with Option 3

15.33 The proposal to redefine apprenticeship frameworks as pathways raised concerns amongst stakeholders. As pathways are currently used to refer to sub-specialisms in apprenticeship frameworks it was felt that this could lead to confusion in the sector.

15.34 As the contents of apprenticeship certificates will remain defined within legislation there is a risk that if the Commission is given the power to specify additional matters in relation to these certificates then it will be given powers akin to making regulations.

15.35 During the development of the operating system it has been decided to move away from the proposals of a regulatory outcome agreement process to manage the relationship between the Commission and providers. Therefore the proposals contained within the technical consultation for apprenticeships to be managed through this process have now been revisited. If the proposals outlined in option 3 were retained then there would be a risk that the relationship between apprenticeship providers and the Commission would be managed differently to the rest of the tertiary education sector.

Chapter 16. Detailed options for reform - Protecting the interests of learners

Current arrangements and the case for change

Introduction

- 16.1 This function relates to arrangements for learners wishing to transfer to another provider, transition arrangements for learners in the event of course or provider closure or failure (learner protection) and arrangements for learner complaint resolution. The White Paper recognised that different parts of the tertiary education system have different arrangements to support learners' to continue their learning in these circumstances.

Higher Education Institutions

- 16.2 The UK quality code for Higher Education establishes the expectation that, from admission through to completion, all students are provided with the support that they need to succeed in and benefit from higher education. HEFCW would normally request a student protection statement from a regulated Higher Education Institution they believe to be at risk of failure.
- 16.3 Arrangements are also in place for all students to continue to receive student finance if they transfer course or provider.

Further Education Institutions

- 16.4 The Technical and Further Education Insolvency Act 2017 makes provision for a special administration regime to operate alongside ordinary insolvency to seek to ensure that learners are protected in the event that a Further Education college or designated institution becomes insolvent. In addition the Welsh Government has powers to intervene if necessary to protect the interests of learners and safeguard the education of existing learners if there are serious problems.

Apprenticeships

- 16.5 Apprenticeships are delivered through contracts between the Welsh Government and approved providers. The contractual requirements include that providers must find an alternative employer for apprentices that have been made redundant to ensure they can continue their qualification. In this case financial support is also available for a set period of time from Welsh Government whilst alternative employment is sought. Providers are also required to recruit learners displaced as a result of the work based learning tendering exercise.

School sixth forms

- 16.6 Arrangements are in place to help ensure the transfer of data about pupils when they move from one school to another. Under the Pupil Information (Wales) Regulations 2011 ("the 2011 Regulations"), whenever a pupil joins a school from another school within England or Wales, the pupil's Common Transfer File must accompany them. When a pupil leaves a school for a new school a Common Transfer File must be sent to the new school.

- 16.7 Currently, these arrangements do not cover transfers between schools and other types of learning provider. However, the 2011 Regulations do require that when a learner is under consideration for admission to another school, institution for further education, or any other place of education or training, the head teacher must transfer the pupil's educational record to the responsible person should they request this; although this does not include the results of any assessment of the pupil's achievements.

Complaints handling and resolution

Higher education institutions

- 16.8 Higher education providers are required to adhere to the QAA's Quality Code for Higher Education which sets out principles for addressing academic appeals and complaints about the quality of learning opportunities by learners in higher education. The Code requires that higher education providers have procedures in place to handle academic appeals and learner complaints about the quality of learning opportunities.
- 16.9 If learners are not satisfied with the result of the complaints procedure then they can refer their unresolved complaint to the Office of the Independent Adjudicator. The 2004 Act allows for the designation of a body to operate a student complaints scheme. The Office of the Independent Adjudicator has been designated as the operator for handling unresolved student complaints in higher education in England and Wales. The Office of the Independent Adjudicator's role currently extends to 'qualifying institutions' defined under the 2004 Act. Providers of higher education are required to pay a subscription fee to the Office of the Independent Adjudicator.
- 16.10 In addition, HEFCW may consider complaints against a higher education provider in areas which it has funding or regulatory powers such as financial or quality procedures.

Further education institutions

- 16.11 Further education institutions and apprenticeships have their own complaints procedures. In 2017, the Welsh Government issued guidance to these providers on handling complaints. Further education and apprenticeship learners are currently unable to refer their unresolved complaints to an independent body. The Welsh Government has no legal power to investigate unresolved complaints from individual learners and they do not come within the remit of the Office of the Independent Adjudicator unless the learner is undertaking a higher education qualification.
- 16.12 It should be noted that further education institutions who deliver higher education provision are required to subscribe to the Office of the Independent Adjudicator and that students learning higher education at further education institutions have access to the Office for complaints resolution.

School sixth forms

- 16.13 The 2002 Act requires the governing bodies of all local authority maintained schools in Wales, including nursery schools, to establish and publish procedures for dealing with complaints from parents, pupils, members of staff, governors, members of the local community and others.
- 16.14 When establishing complaints procedures, governing bodies must have regard to any guidance issued by the Welsh Ministers, with the current guidance contained in the Welsh Government circular 'Complaints Procedures for School Governing Bodies in Wales 2012'. This provides governing bodies with guidance in relation to establishing such procedures and includes a recommended model complaints procedure. It also outlines the local authority's role in relation to complaints, where appropriate.
- 16.15 Although the statutory responsibility for dealing with complaints remains with the governing body, local authorities should satisfy themselves that schools have adequate complaints procedures, and can provide advice and assistance to governing bodies on handling complaints. A local authority should also consider any evidence that suggests that a governing body does not have a complaints procedure, has an inadequate procedure, has not followed its procedure or has a procedure that is inoperable because persons who are subjects of the complaint investigate it or make decisions about it.

Learner protection Arrangements

- 16.16 There is a risk that without adequate learner protection arrangements in place, a learner may not be able to complete their studies should their course, campus, or provider close, or if their personal circumstances change. The Welsh Government considers the implementation of clear, coherent and easily accessible learner protection arrangements to be essential in preventing this occurring.
- 16.17 Responses to the White Paper suggest that current arrangements are inconsistent and not transparent for the learner, with scope to strengthen the arrangements to protect learners studying at tertiary education providers in Wales.
- 16.18 Differences and complexities within existing arrangements mean that learners, even within the same provider, do not necessarily receive the same level of protection. The current arrangements vary in their scope and focus and do not provide a comprehensive, formalised approach including both practical arrangements and support for learners' progress and well-being.

Complaints handling and resolution

- 16.19 Research carried out by NUS in 2011 highlighted the issues surrounding the complaints processes within the further education sector, with inconsistency and transparency key issues amongst providers.
- 16.20 Based on the feedback from the White Paper consultation, it is considered that all tertiary education providers should have clear policies and procedures in place to enable a learner to make a complaint regarding their learning experience. It is proposed that the Commission should be responsible for ensuring that tertiary education providers have appropriate complaints procedures in place and communicate these effectively to learners.

16.21 Although there are arrangements in Scotland and England for learners to take unresolved complaints to an independent body currently there is no equivalent for further education and apprenticeships in Wales. In order to drive a more integrated and improved approach, which brings further education and apprenticeships on a par with higher education, it is vital that this is addressed.

Options considered and preferred approach

Business as usual

16.22 In this case a business as usual (no-change) scenario would involve existing arrangements being taken forward largely unchanged.

Key advantages of Business as usual

16.23 The main key advantages of the 'business as usual' option are:

- no disruption to current arrangements
- although the standard of provision varies amongst providers there are learner protection and complaints arrangements in place.
- providers would not experience any change or disruption.
- no additional costs for further education and apprenticeship providers in requiring subscription to the Office of the Independent Adjudicator.

Key risks of Business as usual

16.24 At present time there are inconsistencies across providers with variable arrangements for learners depending on where and at what level they are studying.

16.25 There are also differences depending on the part of the sector you are studying in with, for instance, learners studying (non higher education courses) at further education institutions or apprentices unable to address their unresolved complaints to an independent body.

16.26 There is a risk that by staying with business as usual some learners will not experience the same level of provision for learner protection and complaints than others, to help ensure a level playing field a more standardised approach needs to be introduced.

Option 2 – The preferred approach

Learner Protection Plans

16.27 The Commission would be able to require a tertiary education provider that is registered with the Commission or in receipt of funding from the Commission, to submit a learner protection plan to the Commission for approval. Discretion will be provided to the Commission to determine which of these providers will be required to submit a learner protection plan to reduce the possibility of providers being required to develop a plan where it is not appropriate or proportionate for them to do so.

- 16.28 The Commission will not be able to require a local authority to submit a learner protection plan in relation to school sixth form provision. School sixth forms will be omitted because well-established arrangements are in place for pupil transfers through the Common Transfer File. This seeks to avoid introducing additional administrative burden for schools in managing different arrangements for pupils, pre-16 and post-16; and to avoid potential confusion for learners and parents that may result from different arrangements for pupils pre-16 and post-16.
- 16.29 It is proposed that a learner protection plan will set out the tertiary education provider's arrangements for:
- protecting the interests of persons undertaking a course of tertiary education provided by or on behalf of the tertiary education provider in the event of the course ceasing to be provided for any reason, and
 - supporting a person who is undertaking a course of tertiary education provided by or on behalf of the tertiary education provider and who wishes to transfer to another course of tertiary education (whether that course is provided by, or on behalf of, the tertiary education provider or another person).
- 16.30 The Commission will establish arrangements for the development and approval of learner protection plans. The Commission will be required to issue guidance on the preparation and revision of learner protection plans. It is proposed that the Commission will be required to consult with stakeholders in preparing this guidance.
- 16.31 It is intended that a proportionate approach is adopted in the development of learner protection plans, which does not result in additional unnecessary burden for providers. Learner protection plans would be in a format appropriate to the provider and its structures, and could be incorporated into other documents where appropriate.
- 16.32 The Commission will be required to monitor the effectiveness of learner protection plans and include in its annual report the conclusions it reaches from that monitoring as to the effectiveness of learner protection plans during the financial year to which the report relates.
- 16.33 The Commission will be required to monitor the effectiveness of learner protection plans and include in its annual report the conclusions it reaches from that monitoring as to the effectiveness of learner protection plans during the financial year to which the report relates.

Learner complaints arrangements

- 16.34 A duty will be placed on the Commission to ensure that a tertiary education provider has in place a procedure for investigating complaints about an act or omission of the provider made by persons who are receiving, or have received tertiary education provided by, or on behalf of, the provider. The Commission will also be required to ensure that providers also take reasonable steps to make the procedure known to persons receiving tertiary education provided by, or on behalf of, the provider.

- 16.35 Welsh Ministers will be able to specify by regulations a registered institution or other person in receipt of funding under the Bill as a qualifying institution for the purposes of the student complaint scheme. Welsh Ministers will not be able to specify local authorities in relation to school sixth form provision. This will enable providers to be brought into the scheme gradually, allowing time for the Office of the Independent Adjudicator and individual providers build their capacity.
- 16.36 However, it is not proposed that school sixth forms be included in these proposals because there are well-established arrangements in place for complaints about schools which must align with the Welsh Government. This seeks to avoid additional administrative burden for schools in managing different arrangements for pupils, pre-16 and post-16; and avoid potential confusion for learners and parents that may result from different arrangements for pupils pre-16 and post-16.

Key advantages of the preferred approach

Learner protection arrangements

- 16.37 Although learning providers currently have learner protection arrangements in place, these differ depending on the provider and the level of study undertaken (see current arrangements). The proposed reforms will help to achieve a degree of consistency and will help learners continue their studies in a range of circumstances. The proposals will enable the Commission to determine how best to protect learners' interests across different providers in consultation with providers and learners. The Commission will be required to monitor the effectiveness of learner protection plans and include in its annual report the conclusions it reaches from that monitoring. This will allow for good practice to be shared across the sector.

Complaints Handling and Resolution

- 16.38 The proposal for the Commission to oversee the responsibility on tertiary education providers to have complaints procedures in place and communicated effectively to learners will address issues of inconsistency of complaint management and processes and provider greater transparency and clarity for learners. This will help to drive an integrated and improved approach to handling complaints across the tertiary education sector.
- 16.39 The proposals will extend the scope of the independent complaints resolution scheme to individuals studying further education courses and apprentices.

Key risks associated with the preferred approach

Learner Protection Arrangements

- 16.40 There may be resource costs to providers of developing learner protection plans. However this should be minimal as it is intended that a proportionate approach is adopted in the development of learner protection plans, which does not result in additional unnecessary burden for providers. These costs are unknown at this stage and are likely to remain undetermined until the implementation phase, as the new Commission will need to develop guidance on the plans.

Complaints Handling and Resolution

- 16.41 Extending the independent complaints scheme will place additional burden on the Office of the Independent Adjudicator and providers that have not been required to be members of the scheme in the past. New members to the scheme will be required to pay a subscription fee to the Office of the Independent Adjudicator and existing providers may see their subscription fee increase as new learners are brought within the scope of the scheme.

Chapter 17. Detailed options for reform - Strengthening the learner voice and representation

Current Arrangements

- 17.1 Currently, there are different arrangements across the tertiary education sector to ensure learner representation and engagement, depending on the provider, with no standardised way as to how this is delivered. The reforms will establish a new system across the sector to help ensure a level of consistency for learners.
- 17.2 Higher education institutions in the partnership with HEFCW and NUS Wales have embedded student partnership within their institutions with students' unions required to produce an annual quality report and every provider of higher education to have a student charter in place.
- 17.3 Further education institutions are encouraged to develop their own learner involvement strategy with the help of the Welsh Government's Learner Involvement Strategies Guidance.
- 17.4 The Further and Higher Education (Governance and Information) (Wales) Act 2014 requires that all further education institutions have student representatives on their governing bodies. A budget of £25,000 was allocated to the further education team to deliver a joint research project with HEFCW, the recommendations for which are being worked through.
- 17.5 Prior to this, a larger budget of £150,000 was set aside per financial year for the Learner Voice Wales learner satisfaction survey that ran between 2013 and 2015. This covered learners in Further Education, work-based learning, adult community learning and Welsh for Adults. In the past the Further Education team contributed grant funding to NUS Wales and later the Wise Wales student partnership.
- 17.6 Further education institutions are encouraged to develop collaboration facilitated by NUS Wales, to help embed the learner voice strategies guidance in further education. This was in the region of £25,000 per financial year and was for further education only.
- 17.7 Schools, including sixth forms, are required by law to have a school council to ensure that pupil voice is represented in the development of school policies and procedures and any other matters of concern.
- 17.8 Apprentices are represented by the National Society of Apprentices Wales alongside a requirement for a formal learner involvement strategy (as noted above for further education) included within the contracts between the Welsh Government and apprenticeship learning providers. Apprentices were included in the Learner Voice survey (as above) between 2013 and 2015.
- 17.9 Currently each contracted provider is expected to operate its own learner survey and Welsh Government officials can ask to see evidence of these and how the provider is responding to the results. This is monitored through the annual self-assessment report which providers are required to submit. There is no corresponding budget or additional Welsh Government resource set aside for this.

- 17.10 The responses to the White Paper consultation emphasised the need to ensure that learner voice is considered throughout the development of the proposals, with suggestions for stronger more formal structures for learner representation across the sector. It was suggested that this could be more learner-centred, with opportunities for learners to influence the delivery of provision and that arrangements should be in the interests of the learner, meeting each learner's personal circumstances, goals and aspirations with a focus on continuity of education.
- 17.11 The majority of the respondents to the Technical consultation agreed that consistent principles and values should be developed for learner voice and representation and that learning providers should be required to adhere to them. They agreed that learner representatives should be involved with developing outcome agreements and that a new national framework for learner voice and representation should be established.
- 17.12 Feedback from stakeholders from both White Paper and Technical consultations suggests that although there is guidance and good practice already in place there is room to strengthen the provision that is currently available. The establishment of the Commission, with its oversight of the entire tertiary education sector, presents an ideal opportunity for a more joined up, learner-centred approach with high level standards and codes of practice for institutions being introduced.

Options considered and the preferred approach

Business as Usual

- 17.13 A Business as Usual (no-change) scenario would only apply if the reform to create the Commission were not taken forward

Key advantages of Business as Usual

- 17.14 The main key advantage of 'Business as Usual' is that the system is already understood. Although the standard of representation may vary amongst providers, there is some learner representation and engagement across the various parts of the sector.

Key risks of Business as Usual

- 17.15 At the moment representation amongst the sector varies depending upon the provider, with some providers providing a higher level of support than others. There are also differences depending on the part of the sector you are studying in.
- 17.16 There is a risk that by staying with business as usual some learners could experience less representation and engagement than others and stakeholders held the view that a more standardised approach or standardised principles to apply across different types of provision would address these inequities.

Option 2 – The preferred approach

- 17.17 At the moment only the requirement for school councils is contained in legislation. The introduction of guidance and standards across other parts of the sector will require new duties and powers to be created.
- 17.18 The proposals include the development of a learner engagement Code, which all learning providers will be required to adhere to. As part of this there will be a requirement for learning providers to set out how learners have been represented.
- 17.19 The Commission will be under a duty to consult providers, learner representative bodies and other relevant stakeholders during the preparation of the Learner Engagement Code. The Commission will be required to monitor and report on the effectiveness of the learner engagement Code as part of the annual reporting process. Learning providers are expected to submit a monitoring report evidencing learner engagement to the Commission via their annual report processes.
- 17.20 The Commission will be required to keep the learner engagement Code under review and if they think it is appropriate, prepare and publish a revised code.
- 17.21 The Welsh Ministers will be expected to issue guidance on the high level requirements for the learner engagement Code and a duty will be placed on the Commission to pay regard to this guidance.
- 17.22 It is envisaged that guidance from the Welsh Ministers will stipulate this will consist of two parts:
- a statement of high level principles to help learning providers establish effective representation for their learners
 - practical steps as to how effective engagement and involvement of learners can be achieved

Key advantages of the preferred approach

- 17.23 The preferred approach will introduce a standardised system across the whole of the tertiary education sector for learner representation and engagement which learning providers will be expected to adhere to. It is intended that this will ensure that all learners across the sector receive the same opportunity and level of engagement and representation no matter which method of tertiary education they chose to study through.
- 17.24 This should produce a more learner-centred system, ensuring that engagement with learners is treated as seriously across the sector as other regulatory requirements.

Key risks associated with the preferred approach

- 17.25 The main risk that respondents to the White Paper and Technical consultations could foresee would be in relation to the ability of the different sectors to engage in a standardised way with learners given the diversity of the learning arrangements and methods of learning between individual providers.

17.26 It should be noted however, that it is expected that the learner engagement Code will be flexible enough to ensure that learners will be able to be represented through many different mechanisms. The most important part is ensuring that the same level, standard and commitment to engagement is shown across all sectors no matter which method of engagement is chosen.

17.27 Option 3 mirrors option 2 except for the proposals to:

- include a learner representative on the Board of the Commission.
- only a National Framework would be developed to bring consistency across the tertiary education sector (part one of the learner engagement Code detailed in option 2). This would only provide for high level principles for learner representative bodies and no further detail.

Key advantages of Option 3

17.28 Learners would be represented on the Board membership of the Commission and thus able to have a say in the running of the Commission.

17.29 Providers will have to ensure that the needs of learners are being taken into account whilst developing and agreeing their outcome measures.

17.30 It makes sense to exempt apprenticeship providers from the outcome agreement requirements as they are already adhering to robust contractual obligations and this will remove a layer of unnecessary bureaucracy.

17.31 A national framework would bring more consistency to the principles for learner representation across the different sectors.

Key risks associated with option 3

17.32 Originally, and in response to the technical consultation, stakeholders felt that tying up two Board places to learners was not the best way forward as they would not be able to represent all learners from across the tertiary education sector. Instead it was suggested that learner representatives could become observers on the board, with the ability to influence.

17.33 Stakeholder engagement events highlighted that this thinking had reversed and the NUS (in particular) now prefer two learner representatives to have full board membership status.

Chapter 18. Detailed options for reform - Data, statistics and research

Current arrangements and the case for change

PLASC, the Post-16 Data Collection and LLWR

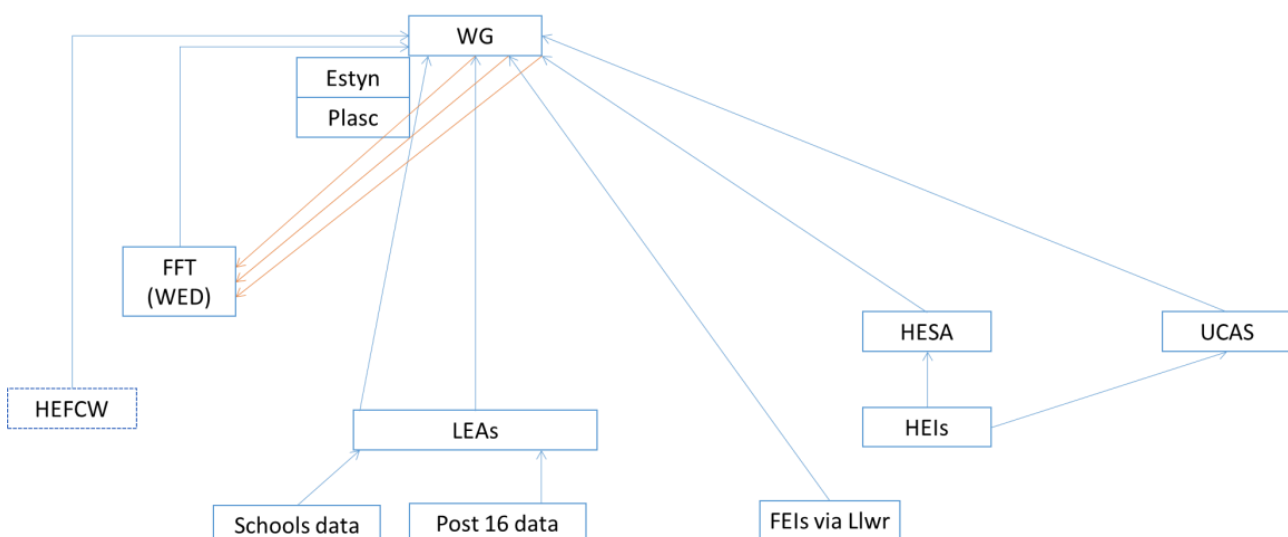

- 18.1 Currently, the Pupil Level Annual School Census (PLASC) and post-16 data is collected by the Welsh Government from local authorities, who collect it from schools.
- 18.2 PLASC is a statutory data collection undertaken every January which captures the personal details of all pupils attending a school at that point in time, but does not include information about their qualifications. The PLASC collection is managed by the school statistics team in Knowledge and Analytical Services within the Welsh Government. The data is submitted by schools and local authorities to the Welsh Government using a secure data exchange website provided specifically for that purpose by the Welsh Ministers, as required in legislation.
- 18.3 The post-16 data is a retrospective collection that is collected shortly after the start of the academic year. The collection includes details of the learning activities, programmes and qualifications that were undertaken during the previous academic year by learners in sixth forms of maintained secondary, middle and special schools. This is then used to inform the Welsh Ministers' sixth form funding decisions. The collection includes pupils in the national curriculum in Year 12 or above at any time in the previous academic year and as it's a statutory data collection, all maintained establishments must submit a post-16 collection return.
- 18.4 Local Authorities also provide statutory data returns on learners who are "Educated Other Than At School" (EOTAS). This covers children who are, for example, educated at home or in hospital, as well as those in pupil referral units. The majority of the data relates to children of compulsory school age, but a small number of post-16 learners are included
- 18.5 The pupil data for the post-16 census is held by schools within their management information system software, which is purchased and contracted from commercial software suppliers by schools and/or local authorities. Maintained schools must provide statutory data to the local authority that maintains them.
- 18.6 The data for the EOTAS return is held by local authorities within their software. The data is submitted by schools and local authorities to the Welsh Government using a secure data exchange website provided specifically for that purpose by Welsh Ministers, as required in legislation. This legislative requirement is currently satisfied through a contact the Welsh Government has, working with a software partner to develop statutory data collections' requirements and the data exchange website.
- 18.7 The Lifelong Learning Wales Record (LLWR) collects learning provision data for post 16 education (non-higher education learners in Wales across the further education, work based learning and adult community learning sectors.

- 18.8 LLWR data is submitted to the Welsh Government by the relevant education institutions. The LLWR Data Management Team manage the collection. Post 16 learning providers are required to submit data on learners in Wales via the Lifelong Learning Wales Record.
- 18.9 Since 2017, LLWR data is only collected from training providers seeking full or partial funding for their learners. Learner data will be processed through the relevant funding models to ensure funding terms and conditions are met.
- 18.10 Data can be submitted to the LLWR database at any time. Each month a snap-shot of the data is undertaken to allow for funding calculations/payments and monitoring to a specific point in time.
- 18.11 The LLWR collection underpins many aspects of the Welsh Government's work, including the planning, funding, monitoring, quality assurance and policy development of post-16 provision. The data also provide the official source of statistics on post-16.
- 18.12 Reports are made available to providers through a separate system called LLWR Inform.

Higher education data collection

- 18.13 HEFCW collects data from higher education institutions via the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA). It is funded by subscriptions from the institutions from which it collects data. HESA process and publish data about higher education in the UK. The relationship between HEFCW and HESA is contractual and governed by a data sharing agreement which has been in force since 2010.

Current data flows

Welsh Government

18.14 There are three teams within the Welsh Government supporting relevant policy development:

- developing quality and effectiveness framework for post-16 learning: including further education, work-based learning and community learning. Development of performance measures for learning providers. Working with Estyn on issues relating to post-16 learning. Overseeing the collection of LLWR data for post-16 learning, and ensuring its effective use to inform policy and performance monitoring.
- cross cutting education and skills including: qualifications of working age adults, participation of young people in education and the labour market (including NEET), pupil destination data, youth service data. Further Education statistics, development of consistent performance measures.
- the Data Collections Team within the School Information and Improvement Branch is responsible for data collection policy and the maintenance of DEWi²², producing software specifications for educational data collections that enable software suppliers to develop their systems and for providing schools and local authorities with Technical Completion Notes to aid users in completing data returns. The data collections team are also responsible for developing the PLASC, EOTAS, Post-16, School Workforce Annual Census, National Data Collection, Welsh National Tests, Primary and Secondary attendance and the Welsh Examinations Database (WED).

18.15 The key driver for reform is to enable the transfer functions and powers to the Commission to enable the new commission to be able to collect and store its own data in order to:

- Determine funding allocations
- Set and monitor strategic and operational priorities
- Monitor performance and quality of sector
- Monitor and learners' progress and destinations
- To inform future policies
- Determine funding of research in alignment with commissions priorities
- Monitor delivery of research activity with provider

18.16 Enabling the new Commission to be able to collect and store its own data supports Commission's objective to improve the tertiary education wide data and information system that ensures timely, useful, accessible and relevant information about tertiary education in Wales is available to all who need it, and enables the use of data to inform strategic planning funding decisions, increasing responsiveness to emerging issues and effective pathways for long term learner outcomes.

18.17 Responses to the consultation document indicated that the majority of respondents across all the existing sectors agreed that the new Commission should take ownership of all datasets. They felt that this would provide an opportunity to review the existing provision, ensuring there is robust evidence on which to base decision making and it was also seen as an opportunity to review the collection of this data as a whole to ensure the quality of the data and the comparability of data across all sectors.

²² The secure transfer site for data in Wales. For the transfer of statutory returns to the LAs and the Welsh Government. DEWi is used for collecting EOTAs, PLASC and post-16 collection.

18.18 There was a general agreement in all sectors that a duty should be placed on providers to monitor and share this data with the Commission, however, it was noted that this duty should avoid increasing providers' workload.

18.19 The higher and further education stated that a smooth transition of data is paramount for the learners' best interests and to have the ability to track learner progress and understand capabilities of learners would be a real benefit.

Options considered and preferred approach

Option 1 - Business as Usual

18.20 Under the Business as Usual option, there would be no disruption to current arrangements in relation to research and statistics. LLWR, PLASC and post 16 data collection data would remain within Welsh Government's remit. HESA would collect higher education data that would then be shared with Welsh Government.

Key advantages of Business as Usual

18.21 There would be no disruption to current arrangements. HEFCW and Welsh Government staff wouldn't be subject to change or disruption. Providers would not experience any change or disruption.

Key risks of Business as Usual

18.22 There would be no tertiary education wide data collection, analysis and storage and dissemination system. The data collections would continue to be separately managed with no coherence of provision for learners.

18.23 The lack of a centrally managed system would hinder any assessment of value for money, make identifying gaps and duplications difficult and wouldn't enable the provision of timely and relevant information to those who need it.

18.24 Without central oversight of the whole system, it would also be difficult to achieve seamless and well planned pathways for learners across all sectors and ensure a continuous and consistent focus on quality of provision. The current arrangements put the Welsh Government at risk as the Welsh Ministers cannot use the data available to effectively inform strategic planning funding decisions or increase their responsiveness to emerging issues and effective pathways for long term learner outcomes.

Option 2 – The preferred approach

18.25 The Commission would have the ability to track the progress of each individual learner from the point they leave compulsory education and enter further education, apprenticeships or higher education as the case may be. The Commission would gather this information and carry out research and statistical analysis into the progress of learners generally and comparing those in particular categories.

18.26 The Commission would use this information both to inform the exercise of its own functions and to aid policy development by the Welsh Ministers. This would involve processing large amounts of personal data in compliance with the lawful processing requirements of the General Data Processing Regulations.

- 18.27 Thus, the Commission will have defined powers allowing it to receive, process and share learners' data at each stage. The Commission will need access to WED and Longitudinal Education Outcomes Study (LEOS) in order to do this, however there are multiple options around how these data flows will work in practice that are yet to be worked through in detail.
- 18.28 The Welsh Ministers would continue to receive the PLASC and EOTAS data from local authorities, who will continue to be responsible for collecting the initial data from schools and learners. The Welsh Government will then process the data to separate those parts that relate to further education, rather than compulsory education, and pass the further education data to the Commission. The Welsh Ministers will continue to rely on their existing powers to require, collect and process the data and will be provided with sufficient powers to share information with the Commission.
- 18.29 The Commission would be responsible for existing data gathered before it comes into existence, because it will be receiving all the data currently held by HEFCW as well as a significant amount from the Welsh Ministers. It will be able to process and combine different data sets: for example, linking the LLWR and Post-16 data with that received from HESA to analyse the progress of learners moving from further to higher education.
- 18.30 The Commission will also be able to enter into arrangements with third parties to collect and process data on its behalf (e.g. with HESA for higher education data). The Commission may maintain the existing data collection arrangements or make changes if and when it wishes.
- 18.31 The Commission would be able to publish research derived from its analysis of data, including statistical information, subject to a requirement that all personal information is anonymised so that nothing capable of identifying an individual is published. It may also contract third parties to undertake such publication, subject to the same restriction on identifying individuals.
- 18.32 Finally, the Commission would be under a duty to promote good practice in relation to data sharing among the persons and bodies it funds or regulates: for example by issuing guidance dealing with ICT systems and information security. It should review and update or replace its guidance as and when it considers necessary.

Key advantages of the preferred approach

- 18.33 The Commission would be in a position to take a broad view of the effectiveness of the tertiary education sector as a whole.
- 18.34 The benefits of this approach would be that it would be for the Commission to have overall responsibility for LLWR/Post-16 PLASC data and therefore control over data quality and assurance. This will in turn result in better understanding of further education and sixth form data overall, which will also improve any supporting research and statistical activity (e.g. reporting of data, identifying gaps/duplications etc.). Such an improvement would also result in an improved relationship with further education and Local Education Authority data suppliers.

18.35 A distinct beneficial outcome would be the acquisition of not only more coherent, but also more timely data as the Commission will have the flexibility to request new data/amend current data requests from further education providers and post-16 directly.

Key risks associated with the preferred approach

18.36 The risks posed by this option are:

- Reliance on a third party for higher education data. Local Education Authorities will continue to be responsible for collecting the initial data from schools and learners and Local Education Authorities and further education institutions would submit data to the Commission instead of Welsh Government. However, the Commission would still be reliant on HESA for higher education data.
- Increased security risk posed by the processing of personal data. There would be a need to implement/develop a more robust ICT solution for the purposes of collecting and quality assuring post-16 PLASC data and LLWR data. This would also require staff to be trained appropriately to handle these processes effectively.

Chapter 19. Costs and benefits

Background

- 19.1 The full options appraisal has been set out in Chapter 7. This Chapter outline the costs associated with the two highest ranking options (options 6 and 4a), in addition to Business as Usual (option 1).
- 19.2 The assessment of costs and benefits is centred on the 10 year period 2021-22 to 2030-31. If passed the Bill is expected to receive Royal Assent in summer 2022 and, consequently, it will be during 2021-22 that initial costs are expected to be incurred. The Commission is expected to become operational by 2023-24. This appraisal period has been chosen because, while the costs of the Commission are expected to reach a steady state within a short period of time, the anticipated benefits are most likely to be realised in the medium to long-term.
- 19.3 The Regulator Impact Assessment presents a best estimate of the costs and benefits of the Bill based upon the available evidence. The analysis has been informed by engagement with key stakeholders and the following pieces of work:
- a Welsh Government-commissioned high-level costing exercise performed by KPMG;
 - the Commission programme assumptions at the point in time of producing the Regulatory Impact Assessment; and
 - costs from comparator organisations such as Qualifications Wales
 - a report commissioned from Alma Economics - Cost benefits analysis of education reforms: A Rapid Evidence Assessment (REA) (Appendix B).
- 19.4 Nevertheless, it has been necessary to make a series of assumptions in order to complete the calculations. Any assumptions made are explained in the narrative and/or assumptions annex (Appendix A). In light of the uncertainty surrounding some of the evidence and assumptions, all cost estimates have been rounded to the nearest £1,000.
- 19.5 As is standard practice in economic appraisal, the cost estimates have been discounted using HM Treasury's central discount rate of 3.5%.
- 19.6 A further due diligence exercise will be carried out following the Bill's introduction which will provide more up to date figures than is included in this report.

Benefits Realisation Plan

- 19.7 The purpose of the benefits realisation plan is to;
- provide details of the benefits emanating from the programme,
 - identify those responsible for realising the benefits,
 - state baselines from which benefits will be measured,
 - identify a benefit realisation timeline, and
 - form the basis of post programme reviews to determine whether the planned benefits have been realised.
- 19.8 The benefits identified in the plan support and are aligned with the programme goals and objectives.

- 19.9 The Benefits Realisation Plan forms part of a suite of programme management documents. Programme benefits will also be reflected in this Regulatory Impact Assessment. To ensure consistency each document will inform the other and they will be treated as an integrated suite of programme information to inform future reviews, including Gateway reviews and for evaluation purposes.

Alma Economics cost benefits analysis of education reforms: A Rapid Evidence Assessment (REA)

- 19.10 The Welsh Government commissioned Alma Economics to conduct a Rapid Evidence Assessment of the national and international evidence base on conducting cost-benefit analysis of policy in respect of tertiary education. This has been broadened out to also consider evidence on wider education reforms and to also provide some coverage of other Impact Assessment practices, specifically in Wales. Both academic literature and public sector publications have been considered.

Preferred option (option 6): Establish the Commission for Tertiary Education and Research

Costs to Welsh Government and the Commission

- 19.11 Due to the unavailability of key decisions, several significant assumptions have been made around staffing, IT costs and location which could have a large impact on the forecast figures. These assumptions are set out in Appendix A. It is important to note that a change to these assumptions could have a significant impact on the costings.
- 19.12 A key cost driver is the location strategy to be adopted by the new organisation. This could have a significant impact on the number of staff who transfer across to the new organisation, as well as the locations costs themselves.
- 19.13 Because of the uncertainty of the assumptions the estimates for this option need to be taken into account with a +/- 30 per cent range. This range will get smaller closer to establishment as decisions are made and assumptions are finalised.
- 19.14 For option 6, Welsh Government have assumed that the Commission will have a total complement of 169 staff, comprising 53 from HEFCW. The staffing costs will fall ultimately on the Welsh Government as the funder of the Commission, however, staffing will be covered in both the Welsh Government and the Commission budgets (once established), as the staffing costs include the policy and sponsorship teams in Welsh Government who will manage the relationship with the new Commission. There are significant costs associated with this option compared with option 1. These costs are presented in table 19.2 at the end of this Chapter, and explained further in Appendix A.
- 19.15 The total cost of this option is estimated to be £198.5m over the appraisal period (£170.6m in present value terms). This represents an additional cost of £45.0m compared to the Do Nothing option (£38.6m in present value terms).

Comparator costs

19.16 In determining the costings for option 6, Welsh Government have drawn heavily on Qualifications Wales and Welsh Government costs for elements of the ICT costings, set up costs etc. Further information on the assumptions used is included at Appendix A.

Costs to stakeholders

19.17 The potential costs to wider stakeholders across the sector are unknown.

19.18 The process of stakeholder engagement has been on-going as the Bill has been developed. Once introduced, further discussions will take place with stakeholders as to any estimated costs to inform the impacts on wider stakeholders.

19.19 The list of anticipated benefits below reflects the workings from a series of workshops held in November 2018 and March 2019, aimed at identifying anticipated benefits that will result from establishing the Commission. This list has also been informed by a review of earlier work conducted by the Bill team and by Education and Skills Research staff during the preparation of this Regulatory Impact Assessment.

19.20 Responses obtained from external stakeholders during the technical consultation focus group activity have also been taken into account.

Impact on bodies within the tertiary education sector

19.21 The following impacts have been considered in relation to the provisions in the Bill.

Statement of priorities

19.22 This approach to strategic planning is in line with Welsh Government's revised model for managing relationships with arms-length bodies. It has been designed to give the sector aims and objectives which extend over a term of government and thereby present an opportunity for strategic planning and funding over a longer time frame.

Civic Mission

19.23 The duty the Commission will have to promote the pursuit of a civic mission may be discharged in the exercise of its other functions. The Commission will need to determine how it expects tertiary education institutions and learning providers to comply with the requirements. However, the concept is already familiar to the higher and further education sectors, and as defined in this Bill, is an extension of their obligations under the Well-being and Future Generations Act (Wales) 2015 meaning some of the necessary infrastructure and frameworks are already in place. The concept of 'adding value' extends into other areas of tertiary education already and there will be many examples of best practice to draw on. It is envisaged that the initial impacts will be minimal.

Learner Engagement Code

- 19.24 The Code is part of mandatory, on-going registration conditions. Most providers will have arrangements to ensure learner representation is in place, however, any new guidance will be developed by the Commission in consultation with stakeholders. This guidance is likely to include key principles to learner engagement and practical steps to assist consistent implementation across the post-16 sector.

Registration

- 19.25 Upon commencement of the registration provisions under the Bill and the enactment of relevant secondary legislation, there may be some impact on higher education providers in Wales in undergoing initial registration with the Commission. The majority of registration conditions will cover matters which are already regulated or assured by HEFCW, but the change in regulator and the means by which regulation is conducted may lead to some transitional administrative impact. The Welsh Government will seek to ensure when consulting on the relevant secondary legislation to ensure that this impact is minimised in the transition to the regulatory framework.

Quality

- 19.26 It is not expected that there will be any major immediate impact on providers upon commencement of the quality provisions, as assessment and inspection arrangements in both the higher and further education sectors will remain largely unchanged by the legislation. This assumes that the QAA is the body designated by Welsh Government to conduct higher education quality assessments, on the recommendation of the Commission.
- 19.27 The Commission will take on responsibility for agreeing and funding Estyn's work in the post-16 sector. There may be some minor transitional impact on Estyn as a result, and Welsh Government will work closely with Estyn to smooth this transition as it commences its close working relationship with the Commission.

Governance

- 19.28 It is not anticipated that the higher education governance provisions (Part 7 of the Bill), the Welsh Ministers intervention functions in respect of further education institutions (Chapter 3 of Part 2 of the Bill), or the provisions for the Commission's duty to monitor and report on financial sustainability (section 78 of the Bill) will create additional burdens for stakeholders from day one.
- 19.29 The higher education governance provisions extend the Welsh Ministers' existing powers to amend or repeal the statutory requirements placed on the governing documents of higher education corporations under the 1988 Act. In exercising these powers, the Welsh Ministers are required to consult with the Commission and any other persons considered appropriate. These provisions also make minor amendments to the Welsh Ministers' powers to dissolve a higher education corporation in Wales.
- 19.30 The provisions for the Welsh Ministers' powers to intervene in the conduct of a further education institution in Wales largely carry forward existing provisions in section 57 of the 1992 Act. The Welsh Ministers' will only consider intervention if one or more of the grounds for intervention set out in the provisions are met as is the case now.

19.31 The Bill places the Commission under a duty to monitor and report on the financial sustainability of certain tertiary education providers. Under these provisions the Commission must include a report on the current financial position of monitored providers within its annual report submitted to the Welsh Ministers. At the same time as submitting its annual report the Commission must also submit a separate report on the financial outlook of monitored providers. In discharging its monitoring duty, it is anticipated that the Commission will, wherever possible, utilise information gathered from providers to monitor compliance with conditions of registration or terms and conditions of funding. However, the information requirements will become clearer once the Commission's regulatory arrangements have been developed.

Benefits

19.32 Further benefits for option 6 can be found in detail in Chapter 7.

19.33 The list of anticipated benefits in this section reflects the workings from a series of workshops held with Welsh Government officials in November 2018 and March 2019, aimed at identifying anticipated benefits that will result from establishing the Commission. This list has also been informed by a review of earlier work conducted by Welsh Government staff during the preparation of this Regulatory Impact Assessment.

19.34 Responses obtained from external stakeholders during the technical consultation focus group activity have also been taken into account.

19.35 The work undertaken to identify benefits associated with reform and to inform the Regulatory Impact Assessment included a benefits realisation plan and a report undertaken by Alma Economics, whose findings are summarised in this Chapter (see Appendix B for full report).

19.36 In June 2019 the Welsh Government social researchers commissioned Alma Economics to conduct a Rapid Evidence Assessment of the evidence base on conducting cost-benefit analysis of policy in respect of tertiary education. This was broadened to also consider evidence on wider education reforms and provide some coverage of other Impact Assessment practices, specifically in Wales. Both academic literature and public sector publications were considered.

19.37 The nature of the benefits identified in this Regulatory Impact Assessment means that they do not lend themselves well to quantification, thus benefits will be described throughout this section. One of the key findings of the review of the evidence for the Alma Economics report supports this:

“There are very few studies that provide quantitative evaluations of the benefits of educational reforms. This is a feature of both academic research and publications from the public sector. Within the literature, there is some criticism of the suitability of quantified CBA as a technique on the basis that it may be an intractable task to produce robust quantitative estimates for many policy reforms.”

Where the impacts of PCET are quantified in the literature, e.g. an assessment of the graduate premium, it is not clear how these would be applied to cost benefit analysis.”

- 19.38 The establishment of the Commission will enable stronger and more secure national and regional planning, strengthen the link between research and education, and deliver a tertiary education system that is better placed to respond to macro-changes; to plot paths for learners; and to bring the sector together in a way that provides for genuine life-long learning and skills development.
- 19.39 As noted above, these high-level benefits were arrived at through a process of internal and external consultation and reviewed by an independent consultant during the Rapid Evidence Assessment. The report found that there is evidence supporting many of the benefits identified for current proposals for reform in Wales (as outlined in the draft benefit realisation plan). Evidence has not been identified for all the benefits listed in the benefit realisation plan, although this does not inevitably mean these benefits will not be realised in practice. Some features of the current proposed reforms are likely to be under-researched in the previous evidence base or relatively novel and so lacking historical precedents. Some additional benefits that are not included in the benefits realisation plan were also identified.
- 19.40 It's important to note from the outset that some benefits resulting from the establishment of the Commission may not be realised for a number of years.

High-Level benefits of creating the Commission

- 19.41 The benefits realisation work identified a number of benefits arising from the high level objectives of the Commission (see also Chapter 7). The majority of anticipated benefits for learners, businesses, communities, tertiary education and training providers and the Welsh Government will, in the main, be derived from how the Commission delivers on Welsh Government priorities, develops and implements its own policy, its relationship with providers and other organisations with an interest and role in sector in Wales, and those providers' and organisations' response and adaptation to these changes. Benefits are most likely to be realised in the medium and longer term.
- 19.42 Increased public confidence in the tertiary education system in Wales is the benefit most likely to be attributable to the establishment of the Commission. This will depend on the realisation of all other anticipated benefits listed below. Similar to the Welsh Government, all the impacts reviewed by Alma Economics expect a relevant intermediate benefit that would effectively increase public confidence in the sector.
- 19.43 Simplification of the regulatory landscape and more coherent regulation will discharge providers from the compliance burden of dealing with multiple overseeing bodies. Standards of compliance will be clear and all providers will be overseen by a single body, reducing any confusion currently caused by overlapping roles across the sector between the different agencies.
- Consistency of approach to the regulation of institutions across the sector through a common purpose.

19.44 The Alma Economics research highlights the importance of continuing to prioritise funding in education and its positive effects on social mobility. Cash transfers and other demand-side financing schemes aiming to increase participation amongst people from disadvantaged backgrounds have immediate short-term impacts on the distribution of access to education, as well as dynamic long-run impacts on intergenerational employment opportunities and poverty reduction (Tiongson, 2005). The Commission could allocate funds to more efficiently target people who leave education too early because of financial constraints, and Welsh Government expect significant distributional impacts to result. Participation rates and post-16 retention rates could increase if financial support is better able to target people who cannot afford post-compulsory education. In this way, the Commission can effectively succeed in meeting two of its objectives; increasing participation and retention rates, as well as reducing the attainment and outcome gaps between learners from poorer and other disadvantaged background and their other more well-off peers.

- Increase in learner participation rates and more post-16 learners progressing to higher learning [vocational and academic] and/or well-paid employment.
- Reduction in attainment and outcomes gaps (employability and onward progression) between learners from poorest backgrounds and other potentially marginalised groups and their peers.

19.45 A single regulator will enable a comparable and consistent approach to quality assurance and assessment across the sector. The Commission will be able to bring together and oversee agencies that supervise and quality assure the sector under the current system. The Commission will be able to pursue a common national approach aligned with the Programme for Government.

- Integrated and improved evidence base, providing better quality, comparable sector-wide data and information to inform policy development, and decision making at all levels (the Welsh Government, providers, employers and learners).
- One of the roles of the new Commission will be to introduce an improved, compliant and effective sector wide data collection, analysis and dissemination system that helps ensure timely, accessible and relevant information about the sector in Wales, and which is available for all who need it (see also Chapter 18). Specifically, more detailed, centralised and publicly available information reduces information asymmetries and improves social mobility. Learners will make better decisions from improved information and improved comparability among providers. With improved collection of and access to data, the Commission and the Welsh Government will be more effective in setting the direction and detail of policy in respect of tertiary education.
- A more coherent and consistent funding model across the sector.

19.46 A clearer, more efficient, and more flexible regulatory system should ensure that the regulatory burden results in appropriate accountability and transparency for tertiary education providers in receipt of public funds, particularly in regards to educational quality, financial assurance, and provider governance.

- Improvement in the financial health of tertiary education providers in Wales

19.47 The Alma Economics report identifies expectations for cost efficiencies, in the forms of savings from the removal of duplicate work after the merging of government bodies. Nonetheless, the actual reduction in administration costs, and the achieved amount of efficiency savings, will be determined by the final size and structure of the Commission as with the cases of the Office for Students and UKRI and are therefore unknown at this time.

- Better alignment between funding and the cost of the same provision delivered across the tertiary education system.

19.48 The list of benefits below was also identified through the Welsh Government's benefit realisation and consultation work:

- Enhanced problem detection and prevention capability, including the ability to respond to macro changes, and to mitigate disruption through changes in learner and employer demand.
- Improvements in the overall learner satisfaction.
- Improved matching between available training and research opportunities (supply side), and employer and learners' requests (demand side).
- Increased number of, and income generated by, collaborative RI projects.
- Increases in recognition of the value of both academic and vocational qualifications.
- The creation of a coherent route map for learners, employers and providers.
- Reductions in the number of duplicated courses across the tertiary education sector that are uneconomic to deliver.
- Improved planning and delivery of the skills set required in a particular locality and/or region.
- Increase in the joint use of facilities (shared service agreement).

19.49 Research by Alma Economics did not return any specific evidence in the literature concerning how the introduction of the Commission in the tertiary education sector could result in these benefits. As noted earlier this does not imply that these benefits cannot be realised but that some features of the current proposed reforms are likely to be under-researched in the previous evidence base or relatively novel and so lacking historical precedents.

19.50 This research also found evidence for additional benefits, not originally identified by the Welsh Government, which may be realised through the creation of the Commission (see Appendix B for further detail).

- A boost to private sector productivity may result from lower administration costs and more room for strategic leadership in the funding of research.
- Other less easily quantified benefits (non-market benefits) include improved health and wellbeing, better development of public policy and delivery of public services, and cost avoidance through resilience to shocks (UK Government, 2016b).

19.51 Table 19.1, below, is taken from the Alma economics report and shows the benefits evidenced in the literature of the creation of the Commission for the Welsh Government and external stakeholders. The table summarises the benefits found in the review grouped by the benefits categories, as those specified in the benefits realisation plan, and the groups for which these benefits are expected to accrue. “Direct” are those benefits that accrue to the Welsh Government. Indirect benefits include the benefits for providers, and wider benefits are those that will accrue to different groups of society (i.e. taxpayers, employers, learners).

19.52 The assumptions in Table 19.1 are based on the expectation of the UK Government that it would save 10% of its operating cost by introducing the Office for Students and UKRI and it follows that it is reasonable to assume that the Welsh Government will see some reduction in its administrative costs, resulting from the removal of duplicate work and greater coordination of functions across the sector. However, these costs are currently unknown.

19.53 As costs are currently unknown, the Welsh Government cannot confirm the specific costs for the groups noted in this table, however it should be noted that these activities may not necessarily result in an increase in cost.

Summary

19.54 As the cost benefits are unknown, it is not possible to quantify the cost benefits associated with reform. It is difficult to compare the costs and benefits in an objective way. In such a situation, a judgement has to be based on whether the additional costs are outweighed by the benefits.

Option 4a – Centralisation

Costs

19.55 Table 19.3 below shows the estimated costs of centralising HEFCW and the Further Education Division within the Welsh Government for the next ten years (baselined at budgets for 2019/20), the costs of which fall to the Welsh Government. The assumptions for costing this option are set out in Appendix A.

19.56 The total cost of this option is estimated to be £172.2m over the appraisal period (£148.6m in present value terms). This represents an additional cost of £18.8m compared to the Do Nothing option (£16.6m in present value terms).

Benefits

19.57 The benefits for option 4a can be found in detail in Chapter 7.

Summary

19.58 The advantages of centralisation option are outweighed by the disadvantages. Whilst Centralisation could potentially realise similar benefits to the creation of the Commission and have lower costs, ultimately the potential risks related to ONS reclassification and resistance from stakeholders mean that this option has been discounted (see Chapter 7 for more detail).

Option 1 – do nothing/Business as Usual

Costs

19.59 Technically, as a 'do nothing' option, there should be no additional costs associated with this option.

19.60 Table 19.4 below shows the estimated costs of maintaining HEFCW and the Further Education Division within the Welsh Government for the next ten years (baselined at budgets for 2019/20), the costs of which fall to the Welsh Government.

19.61 The cost of the Do Nothing options is estimated to be £153.4m over the appraisal period or £132.0m in present value terms.

Benefits

19.62 The benefits for option 1 can be found in detail in Chapter 7.

Summary

19.63 Option 1 offers the lowest cost, however this option perpetuates fragmentation and fails to address the need for joined up planning. It fails to meet the policy requirement, and is not felt to be a suitable option to pursue.

Chapter 20. Integrated Impact Assessments

20.1 Specific impact assessments have also been undertaken, which cover the whole of the Bill. A summary of the impacts are included below. All impact assessments have been published²³ and where the impact is directly relevant to a particular provision, it has been identified within the relevant assessments. Specific impact assessments have been undertaken on the following topics:

- Children's Rights
- Equality
- Rural Proofing
- Data
- Welsh Language
- Biodiversity
- The Socio-economic Duty
- Justice Impact Assessment

Children's Rights

20.2 The potential impacts identified on children via the Children's Rights impact assessment have been positive; The Commission will promote a shared focus for the tertiary education sector, improving information, advice and services to learners and businesses across Wales.

20.3 The intended positive impacts on children and young people are:

- Strengthening the arrangements to protect learners studying at tertiary education providers.
- Ensuring that learning and training opportunities are of the highest quality and deliver the desired learner outcome.
- Guaranteeing equal respect for both vocational and academic routes.
- Clearer access to courses.
- A clear link to career pathways by linking in with the employment sector.

20.4 The Commission will be required in law to ensure that suitable provision is available for young people to access tertiary education.

20.5 With its overview of all tertiary education learning providers, the Commission will be perfectly placed to ensure that gaps in provision are addressed and that barriers faced by different groups of young people are identified and resolved.

20.6 In the long-term it is hoped that this will increase the ability of learners to access sustainable employment and career success, working to ensure that the correct learning opportunities are available to match the needs of the Welsh labour market.

20.7 This in turn will lead to greater potential for employability resulting in associated improvements in income levels, health and wellbeing for children and young people and their families for current and future generations.

20.8 No negative impacts on children have been identified.

Equality

- 20.9 The Equalities Act 2010 places a General Equality Duty on Welsh public authorities to have due regard to the need to eliminate unlawful discrimination, harassment and victimisation, as well as to advance equality of opportunity and to foster good relations between people who share a protected characteristic and those who do not.
- 20.10 An Equality Impact Assessment (EIA) has been completed for the Bill. This has indicated that the proposals as a whole are unlikely to affect people with protected characteristics.
- 20.11 It has identified a distinction between those aged up to the age of 19 and those aged over 19 in further education. The provisions proposed within the Bill provide for a continuation of existing duties to secure proper and reasonable facilities for further education and training for learners aged 16 to 19 and 19+ as is currently contained in section 31 of the 2000 Act.
- 20.12 Section 90 of the Bill places a duty on the Commission to secure proper facilities for further education and training for persons aged 16 to 19, suitable the requirements of individuals and which meet local curriculum entitlements under the Learning and Skills Act 2000.
- 20.13 Section 91 of the Bill places a duty on the Commission to secure proper facilities for relevant further education and training for eligible persons aged 19 and over. The Commission must also secure reasonable facilities for further education and training for persons aged 19 and over. Facilities are reasonable if they are of a quantity and quality that the Commission can be reasonably expected to secure.
- 20.14 The effect of these provisions is to create slightly differing criteria for proper facilities which must be secured for young persons aged 16 to 19 and adults over 19. However, the inclusion of a duty to secure proper facilities for persons aged 19 and over reduces the previous distinction under the 2000 Act.
- 20.15 Provision for which proper facilities must be secured for people aged 19 and over will be specified in regulations, and therefore may be more specific than the duty for persons aged 16 to 19. This is to enable Welsh Government and the Commission to most effectively allocate limited financial resources.
- 20.16 The broader range of qualifications and previous education which persons aged 19 and over might bring to further education and training when compared with persons aged 16 requires that regulations allow the provision prioritised to be specified, so as to control costs and make clear which provision will be available. This is not necessary for the provision for persons aged 16 to 19, where there are already well established patterns of provision for school leavers who largely enter education at this age with similar prior qualifications and educational background.
- 20.17 The power to make regulations regarding eligible persons for the duty to secure proper facilities for persons aged 19+ includes a power to make reference to age. This could create further possibilities for age discrimination, the equality impacts of which would need to be fully assessed when preparing and presenting those regulations.

Rural Proofing

- 20.18 The provisions proposed within the Bill will apply to anyone undertaking or providing tertiary education or research in Wales, including learners and providers based in rural locations.
- 20.19 Discussions held with stakeholders during the technical consultation suggested that access to choice was seen as the greatest challenge for rural areas in Wales, for example in terms of limitations in non-tertiary areas or for access to higher education.
- 20.20 For providers, provision is more costly in rural areas although this can be mitigated to some extent through online or blended learning, as long as learners have access to the relevant technology. Support for learners can be more difficult to deliver over a sparse rural area.
- 20.21 It is envisaged that the extent of the impact of our proposals on rural communities will be moderate. The establishment of the Commission should have a positive impact on meeting the needs of learners in both rural and urban areas throughout Wales and will help to establish clear and flexible learning and career pathways, providing better information and advice to learners and potential learners wishing to participate or progress in post 16 education and training.
- 20.22 The Commission will have an overview of all tertiary education providers along with the education and training opportunities that those providers deliver. It will therefore be well placed to identify gaps in provision, including problems faced by learners in parts of Wales where they are unable to access the courses they require and problems faced by businesses where they are unable to recruit appropriately skilled workers.
- 20.23 Provisions within the Bill will ensure that the Commission must, when securing further education and training, have regard to the requirements of employers in relation to the education and training required in different sectors of employment.
- 20.24 The Commission must promote tertiary education and research in a way that contributes to the development of a sustainable and innovative economy in Wales. In discharging this duty (section 7) it must have regard to: the reasonable requirements of industry, commerce, finance, the professions and other employers regarding tertiary education and research and innovation. By working closely with Regional Skills Partnerships, the Commission will have the opportunity to review the learning provision available, in order to align this with the skills needs of local businesses and learners.
- 20.25 Long-term, this should help learners to access the skills required to obtain high quality employment within an increasingly competitive labour market.
- 20.26 As the impact on rural learners will be moderate and it is not proposed that the provisions of the Bill will have a direct impact on rural communities, a full rural proofing impact assessment has not been completed.

Data

- 20.27 The Universities and Colleges Admissions Council (UCAS) provides applications and admissions services to higher education institutions, and collects personal data from prospective learners that apply to higher education providers. The majority of higher education providers use UCAS to manage their entry of higher education courses.
- 20.28 The Bill creates a new Commission to oversee the tertiary education providers in Wales and the Commission will receive this data from UCAS.
- 20.29 The Bill will provide the Welsh Ministers with power to require “application-to-acceptance” information from bodies providing admissions services to Welsh higher education institutions (i.e. UCAS). They will be able to provide this information to approved persons in the same way and with the same conditions and safeguards as the Secretary of State in section 80 of the Higher education and Research Bill (HERA). The Bill will also have a power to provide the information to the Commission, which should be under a duty to take account of the data when exercising its functions.
- 20.30 The Commission will be able to publish research derived from its analysis of data, including statistical information, subject to a requirement that all personal information is anonymised. It will also be able to contract third parties to undertake such publication, subject to the same restriction on anonymity.
- 20.31 The Commission will be under a duty to promote good practice in relation to data sharing among the persons and bodies it funds or regulates.
- 20.32 The Bill amounts to a creation of new powers/duties regarding personal data. The Commission will ensure that data protection compliance is fully considered once it has been established.
- 20.33 The legislation allows the Commission to require information from UCAS in regards to its application to acceptance data. The Welsh Government currently receives this information from UCAS, and the new power provides a legal basis for this exchange of information.
- 20.34 The Welsh Government has engaged with UCAS, who have confirmed that they already have an agreement in place for the Office for Students in England to provide this data. Therefore it is considered that there will be minimal impact to learners in implementing this power.
- 20.35 Compliance with those notices is enforceable by injunction, made on application of the Welsh Ministers
- 20.36 The Commission will have powers to require any person that receives funding from it (or responsibility for regulating) to provide any information it needs for the exercise of its functions.
- 20.37 The number of individuals likely to be affected as a result of our proposals is believed to be very small. The system currently operates without being enforceable by injunction and this element is only being introduced as a precaution to ensure the information will be available in the future if colleagues or providers change. Officials envisage that it is unlikely that this power will be used but have requested the power to safeguard the system.

20.38 The Data Privacy Impact Assessment has been cleared by the Freedom of Information and Data Protection Senior Case Advisor

Welsh Language

20.39 Cymraeg 2050 is Wales' national strategy for increasing the number of Welsh speakers to a million by 2050. The Welsh Government is fully committed to the target of a million Welsh speakers included in the Taking Wales Forward programme for government, and the Programme for Government 2021-2026. A thriving Welsh language is also part of one of the seven well-being goals set out in the WFG Act, as explained above.

20.40 The setting up of a new Commission is clearly linked to the aims of the Cymraeg 2050 Strategy in terms of improving the process of planning Welsh-medium provision in post-16 education and training. These aims include ensuring that all learners can develop their Welsh Language skills to their full potential and the encouragement of robust linguistic progression from one phase of education and training to the next; and to improve the ways of providing central support for Welsh-medium education and training. As a public body in Wales it's expected that the new Commission will consider the Welsh language in all of its activities, including strategy and policy development, delivery and funding of learning activities, the funding of individual institutions and research activity. The Cymraeg 2050 Strategy has a specific aim to 'develop post-compulsory education provision which increases rates of progression and supports everyone, whatever their command of the language, to develop Welsh language skills for use socially and in the workplace.'

20.41 The proposed Commission will have a direct and critical role in supporting the Welsh Government to achieve this aim. The aim for the Welsh Language policy is to develop a system that enables learning, assessment and progression through the medium of Welsh.

20.42 The Welsh Government also has a statutory obligation to fully consider the effects of its work on the Welsh language. Considering the impacts, both positive and negative, of its work on the Welsh language, and Welsh speaking people and communities is an essential part of the policy development and delivery process.

20.43 Increasing the opportunities for learners to continue into post-16 Welsh medium education and training, whether in schools, further education colleges, apprenticeships or higher education will allow them to further develop their Welsh language skills. This increase in the number of individuals with Welsh language skills at a range of levels will benefit the communities they live in and will help to create a bilingual workforce.

Biodiversity

20.44 The Commission will be subject to the section 6 duty under the Environment (Wales) Act 2016 and will therefore be obliged to seek to maintain and enhance biodiversity in the exercise of its functions. This will include embedding and raising awareness of biodiversity through the authority's day to day activities, policies, plans, programmes and projects. In addition, the Commission will have a duty to promote the pursuit of a civic mission by institutions in Wales within the further and higher education sector. Within this legislation civic mission is defined as "action for the purpose of promoting or improving the economic, social, environmental or cultural well-being of Wales (including action aimed at achieving any of the well-being goals)".

20.45 The Commission will need to reflect on progress against the civic mission duty within their annual reports, alongside their other priorities. An implementation project has been set up and the establishment of the new Commission is being considered as part of that project. Although the Bill itself will not affect species and habitats, until more information is known regarding the location of the premises for the new body, the impact on local environments cannot be fully assessed. However, these factors will be taken into account when deciding upon the location of the Commission.

20.46 To demonstrate compliance with Section 6 of the Environment (Wales) Act 2016, a Biodiversity Impact Assessment has been completed and no impacts were identified. However, once established, the Commission will be under a duty to publish a plan and a triannual report on how they are complying with the duty.

The Socio-economic Duty

20.47 The socio-economic duty requires relevant public bodies, including Welsh Ministers to have due regard to the need to reduce inequality of outcome that results from socio-economic disadvantage. The Socio-economic Duty applies to the Welsh Government and therefore Ministers are required to give due regard to the Duty when strategic decisions are taken forward. However the Commission for Tertiary Education and Research (the Commission) is not captured under the Duty, although the Welsh Government would like to see all public bodies working in the spirit of the Duty.

20.48 The Commission for tertiary education is intended to provide long-term benefit to providers, learners and employers by aligning all tertiary education under one arm's length body and putting learners' needs at the heart of decision-making. This should help to ensure that learners are able to look at all the options available to make informed decisions about learning routes appropriate to their needs and aspirations. The strategy is to deliver coherent progression through and between the different post-16 education sectors, so that the individual's learning pathway meets their needs and aspirations and is not defined by artificial boundaries.

Justice Impact Assessment

20.49 The Bill re-states an offence for wilfully obstructing the Chief Inspector (of Estyn) in the exercise of functions in relation to an inspection by them under the Bill. Reviews of Commission decisions will be by an appointed person or panel, as occurs under the 2015 Act. Recommendations by that person or panel will then be made to the Commission, who will make a fresh decision (or stand by its original decision).

20.50 In addition, within the data provisions where the Commission will have a power of direction to request information from an institution or certain persons. Any such direction is enforceable by injunction, However, because there will be mechanisms in place for ensuring the information is collated as a matter of routine, this is considered unlikely in practice.

20.51 In conclusion, the likely impact on the justice system of the proposals in the Bill is likely to be minimal or nil.

20.52 The Justice Impact Assessment has been approved by the Ministry of Justice.

Chapter 21. Competition Assessment

21.1 The organisations that will be affected by the legislation include:

- Sector 1: Organisations funding and regulating post-16 education and training, and research.
 - The Higher Education Funding Council Wales
 - The Welsh Government
 - The UK research councils
 - Voluntary and commercial funders of research
 - Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education
 - Estyn
 - Local Authorities in their role to maintained school sixth forms and as funders of Adult and Community Learning
- Sector 2: Organisations delivering post 16 training and education (providers)
 - Higher Education Institutions in carrying out their various functions (including teaching, student support, learner experience, research, civic engagement, functions)
 - Further Education Institutions
 - Schools with local authority maintained sixth forms
 - Local Authorities in their role as providers of Adult and Community Learning
- Sector 3: Commercial and charitable organisations carrying out and participating in (part-) publicly-funded research.
- Sector 4: Suppliers of goods and services to the above organisations.
 - Examining boards and other qualifications providers
 - Business, premises and catering services
 - Educational services and equipment suppliers

21.2 Currently the only places in which competition exists amongst the organisations above are:

- (a) between the organisations in Sector 2, (which seek to offer training and education which is competitively priced and provides value for money). In some communities, there might exist unnecessary duplication of courses on offer by different providers. This competition can be destructive (for example it can result in two competing institutions both being unable to attract sufficient learners to make either course viable, with an outcome of failing the needs of learners, where rationalising to one course would allow learners needs to be met)
- (b) between the organisations in Sector 3, who seek to be preferred research partners.
- (c) between the organisations in Sector 4, who compete to supply the desired goods at competitive prices.

Risks of the legislation upon competition

- 21.3 It is anticipated that the new Commission will influence the training and teaching offer that institutions in Sector 2 will make. It may, positively, support the creation of new courses that are required to meet the Welsh Government objectives to improve learner opportunities. It may, negatively, become aware of provision which is regarded as sub-standard, or duplicative, and may accordingly approach a provider with a request to modify its offer. It may ultimately refuse some of the funding provided to support delivery of a particular course.
- 21.4 The Commission may provide or support the provision of funds for research to the organisations in Sector 3.
- 21.5 However, the functions of regulation and quality assurance within the Sector concerned already sit within the powers of the Welsh Government, HEFCW and the UK Research Councils, and their sponsored bodies, and the Bill will not create any different or additional impact upon the competition opportunities that currently exist within the Sectors set out above.
- 21.6 The competition filter test has been completed

Chapter 22. Post-implementation Review

22.1 The review and evaluation of the policy contained in the Bill will focus on the implementation of the following:

- The Commission's statutory functions.
- The Commission's responsibility for reviewing the effectiveness of the tertiary education system in Wales, including its own position in that system.
- The measurement of levels of public confidence in the organisation as the independent Commission for Tertiary Education and Research in Wales, and in the tertiary education system before and after the establishment of the Commission; and
- Review of the benefits, actual costs and impacts of the establishment of the Commission.

The Commission statutory functions

22.2 The Commission will have functions in relation to tertiary education system in Wales. Similar functions are currently exercised by the Welsh Ministers and HEFCW.

22.3 The provision, planning, funding and regulation of further education, higher education, adult learning and maintained school sixth form (via local authorities): funding of research and innovation; issue and review of Welsh apprenticeship frameworks and the issuing of Welsh apprenticeship certificates; and oversight and regulation of the quality and standards of education and training in the tertiary education, training and research sector are within the Commission's remit.

22.4 The Commission will be required to produce an annual report to the Welsh Ministers on (amongst other issues) the performance of its functions, and progress made during the year towards achieving the objectives set out in its strategic plan, and progress towards meeting Welsh Ministers' strategic priorities. The Welsh Ministers will lay a copy of the annual report before the Senedd.

22.5 The method for producing this annual report will be the responsibility of the Commission to design and perform. Reporting arrangements will be agreed with the Welsh Government's Sponsorship Unit. The first Annual Report will be prepared in 2024.

22.6 In producing the report, the Commission will be required to report on, amongst other matters, the performance of its functions, with reference to its overarching aims and high level goals. It will also, for example, be expected to report on how the Commission will engage with stakeholders in delivering its functions.

22.7 The Commission will be held to account by the Senedd either in full session or by Senedd Committee and the Senedd will receive a copy of the Annual report laid by Welsh Ministers. The Public Accounts Committee will also be able to scrutinise the Commission's finances.

Reviewing the tertiary education and research system in Wales

22.8 In support of the high level objective of:

- ensuring the effectiveness of Welsh tertiary education and research;
- raising standards for all; and
- improving learner participation, progression, performance and outcomes, the Commission will review the inter-relationships between different bodies, including its own relationship with those it funds and regulates.

22.9 This will, for example, enable the Commission to advise Welsh Ministers on the development of tertiary education and research in Wales in the longer term.

22.10 The Welsh Ministers will lay the Commission's annual report and this will be made available to the Senedd. Part of its reporting on an annual basis may include a general analysis of tertiary education and research in Wales.

22.11 A significant argument for setting up the Commission is the desire to have a body that can take a broad view of the effectiveness of tertiary education and research in Wales, as a whole and has the ability to track the progress of each individual learner from the point they leave compulsory education and enter further education, apprenticeships or higher education as the case may be.

22.12 The Commission will gather this information and carry out research and statistical analysis into the progress of learners generally and comparing those in particular categories. The Commission will have powers to require any person that receives funding from it, or that it is responsible for regulating, to provide any information it needs for the exercise of its functions, including monitoring and evaluation.

Public confidence in Wales' tertiary education

22.13 Alongside the development of the Regulatory Impact Assessment, a benefits realisation plan has been developed as part of the Commission's Implementation Programme. To ensure consistency each document informs the other and will be treated as companion pieces for future post implementation review and evaluation purposes.

22.14 A significant argument for the establishment of the Commission, and this has been identified as an overarching benefit that is most likely to be attributable, is 'increased public confidence in the tertiary education system in Wales'.

22.15 While initial review plans are laid out below, the Commission will need to determine how it will best monitor public confidence on an on-going basis in the longer term.

22.16 It is proposed that two baseline years will be used for future evaluation and data collection purposes, including the measurement of public confidence:

- Academic year 2022/23: the year immediately prior to the establishment of the Commission will be used as the default baseline for measuring the impact and/or realisation by the Commission of identified programme benefits, including public confidence (other data may be used when this is not available).
- Academic year 2017/18: will also be used. This coincides with the consultation on the White Paper 'Public Good and a Prosperous Wales' in 2017, and precedes the technical consultation 'Public Good and a Prosperous Wales – the next steps' which ran from April to July 2018 – a document which has the potential to influence behaviours in anticipation of the establishment of the Commission.

22.17 Measurement of public confidence may also be informed through existing surveys currently undertaken by the Welsh Government and other partners. The new body should be able to utilise these or commission new ones.

Review of the benefits and impacts of the establishment of the Commission

22.18 The magnitude of benefits and other outcomes emanating from this programme is expected to be significant – they will not, however, be realised until several years after the Commission has been established and associated reforms begin. As noted above a benefits realisation plan has been prepared.

22.19 The benefits realisation plan:

- Provides details of the benefits emanating from the establishment of the Commission;
- identifies those responsible for realising the benefits;
- states baselines from which benefits will be measured; and will
- form the basis of post programme evaluation and reviews to determine whether the planned benefits have been realised.

22.20 The benefits identified in this plan support and are aligned with the programme goals and objectives.

22.21 An analytical plan will be prepared, which will set out the statistical and research work required to address any identified gaps in the available data and to monitor and evaluate the impact of the proposed reforms.

22.22 From July 2023, the Commission will take ownership of the benefits realisation plan and associated analytical plan. The Commission will be responsible for carrying out future benefit reviews and reporting the findings to the Welsh Government. Reporting arrangements will be agreed with the Sponsorship Unit.

22.23 It is anticipated the Commission will also review annually, and improvements will be measured against the targets and baseline data established by the Commission Implementation Programme. A final evaluation report will be produced by the Commission to reflect related and available data for 2033/34.

- 22.24 It is intended that the new body will work closely with Welsh Government and adopt Government Social Research and Government Statistical Services protocols²⁵. It is intended that the Commission will be able to produce official statistics and access some existing research and evaluation mechanisms as well as commission new ones.
- 22.25 The multi-faceted approach outlined above will focus on the extent to which the legislation has contributed to delivering change across the range of outcomes where it would be expected to make a difference. This will include, as recommended by the Finance Committee in their 2017 'Inquiry into the financial estimates accompanying legislation', consideration of the accuracy of the estimated costs included in the Regulatory Impact Assessment.
- 22.26 An analytical plan will also be prepared, which will set out the statistical and research work required to address any identified gaps in the available data and to monitor and evaluate the impact of the proposed reforms.
- 22.27 It is essential that ownership of the programme benefits is maintained through to realisation. From July 2023, the Commission will take ownership of the benefits realisation plan. The Commission will be responsible for carrying out future benefit reviews and reporting the findings to the Welsh Government. Reporting arrangements will be agreed with the Sponsorship Unit.
- 22.28 The timing and details of activity associated with post programme and the benefits realisation plan. It is likely that the main activity in this regard will be after 2023. Consideration is also being given to the requirement for interim programme evaluation and a possible Welsh Audit Office report and value for money evaluation. This evaluation would be informed by the work undertaken in relation to the Regulatory Impact Assessment.

Appendix A – Costing the Options

Option 6 (Preferred Option) Principal Assumptions

1. As part of the development of the costing analysis, the following key assumptions were used.

Non-Programme Costs

2. A critical assumption within the projections is that any significant cost savings made by transferring staff and expenditure, currently treated as overhead (or non-programme costs) within the Welsh Government, is provided as additional resource funding to the new organisation.

Capital and Revenue Expenditure

3. It is anticipated that most IT and location costs during transition will be capitalised and therefore treated as capital expenditure, however given the accounting requirements around internally created intangibles, such as software and website costs, the Welsh Government are unable to confirm this treatment at this time.
4. Under the IFRS 16 accounting standard on Leases it is probable that any property leased by Commission will be capitalised. Currently, the lease rentals are included within Property Costs, however the eventual accounting treatment, dependent upon the location strategy, will not have a significant impact on these forecasts.

Establishment of the organisation

5. For the purposes of these costings, the policy intention for the organisation's commencement of operations in April 2023 has been followed for Option 6.
6. For Option 6, early discovery work has been undertaken to produce an options analysis for the location/s and the possible premises for the new Commission. The location is dependent on decisions made by the Minister for Education and the Welsh Language, the interim Chair and Advisory Board and the interim CEO for the Commission. Therefore, solely for the purposes of this exercise, location costings for the Commission have been determined using a south east Wales base, more details of which are contained below.
7. In early 2019, the Minister for Education provided an early steer on the approach to identifying a location for the new Commission. This was in no way a decision on the location or premises for Commission but to provide a baseline for benchmarking purposes only.
8. The Minister agreed to take forward exploring accommodation options in the south east Wales area for up to 110 staff allowing for any growth. This work provided baseline costings to inform the costings for this Regulatory Impact Assessment as well as the work for the projects within the wider programme including the HR & OD, Operational Processes and the Data & ICT projects.

9. The rationale for using a south east Wales area as a baseline takes into account the existing critical mass of staff within both Welsh Government and HEFCW based in this area. The early analysis also takes into account the 39 (approx.) staff working remotely in south west Wales, mid Wales and north Wales.
10. However, the vision of a traditional office space for the Commission now needs to be challenged and considered within the wider context of the requirements of a 21st century workspace. Since the outbreak of Covid 19 and the advice that where possible, the population should work from home, the traditional office base has radically changed.
11. Working from home has become the norm for so many office workers fortunate to have sufficiently agile systems able to accommodate remote working. This way of working transformed lives through freeing up time to spend with loved ones and pursuing activities to maximise wellbeing without the pressures of a daily commute. However for some, the reverse has been the case, where working from home has been detrimental to wellbeing and has exacerbated feelings of loneliness and reduced contact with others has contributed to social isolation. Therefore, a range of options will be considered with digital technologies very much at the forefront taking into account the lessons learnt over the past eighteen months.
12. Supporting Welsh Ministers imperative to reduce the carbon footprint through reducing numbers working in offices has resulted in a fall in road congestion and private car use which has contributed to improved air quality. Therefore, exploring new opportunities for regeneration and economic activity - moving from a retail dominated model to a more diverse range of activity, will be a consideration.
13. The eventual determination of a location strategy for the Commission is likely to have a significant impact on other cost elements within these forecasts.

Status of the organisation

14. For Option 6, it has been assumed that the organisation would not have charitable status and would not attract a UK corporation tax charge. HEFCW is not a VAT registered organisation. It has also been assumed that the Commission would become VAT-registered, based on comparator organisations.
15. Any changes to tax status could have a significant impact on the costs incurred.
16. The Commission will be a public records body.

VAT

17. VAT has been included for the purposes of these costings, but it is important to note it is a transfer payment and therefore has a neutral impact on the UK economy. Therefore table A below shows the equivalent benefit/receipt of VAT to HMRC.

Inflation and Net Present Value

18. No inflation has been applied to the cost base used within these forecasts.
19. No discounting has been applied to any of the costs used within these forecasts.

Programme spend

20. Programme expenditure has been excluded from these forecasts as it will be the same for both options. This expenditure covers areas such as research, communication and expert services.

Option 6 (Preferred Option) Detailed Assumptions

Staff costs

21. Costs are based on all 53 HEFCW staff transferring into the new organisation.
22. It is anticipated that the following Welsh Government functions will transfer to the new organisation, however the scope of exact functions and staff has not yet been determined and these figures are currently an estimate, totalling 116 roles:
 - (a) Apprenticeship Policy
 - (b) Funding & Planning
 - (c) Further Education & Apprenticeships
 - (d) Policy & Programme Development
 - (e) Post-16 Policy
 - (f) Post-16 Quality & Data Management Provision Management
 - (g) Youth Support & Guidance
 - (h) Student Finance,
 - (i) Scientific Policy
 - (j) IT Digital Services
23. The Welsh Government will require an additional 45 staff within the Sponsorship; Policy; and IT teams in order to manage the relationship with the new organisation and safeguard IT systems on which the Welsh Government is also reliant.
24. Staff will transition into the Commission on their current terms and conditions, therefore salary and on-cost data is based on a combination of HEFCW, Welsh Government and market rates.
25. HEFCW staff have been costed, from commencement of the Commission, at the top of their 2020 scale bandings as per their 2020 pay scale, with bandings as per KPMG's Project Langdon Report.
26. Welsh Government costings are based upon the most recent uplift as at April 2020, and all staff costs have been based on the top bands of their respective pay scales.
27. On costs for Welsh Government staff have been based upon those supplied by the centre and range from 34% to 40%. HEFCW on costs have been estimated at 40%.
28. No allowance has been included for the regrading of any roles.
29. It is assumed that most staff will transfer across into the Commission from HEFCW and the Welsh Government, however some losses are anticipated for the purposes of the Regulatory Impact Assessment, and therefore a recruitment exercise costing in the region of £80,000 to £100,000 is anticipated in the six month lead up to 1 April 2023.
30. Staff costings are based on full time equivalent.
31. It is assumed that a programme team would be established within the Welsh Government to manage the delivery of the selected option. The cost of deploying Welsh Government staff to work on the programme have not been included in this Regulatory Impact Assessment. These costs are estimated at approximately £3m per year from 2020-21 to 2022-23.

32. An additional Digital, Data and Technology Lead has been identified to work on implementation of the Commission within the Welsh Government 18 months prior which will then transition into the new Commission. This will be a Grade 6 post.
33. An extra IT support worker is included within the forecast to provide internal IT support.
34. Four additional HR and Finance staff have been included for the new organisation, based on the Qualifications Wales model at HEO level to support the Finance Director and HR Manager, some of these posts may already exist in the current structures within WG and HEFCW.
35. Interim CEO will be in post from 1 February 2022 until 31 December 2022 at an estimated annual salary of up to £133,000.
36. The CEO will be in post from 1 January 2023 at an estimated annual salary of up to £133,000.

Board Costs

37. An Advisory Committee will be appointed initially to take forward the appointment of the CEO and transition arrangements until the legislation allows the appointment of a Chair and Board. This group will include experts in relation to HR and Finance. The Chair of the Advisory Committee and its 3 members will be appointed from October 2021.
38. The Commission's Board will be created with the appointment of the Chair, who will commence from 1 January 2023.
39. The Deputy Chair will also be the Chair of the Research and Innovation committee.
40. There will be 8 'ordinary' Board members who will be appointed from March 2023.
41. The Research and Innovation Committee will be determined by the Commission apart from the Chair (who will be the Deputy Chair of the Commission, see above) which will be a public appointment. Committee members will be appointed directly by the Commission and will not pay above Band 3 members rates to ensure there is no disparity between publicly appointed or Commission appointed membership roles for this committee.
42. Table B, below, included the costings of the roles of the committees and main board, the number of members, and the rates and recruitment costs associated with the roles.

Table B - Board costs

Roles	No	Days per month	Daily Rate (£)	Recruitment cost (£)
Chair of Main board	1	4 from 1 Jan 2023 8 from 1 Apr 2023	394	40,000
Deputy Chair (& Research Committee Chair)	1	4 from 1 Jan 2023 6 from 1 Apr 2023	366	40,000
Advisory Committee Chair	1	2 days from 1 Oct 2021 ends 31 March 2023	394	4,000
Main Board Members	8	4 from 1 Mar 2023	337	45,000
Research Committee	4	2 from 1 Apr 2023	282	16,000
Advisory Committee (to be made up of WG and HEFCW appointees)	3	2 from 1 Oct 2021 4 from 1 Apr 2022 ends 31 Mar 2023	337	12,000
			Total	157,000

43. Each recruitment round will cost in the region of £35,000 to £45,000. For modelling purposes £125,000 has been estimated for all appointments excluding the Chief Executive.
44. Travel & Subsistence for the Board is estimated to be around 10% of Board member fees and meeting costs at around 15%. Both percentages are based upon HEFCW's current cost profile with an applied deduction as an expected outcome of remote working, however both are subject to the final location strategy.
45. Each Board member will be provided with IT equipment and software at a cost of £1,250 upon commencement.

Redundancy Costs

46. The redundancy costs were calculated by KPMG and represent the maximum potential costs that would be incurred if all eligible HEFCW employees took a voluntary redundancy option as at 31 March 2023, as opposed to moving to the new body. These costs totalled £2,031,000 and this figure has been used within these forecasts. Any HEFCW staff taking redundancy will be replaced during the planned recruitment round. This cost has been adopted based on a worst case scenario for redundancy costs and it is likely this is an overestimate.
47. No costs have been included for any Welsh Government staff who are in post that are transferring to the Commission as this is a Cabinet Office Statement of Practice (COSO P) transfer and if they refuse to transfer this is a resignation not a redundancy under COSO P (TUPE Principles).
48. The eventual location strategy chosen for the new organisation may have a significant impact on the above assumptions and therefore costs.
49. Although these redundancy costs are a cost to the public sector it is worth recognising that there is an equivalent 'benefit' to the individual in economic terms.

Non-payroll costs

50. Recruitment costs of the interim CEO have been estimated at £20,000. The interim CEO has been costed from February 2022.
51. Recruitment costs of the CEO have been estimated at £20,000. The CEO has been costed from January 2023.
52. Most non-payroll costs have been estimated as a percentage of staff salaries based upon current HEFCW as set out in Table C.

Table C - Basis of non-payroll costs

Cost	% of salary
Staff Travel & Subsistence (reduced to reflect use of remote working)	1.00
Training (2.0% uplift for first year)	1.00
Staff Subscriptions	0.10
Catering	0.10
Misc. (inc. Occ. Health & Employee Assistance programme)	0.50
Conferences	0.25

53. The eventual location strategy chosen for the new organisation may have a significant impact on the above assumptions and therefore costs.

IT Costs

54. It should be noted that some of the IT costs included here are costs that would be applicable regardless of the option taken. This is particularly the case for costs relating to the need to upgrade existing legacy systems or align to industry standard approaches to ensure that software is secure, reliable and performant.
55. It is anticipated that a team of, on average, 8 IT consultants will be hired for the period from April 2022 to September 2023 at a cost of £900 per day each, to assist the transfer of systems and data from HEFCW legacy systems to the new body.
56. IT development software costs for the team of 8 consultants is estimated to be £200 a month per developer for developer desktops and £750 per developer per year for licenses.
57. From September 2023 it is assumed 3 consultants will be hired indefinitely at a cost of £700 a day for ongoing development work, including website maintenance, costing approximately £693,000 per annum.
58. Development software costs of £10,700 have been estimated for every month from April 2022 for implementation. These will carry on post-creation to enable ongoing development of applications within the new body.
59. IT security “health checks” have to be made annually on systems, and on the launch of any new systems or major change in setup of existing applications. These health checks cost up to £10k each and the estimated cost is therefore £100,000 for initial IT security health checks, and an annual ongoing cost of £30,000 thereafter”.

60. IT software licences are expected to range from £125,000 to £150,000. The estimated cost is £143,000, based upon the number of users and current market prices of applications.
61. It is assumed that SharePoint will be used as a document management system, and that these costs would be incorporated as part of the office suite. There would be set up costs but it is impossible to estimate at this stage and they have therefore been excluded.
62. Bespoke data collection software is anticipated to cost in the range of £500,000 and £1,800,000. This is an estimate based upon costs incurred by Qualifications Wales and WRA for their systems. This assumes that a new body will be collecting data, but exact costs will depend on the nature and timeliness of the data that the new organisation will be required to collect. A mid-point cost of £1,150,000 has been estimated.
63. Intranet and website expenditure have been costed based upon those incurred by Qualifications Wales at an initial £117,000. Ongoing website development is included in the costings of the 3 IT consultants.
64. Initial hardware costs, including all laptops, PCs, printers, mobile phones, teleconference facilities, etc. are forecast at £785,000 with current user levels.
65. Annual running costs to incorporate all licences, maintenance, and internet etc. have been estimated at £20,000 per user, in line with the higher estimate of Welsh Government costs. This includes periodic laptop replacement.

Other Corporate Costs

66. These have been estimated as follows in Table D, based upon comparator organisations or current ongoing HEFCW costs:

Table D: Other Corporate Costs

Item	Cost (£,000)
Translation	50
Subscriptions	27
Off-site document storage	6
Telephone	20
Postage	5
Office Supplies and stationery	20
Photocopier costs	5
Conferences hosted by the Commission	36
Other	6
Insurance	30
Legal fees	200
Internal audit	50
Auditor's remuneration	50
Consultancy fees	130
Bank charges	3

Location Costs

67. In the absence of post Covid occupancy evidence, and no real clarity around public sector hubs, the assumptions made at this stage will need to be subject to regular review. Whilst a location strategy for the new entity has not been determined costs have been drawn together to provide a general indication of total costs.
68. Rent has been estimated at £100,800 per annum, based upon a second hand purpose built office facility within south Wales that would provide accommodation for 127 employees. Although total expected compliment is approximately 169 staff, an occupancy level of 75% has been assumed under our flexible working assumptions. This is based on current Welsh Government provision for similar staff numbers.
69. £5,000 has been included in the other corporate costs consultancy fees (assumption 66) for an external commission for an option appraisal for the location of the Commission.
70. Agents' fees of 10% of annual rent (plus VAT) will be incurred during the search for suitable premises.
71. A provision of £100,000 has been made for dilapidation costs upon termination of the lease. This will be payable to the landlord, the Welsh Government.
72. Table E details the costs which have been included in the estimated location costs, these are based upon those incurred by similar sized organisations.

Table E: location costs

New Office Space	Frequency	£
Rent per sq m	recurring	£243,840
Rates per sq m	recurring	£66,040
Other Costs per sq m	recurring	£137,160
ICT costs (inc VAT) 110 no.	recurring 5 years	£202,800
Furniture Costs (inc VAT) 55 no.	recurring 10 years	£409,575
Staff Removal Costs	one-off	£2,028
Capital Fit-out Works	one-off	£558,800
Dilapidations payable / Refurbishment costs - 10 yearly (inc VAT)	one-off (Year 10)	£152,400

73. Other costs include utilities, facilities management and carbon costs.

Option 1 Assumptions

- 74. Whilst Options 6 and 4a include significant expenditure on IT migration, including the upgrading of HEFCW's legacy systems to enable cloud functionality, no expenditure has been included within the 'Business as Usual' Option.
- 75. Although not as immediate, there is a requirement to update HEFCW's systems to the latest acceptable industry standards which would involve significant expenditure. Given their bespoke and specialised nature costs are extremely difficult to predict and may prove insufficient. £500,000 has been included re IT Enhancement programme for HEFCW. This has been costed for 2023/24 to 2024/25.
- 76. Staff costs are based upon HEFCW's standard staffing compliment of 53, each at the top of their banding scale.
- 77. All other HEFCW costs are as per their budget forecasts for 2019-20, this is the latest information available from the KPMG report.
- 78. Welsh Government Staff costs are in respect of the policy area teams, as per note 22 above.
- 79. It is assumed that all staff are full time for the purpose of the costings.
- 80. Staff working on the discovery phase of the programme have not been included as they are needed for all three options.
- 81. Non-pay costs for Welsh Government staff comprise of staff T&S at 1.00% of salary costs.

Option 4a Assumptions

- 82. HEFCW costs for 2020-21 to 2022-23 are as per paragraphs 76 to 77 above.
- 83. Redundancy costs are as per paragraphs 46 to 49 above.
- 84. Welsh Government Staff costs and non-payroll staff costs as per paragraphs 78 to 81 above.
- 85. Staff costings are based on full time equivalent for the purpose of the costings.
- 86. Staff working on the discovery phase of the programme have not been included as they are needed for all three options.
- 87. IT Costs represent the development and migration costs of HEFCW systems and data onto the Welsh Government system, and have been calculated in accordance with paragraphs 54 to 65, excepting for costs treated by the Welsh Government as overheads and met centrally.

Appendix B – ALMA Economics post-compulsory education and training (rapid evidence assessment)

Cost benefit analysis of education reforms:

A Rapid Evidence Assessment (REA)

Llywodraeth Cymru
Welsh Government

October 2019

alma economics

Executive Summary

The Welsh Government has commissioned Alma Economics to conduct a Rapid Evidence Assessment of the evidence base on conducting cost-benefit analysis (CBA) of post-compulsory education and training (PCET) policy. This has been broadened out to also consider evidence on wider education reforms and to also provide some coverage of other Impact Assessment (IA) practices, specifically in Wales. Both academic literature and public sector publications have been considered.

Two different search strategies were employed to ensure a thorough coverage of the evidence base. Papers were added to a long list from initial searches were prioritised according to their relevance and quality. Higher priority was also assigned to more recent research, focusing particularly on the period since 2000, although some earlier research was also considered. Section I outlines the methodology in more detail.

Sections II to VI outline key findings from the review of the evidence (with Section VI focusing on evidence relating to the draft benefit realisation plan), which are:

1. There are very few studies that provide quantitative evaluations of the benefits of educational reforms. This is a feature of both academic research and publications from the public sector. Within the literature, there is some criticism of the suitability of quantified CBA as a technique on the basis that it may be an intractable task to produce robust quantitative estimates for many policy reforms. Where the impacts of PCET are quantified in the literature, e.g. an assessment of the graduate premium, it is not clear how these would be applied to cost benefit analysis.
2. Where IAs have been produced in this policy area, in all cases identified, benefits have been quantified as “zero” and described qualitatively. This is a feature of UK publications relating to education reforms, international evidence on education reforms and also a feature of Welsh Government IAs.
3. There is evidence supporting the majority of benefits identified for current proposals for PCET reform in Wales (as outlined in the draft benefit realisation plan). IAs that satisfied our inclusion criteria and that were identified as informative for the proposed Welsh PCET reforms were: the case for creation of the Office for Students; the case for the creation of UK Research and Innovation; the Higher Education and Research Bill: detailed impact assessment; the Qualifications Wales Bill; and the Australian Regulation Impact Statement for the Reform of National Regulation of Higher Education Providers. Evidence has not been identified for all the benefits listed in the benefit realisation plan, although this does not mean these benefits will not be realised in practice. Some features of the current proposed reforms are likely to be under researched in the previous evidence base or relatively novel and so lacking historical precedents. Some additional benefits that are not included in the benefits realisation plan have been identified and are described at the end of Section VI.

Introduction

The Welsh post-compulsory education and training (PCET) sector is composed of a set of institutions that provide educational opportunities to learners from 16 onward. In particular, the PCET sector encompasses mainstream sixth form/further education, higher education, post-16 training academies, apprenticeships, private training organisations (for example within businesses) and any other teaching and training that does not fall within the Primary or Secondary Education sectors. The sector plays an integral role in enhancing social mobility and inclusion, as well as creating opportunities for research and innovation and its successful commercialisation.

This review aims at building the evidence base for the appraisal of the introduction of a new single regulatory body in the PCET sector in Wales, with a particular focus on the benefits side of CBA. This has been done through summarising existing evidence on the benefits of similar reforms in the UK and overseas. It also seeks to identify the proposed reform's impact in key areas from similar reforms in the broader field of education, given the interconnection of those two types of learning. The report is structured as follows:

- Section I outlines our methodology for searching and arriving at a shortlist of academic and policy papers that will help us answer our research questions. In this section, we present the search terms we used to arrive at our bibliography and our inclusion criteria for assessing the fitness of studies for our review.
- Section II discusses evidence we found, using our outlined search methods, that falls outside the category of impact assessments (IAs). Those papers are predominately academic publications which discuss methodological issues on appraising policy, the key benefits from higher education and vocational training, as well as previous reforms in the field of education and their impacts (where identified).
- Section III presents the four most relevant IAs found, based on use of the search terms and inclusion criteria of Section I. Here we summarise some key benefits that are expected to result after the introduction of a national regulatory framework in the fields of education or after legislation for a single regulator. An important finding of this section is that no IA provides quantitative estimates for the anticipated high-level benefits, and so the section of the report devoted to benefits appraisal is restricted to narrative descriptions.
- Section IV summarises the findings from IAs conducted for non-education policy reforms in Wales. We reviewed previous Welsh IAs to increase our understanding of wider IA precedents in Wales.
- Section V presents evidence on international reforms and attempts to identify other countries pursuing similar reforms to Wales. Our view is that although similar reforms take place internationally, e.g. the recently introduced Scottish Funding Council, no IA or CBA attempts to quantify the benefits stemming from such reforms.
- Section VI relates the findings of our literature review with the Welsh Government's anticipated benefits and lists some extra benefits that our research has highlighted. More specifically, we found arguments in our shortlisted IAs relating to how the introduction of the new Commission would result in productivity gains for various stakeholders in the PCET sector, as well as other non-market benefits like improved health, improved delivery of public services, and cost avoidance through greater resilience to shocks. Finally, we list the expected benefits for the Welsh Government for which we found an absence of evidence during this Rapid Evidence Assessment. Annex A summarises some of the information from Section VI in a table.

I. Methodology

Search Strategy A

The primary search strategy for finding evidence to support this Rapid Evidence Assessment was to search for academic and policy papers that quantify social and private economic impacts from regulation of the sector based on the search terms in Table 1.

Table 1. Rapid Evidence Assessment Search Terms

Primary terms	General Secondary terms	Specific Secondary Terms
Post-compulsory education	Policy	Regulatory costs
Higher education	Reform	Costs
Adult learning	Change in policy	Impact
Work based learning	Consolidation	Savings
Sixth forms	Policy Appraisal	Benefits
Tertiary education sector	Policy evaluation	Equality
Education policy	Cost benefit analysis	Research
	Planning, funding & monitoring	Wellbeing
	Governance	Growth
	Regulatory Body	Jobs
		Rural communities

To arrive at a short list of papers, having screened abstracts and titles, we then applied the inclusion criteria shown in Table 2 to select the list of papers that will be fully reviewed

Table 2. Terms and descriptions

After conducting the search for evidence using various combinations of the proposed search terms above, we concluded that there are very few studies that provide quantitative assessments of the benefits of educational reform.

The proposed methodology broadly returned the follow types of publication:

- i) Papers related to consolidation of institutions (schools, universities etc),²⁶
- ii) Studies devoted to methodological issues concerning the appraisal of education policies, and critical assessments of the suitability of CBA for such a purpose²⁷, and
- iii) Literature related to the benefits and returns from education or further education.²⁸

Search Strategy B

In addition to the methodology above, we also adopted another approach to search using more narrowly defined keywords. This strategy provided us with a list of papers more related to:

- (i) past education reform in the UK and their impact, and
- (ii) the distributional impact of reforms in education.

II. Evidence outside of the IA literature

CBA and its limitations in Education Policy

A consistent theme from the external literature reviewed was the general absence of formal CBA studies. For example, Belfield, Brooks Bowden and Rodriguez, in their 2019 literature review, identify a lack of CBA with respect to education policy. Their research returned only 28 cases of formal CBA, found in regulatory impact assessments (RIA) for reforms in education, and after reviewing them, they assessed them as of unsatisfactory quality. In their review only 1 out of 28 CBA studies managed to calculate a dollar value for benefits, no IA calculated a net present value (NPV), while only 37% of the IAs adequately documented key methodological assumptions.

One factor leading to the relatively low use of CBA in educational reforms is the issue of whether this technique is likely to produce robust results. For example, Gilead (2014) critically examined whether CBA is a robust approach for appraising educational reforms, concluding that specific technical difficulties related to CBA practice might lead to misleading results and recommendations that misrepresent the real value of assessed educational options. Such difficulties include the high number of benefits (or costs) that cannot be measured or predicted prior to reform, the degree of unpredictability of outcomes, and the uncertainty relating to institutional compliance with the new regulation. The presence of these limitations renders the value of CBA controversial (Belfield, Bowden, & Rodriguez, 2019; Gilead, 2014). It is only when most of the anticipated outcomes are highly measurable, a condition hardly met when it comes to assessing educational reforms, that CBA has the power to guide evidence-based policy.

Key benefits of higher and vocational education

Despite the limitations of the existing literature, we reviewed a number of informative studies on the key benefits of higher education and vocational education. According to the UK Government, graduate premia in the UK for the year 2013 were £252,000 for women and £168,000 for men (Albertson, 2017). Looking only at earnings differentials can be misleading however since earnings might also reflect differences in motivation, age, sex and social background, while at the same time they fail to capture any 'spillover' benefits leaking to other than educated workers in the form of productivity gains (Woodhall, 1992). Labour market imperfections also limit the value of earnings differentials as a measure of returns to education. Other than differentials in private returns to earnings, education results in externalities and 'nonmarket' effects which are difficult to monetise. Such benefits include efficiency gains from specialisation as well as healthier and more risk averse, law-abiding, tolerant, stable and innovative societies (Albertson, 2017) (Woodhall 2004). The list of indirect social benefits has been argued to include the consumption value of education, democratisation of societies, poverty reduction and improved environmental quality (Woodhall, 2004).

Looking specifically at vocational education and training (VET), our literature review highlighted various short-term and long-term benefits accruing to various stakeholders at different points in time. For example, individuals in VET are expected to benefit in the short-term from greater chances to be employed, increased earnings, as well as more satisfactory jobs. In the long run they can expect greater flexibility and mobility, and improved chances for lifelong learning. Employers' gains are derived from a better trained workforce and cost savings from recruitment of skilled workers. Wider societal benefits in the short-run include savings on welfare costs, resulting from a smoother transition from education to employment, while in the long-run society can expect productivity gains due to better education as well as increases in income tax revenues (Hoeckel, 2008).

Consolidating schools in Denmark

Looking specifically at the impacts of consolidating regulatory powers under one overarching regulator in the field of education and further education highlights a clear gap in the current literature; one that has left this subject area under-researched. This lack of evidence might be an indication of the difficulty of measuring the high-level benefits that regulatory reforms of this kind target, or the difficulty of defining robust counterfactual groups.

For example, Beuchert et al (2016) assessed the short-term effect of schools' consolidation that took place in Denmark between 2010-2011. The authors employed a differences-in-differences (DID) strategy, with estimates suggesting that the overall effect of schools' consolidation is negative (although insignificant). Being exposed to school closings, as a specific type of consolidation, is estimated to decrease students' test scores by 5.9% of a standard deviation (SD), while this adverse effect on test scores rises to 11% if the student who experiences the school closing comes from a small school (150 students or less). On the other hand, expansions and mergers of schools are estimated to have a statistically insignificant effect on students' performance. The DID method is an experimental design that makes use of treatment and control groups to obtain appropriate causal effects. Comparing changes in outcomes between treated and control groups is a widely used methodological tool for appraising policy reforms and interventions provided that pre- and post- intervention data are available (Schlotter, Schwerdt, & Woessmann, 2009). Despite its methodological fitness for purpose, we found no similar research design that evaluates the consolidation of regulatory functions in the sector of education or vocational education.

Previous UK education reforms

There is a linkage between the micro-behaviours of higher education providers and the macro environment at the state level. Our research into the UK experience highlighted that there has been an increased effort from governments in recent years to intervene in the higher education sector, including in post compulsory education, institutions' incentives and 'steering' organisational and academic behaviours towards national policy goals (Ferlie, Musselin, & Andresani, 2009). Such 'steering' from the state has the ultimate goal of organising the market for higher education toward achieving specific national objectives that the market itself could not achieve. Modes of coordination include planning and funding allocation mechanisms, regulatory authorities and frameworks, and even the provision of a set of ideas designed to provide ideological and normative assumptions on how institutions should be governed (Meek, 2002).

The 'long tail' of relatively low achievement is a consistent empirical trend for the UK education system, together with the low levels of social mobility, poor basic skills of its population, low staying-on rates at age 16, and a complex vocational education system (Hupkau, McNally, Ruiz-Valenzuela, & Ventura, 2017; Machin & Vignoles, 2006).

Addressing such issues has been key driver of previous reforms.

Creating a 'quasi market' in education – fostering competition

The paper "Education Policy in the UK", published by the Centre of Economics of Education,²⁹ reviews empirical evidence on the impact of key reforms, designed to address several deficiencies in the UK education system. Such reforms are focussed on addressing the flaws of the UK education system previously identified. The most striking reform was the introduction of market mechanisms through the creation of a quasi-market in education via the 1988 Education Reform Act. To address the 'long tail' of poor achievement the UK Government increased parental choice (allowing parents to have representation on school governing bodies), reduced information asymmetries (by making test score information publicly available in 'league tables'), and linked school funding with the schools' enrolment numbers (incentivising schools to attract and admit more students) (Machin & Vignoles, 2006). Linking school funding with enrolments while making data on school effectiveness public has the effect of encouraging a more level playing field for schools where competition for students is on merit, encouraging better outcomes. To what extent institutions will respond constructively to such market reforms is an empirical question. Equity issues may arise if certain institutions 'cream skim' the most promising students at the expense of other institutions. Admitting more students based predominately on their tests results will improve the school' ranking in the 'league tables' and so intakes will be more skewed towards the most capable students or those who have better ability to exploit public information; (Hoxby, 2000, 2003) test the effect of increased parental choice on US students' test scores, finding that increased choice leads to a rise in students' test scores and a lowering of schools spending per student – hence generating an overall positive effect on schools' productivity. Evidence relating to the UK calls for more transparency in the admission process, as well as stronger monitoring of education providers intake practices. West and Pennell (1998), after examining information required from the parents as part of the admission process, report that in the UK system there are incentives for schools to select students who perform better in tests, or those who are likely to be higher achievers due to their socioeconomic background. Schools required information on parents' occupation, pupil's past achievements and a historical track of absences, hobbies, attainment to music classes and/or any grade earned, sport activities and any distinction accomplished as well as any special help received in the form of extra help with reading (West, Pennell, & Noden, 1998). Despite the strong incentives for schools' and parents' selectivity, inspecting the UK's staying-on rates at age 16 for the years 1974, 1986 and 1996, broken down by parental income group for a number of different cohorts, evidence seem not to suggest increased socioeconomic segregation across schools. During the period that market reforms were introduced in England (1986 to 1996) there was a rise in the staying-on rate for all children, while staying on rates grew faster for children from the lowest income levels (Machin & Vignoles, 2006).

Curriculum reform and the introduction of national literacy and numeracy strategies

To address the problem of the very low level of basic skills in numeracy and literacy, and with a long-term goal to raise standards for all, education policymakers introduced two major reforms in UK. The first was to introduce a standardised national curriculum for pupils aged between 7 and 16, and the second was the introduction of National Literacy and Numeracy Strategies. The former was aimed at ensuring that all students between of 7-16 years of age study a prespecified set of subjects up to a minimum level. The latter was the decision of the UK Government to prescribe the content and the teaching methods for teaching basic skills curriculum including numeracy and literacy lessons (Machin & Vignoles, 2006).

Robust evidence on the effectiveness of the overall national curriculum has not been identified. However, there is some evidence on the effectiveness of the National Literacy and Numeracy Strategies. Machin and McNally (2004), in their empirical investigation of the effectiveness of the National Literacy Policy (NLP) during its pilot period, compared pupils exposed to National Literacy and Numeracy Strategies with pupils from schools not subject to the policy, and found that there were statistically significant improvements in reading and English Key Stage 2.

Reforming post compulsory education

Education policymakers in UK, other than being concerned with the relatively low fraction of young people staying on beyond the compulsory schooling age, were also troubled by the relatively weak participation in vocational education and training (Machin & Vignoles, 2006). The UK during the 80's and 90's, had too few young people undertaking vocational qualifications, and too many students dropping out of education and training altogether; effectively entering the labour market with no qualifications at all. Additionally, there has been criticism from parents and students as to the economic value of pursuing a vocational qualification since there are hundreds of different qualifications offered by different providers with different requirements (Machin & Vignoles, 2006).

To tackle this problem, the Government introduced a series of reforms. The National Vocational Qualifications (NVQ) introduced in 1988, was followed by the General National Vocational Qualifications (GNVQ) in 1992, while in 2004 conditional cash transfers were introduced through the Education Maintenance Allowance (EMA) for all post-16 year old individuals from disadvantaged backgrounds who stayed on in full time education. EMA reform seemed to be very successful; paying a modest allowance increased stay-on rates past the age of 16 by 4.5 percentage points, while half of the individuals who stayed-on were drawn from inactivity rather than employment (Dearden, Frayne, Emmerson, & Meghir, 2005).

Dearden et al (2002), in their study on 'The Returns to Academic and Vocational Qualifications in Britain', provide evidence identifying the existence of a gap between the wage premia earned from academic qualifications and those earned from vocational ones after the NVQ and GNVQ reforms. This gap could be interpreted as a negative signal of holding a vocational qualification to employers, who perceive these people are of low ability since, especially in UK, poor workforce performers are those who usually undertake vocational training (Machin & Vignoles, 2006). Dearden's study however challenges this statement by showing that, after controlling for time required to obtain the qualification, the two types of wage premia converge, suggesting a greater sense equality between the two types of education (Dearden, McIntosh, Myck, & Vignoles, 2002).

Distributional impacts of education policy reforms

The chapter "Education Policy Reforms" in the "Analysing the Distributional Impact of reforms" report, by the World Bank,³⁰ draws on country level case studies and recent empirical evidence to identify the distributional consequences of education policy reforms on the wellbeing of different stakeholders, the principal transmission channels through which stakeholders are affected by or affect the reforms, and the standard methods for social impact analysis in education. Education policy reforms affect prices, earnings, wages and employment. Redeployment of resources can lead to the access to education widening; in the long-run reforms that expand education and reallocate income have important dynamic intergenerational effects in the form of improved access to employment opportunities and poverty alleviation. Ceteris paribus, increases in human capital accumulation in a country lead to a stronger income generating capacity, and so policies that aim at improving human capital of the poor have progressive distributional impacts.

Different objectives require different types of reform in education. Management and institutional reform programs usually aim for decentralisation of power and can take place either through a simple transfer of administrative functions ('de-concentration') or a full transfer of authority from central to local units ('devolution') (Tiongson, 2005). Such changes are more than mere administrative adjustments since they alter radically the relationships of accountability and the way services are provided. Expenditure reforms reallocate spending towards a specific level of education, income group or a specific geographic unit. Financing reforms aim at increasing participation in education by mitigating the cost of education and providing finance tools in the form of grants or scholarships. Relaxing financing constraints to specific socioeconomic groups, easing access to high quality schools (e.g. through vouchers), and improving the quality of schooling, can lead to increased enrolments among the poor. On the other hand, reforms that make it harder for the disadvantaged to access education run the risk of reducing enrolments for the specific group. Such reforms could include introducing or raising user fees (Tiongson, 2005).

III. Evidence from education Impact Assessments

To our knowledge, policy appraisals relevant to our task are limited to just a few RIAs that only discuss benefits from regulation in a narrative way and provide estimates on cost savings resulting from the merging of functions and removal of duplication of work. Shortlisted policy papers include, and are limited to, the Case for creation of the Office for

³⁰ Available at: <http://siteresources.worldbank.org/INTPSIA/Resources/490023-1120845825946/Education.pdf>

Students,³¹ the Case for the creation of UK Research and Innovation,³² the Higher Education and Research Bill: detailed impact assessment,³³ the Qualifications Wales Bill: Explanatory Memorandum³⁴ and the Reform of National Regulation of Higher Education Providers Regulation Impact Statement.³⁵ In this section we also review two previous IAs relating to reforms that took place in Wales to increase our understanding of wider IA precedents in Wales. None of these IAs quantify the expected benefits, with the exception of the IA for Additional Learning Needs and Education Tribunal in Wales where the cost savings were estimated. For the majority of IAs reviewed it is notable that prior to the introduction of the reforms the benefits are uncertain, and the outcomes depend largely on how a new policy is implemented; a good policy may be ineffective if it is poorly implemented.

Office for Students

The creation of the Office for Students was part of a wider set of regulatory reforms introduced in the 2016 Higher Education and Research Bill. The Bill aimed to introduce more competition in the markets for Higher Education (HE) and Research and Innovation (RI) in order to deliver increased value to students, taxpayers and businesses. The case for the creation of Office for Students set out the rationale for the UK Government's preferred option of replacing the two public bodies required by statute to regulate higher education in England with one non-departmental public body that would act as the single market regulator. The new higher education regulator, called the Office for Students, would combine and update the regulatory functions of Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) and the roles of Office for Fair Access (OFFA). OFFA was the statutory body set up to support the Director of Fair Access (DFA), with the body's duties encompassing agreeing and monitoring access agreements with universities and colleges that charged higher tuition fees, and ensuring higher education (HE) providers have adequate measures in place to attract students from disadvantaged backgrounds. HEFCE also had a related regulatory objective to allocate funding so as to widen participation in HE. By merging the functions of these two regulators, the Government aimed to bring together two interconnected agendas, with the combined organisation benefiting from the expertise of two organisations and allowing for a more coherent strategy towards the goal of widening participation in HE. The business case identifies the following as the expected immediate benefits derived from the reform: i) simplification of HE architecture and improved coherence in the regulatory approaches and allocation of funding, ii) better promotion of students' interests in the area of education through increased competition and increased choice, and iii) a more powerful and fit for purpose regulator tasked with running a risk-based regulatory framework applicable to all HE providers (UK Government, 2016a). An additional benefit for the UK Government was expected to come in the form of cost savings, resulting from the reduction of public bodies and from the application of more efficient systems. For the purpose of the RIA, efficiency savings were assumed to reduce Government's operating cost by 10%.

UK Research and Innovation

Similar to the Office for Students, the UK Government favoured the option of introducing a counterpart regulatory body in the research and innovation market. The 2016 Case for the creation of UK Research and Innovation assessed the Government's preferred option of creating a new single non-departmental public body (NDPB), operating at arm's length from UK Government and bringing together the seven Research Councils, the research funding functions of HEFCE and the funding functions of Innovate UK. As with the Office for Students, straightforward benefits stemmed from better value for taxpayers' money, increased efficiency and less duplication of work. Proposed areas of further consolidation to better exploit efficiencies were identified as HR functions, procurement, finance, auditing, IT and communications services, and the administrative savings resulting from the merger were assumed to be equivalent to 5% of the UK Government's total administrative costs (UK Government, 2016b). It was also envisioned that the UKRI, by removing duplicate work and bureaucracy, would be better able to embed the efficiency savings achieved and redirect its resources towards more strategic leadership functions that would allow the office to make better informed research and innovation (RI) funding decisions based on providers' performance indicators.

Additionally, consolidation was expected to reduce the regulatory burden for the RI providers and to allow them to allocate their resources more efficiently. This could occur because the reduced regulatory burden would allow RI institutions to merge administrative office functions related to dealing with multiple regulators and allocate more resources towards research.

Another benefit of the reform was an increase in the rate of return of public spending on R&D activities; equivalent to a 1 percentage point increase in private sector productivity, as well as an increase in the social rate of return of innovation resulting from more collaboration of the research base and better commercialisation of innovation in the business place (UK Government, 2016b). Lastly, there were other non-marketable, more difficult to monetise outcomes, including improvements in wellbeing and health, better development of public policy and enhanced resilience to shocks through cost avoidance.

Other IAs of the Higher Education and Research Bill

The Detailed Impact Assessment of the Higher Education and Research Bill, published by the UK Government in June 2016, provides two more cases of reforms that align with the Welsh Government's rationale for creating one single regulatory body which will absorb all funding, planning and monitoring functions in post-compulsory education and training sector.

Those two reforms are the IA for the Entry into the higher education sector and single-entry gateway and the IA for Information Sharing and Data Transparency Duties.

The former assessed benefits from reforming the validation system and other regulatory functions related to degree recognition, HE status recognition by the UK Government, as well as the introduction of a risk based regulatory framework. The latter assessed the benefits from introducing legislation that enables Office for Students to be the principal government body with the power to require HE providers, and other bodies providing admissions services, to share financial and other student data (e.g. ethnic, gender, socioeconomic background breakdown of annual intakes). In assessing the Welsh case, and its preference on legislating a Commission that among other things will have the duty to monitor and regulate PCET providers under a risk based regulatory framework, the first IA provides evidence on what kind of benefits are expected to result from introducing a similar framework. The assessment states explicitly that it is difficult to predict the full extent of costs for providers, or the benefits from the reduction of excess regulation prior to the implementation of the reform, since both costs as well as benefits depend largely on the measures that will be developed and employed to assess the riskiness of each provider, as well as other aspects of the framework (UK Government, 2016c). On the basis of economic intuition, it was expected that the reformed system would result in a fairer allocation of administrative burdens which would ensure the cost of regulation and increased monitoring would add value to students and safeguard the quality of English HE system, as well as a better management of high-risk providers. The IA for Information Sharing and Data Transparency Duties emphasises the benefits to students, UK Government and taxpayers stemming from remedies to market failures prevalent in the field of higher education. Specifically, more detailed, centralised and publicly available information was expected to reduce information asymmetries and improve social mobility. Students were expected to make better informed decisions and the Government to be more effective at designing policy that promotes participation of students from disadvantaged backgrounds. Improved matching between program and students would lead to more productive graduates, better prepared to achieve their full potential in the labour market (UK Government, 2016c). Apart from productivity gains in the economy, more productive graduates were expected to accelerate the repayment of student loans that would effectively lead to better value for taxpayers' money.

The Qualifications Wales Bill

Our shortlist of relevant papers includes a previously conducted regulatory impact statement on assessing the options available to Welsh Government for reforming the qualifications system of the country. The assessment has been prepared in December 2014 by the Department for Education and Skills of the Welsh Government to support the Qualifications Wales Act 2015. The Welsh Government's preferred option was to create an arm's length regulatory body that would have the statutory duty to regulate and supervise all non-degree qualifications providers. In the specific IA there are no direct financial benefits accruing to any party from this reform. However, similarly to the already discussed IAs, wider benefits are discussed in a narrative way. The introduction of a regulatory body in the qualifications market was expected to simplify regulatory processes, improve regulatory activity, enhance the reputation and independence of Wales' regulatory system, and increase the confidence, consistency, clarity, accountability and authority that would facilitate widespread impact throughout the country (Welsh Government, 2014). The IA concludes that due to the nature of the benefits, positive and negative outcomes could not be compared and judgements should be made based on how well the benefits justified the costs of the reform.

Tertiary Education Quality and Standards Agency Threshold Standards Reform

As part of the literature search, we identified a regulatory impact statement prepared by the Australian Department of Industry, Innovation, Science, Research and Tertiary Education (DIIS RTE) that considered the regulatory impact of the Tertiary Education Quality and Standards Agency (TEQSA) Threshold Standards 2015 on higher education providers.

Assigning TEQSA the regulatory duty to implement Threshold Standards was the Australian Government's preferred option for addressing the country's weaknesses in the field of higher education, related to lack of enforceable clarity in the standards frameworks and the inconsistency in their application. The reform left TEQSA to be the single regulatory body responsible for compliance, monitoring and quality assurance. The reform's objective was to implement a risk-based approach, ensuring that only high-quality providers would enter the system and that providers at risk of non-compliance would be identified in a timely manner, and closely monitored. The main benefits of the proposed reform are in the form of efficiencies from more streamlined registration and accreditation processes, better regulatory environment for the providers who would have to deal with only one agency, enhanced consistency within the sector, as well as more certainty and confidence for employers and the community on the quality of graduates (DIIS RTE, 2012). Additionally, as already mentioned in the previous cases examined, an economic benefit for the sector was anticipated as a result of the risk-based allocation of regulatory burden, with low-risk providers subject to less regulation and lower registration fees.

The Childcare Funding (Wales) Bill

The Childcare Funding (Wales) Bill of 2018 legislated powers to provide funding for childcare for qualifying children of working parents and to make regulations about the arrangements for administering and operating such funding.

The preferred option was the development of a Welsh application and eligibility checking system within the HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) tax-free childcare platform.

Potential benefits of this strategy include: reduction of administrative burden and data security risks; parental burden being significantly reduced; facilitation of funding recipients; and fraud risk being significantly reduced as eligibility can be checked on a live basis with data that cannot be misrepresented or altered by parents endeavouring to make a fraudulent claim of eligibility (Education and Public Services Group, 2018).

Additional Learning Needs and Education Tribunal in Wales

The Additional Learning Needs and Education Tribunal (Wales) Bill³⁶ created a new unified legislative framework for supporting children and young people with additional learning needs (ALN). The new framework replaced the existing legislation surrounding special education needs (SEN) and the assessment of children and young people with learning difficulties and/or disabilities (LDD) in post-16 education and training.

Potential benefits of this reform were the following: fewer disagreements regarding decisions; fewer decisions appealed to the Special Educational Needs Tribunal for Wales; removal of the incentive of parents to pursue local authorities to issue a statement; potentially reduced involvement of health services staff; available information about the young person and evidence about what support worked well for him/her, leading to the allocation of resources in the most efficient and effective way; a less complex system, resulting in less time needed for statementing process and early intervention; earlier intervention is expected to help avoid issues from escalation, and hence save resources; reduction of the rate at which young people with ALN are excluded from school; reduction of parental confusion, anxiety and frustration (Education and Public Services Group, 2016).

IV. Education reforms: international evidence

As an additional source of evidence, recent selected international experiences of education reforms have been considered. More specifically, we reviewed some more general papers which referred to intermediate bodies in Higher Education system and their role,³⁷ and the relationship between governance structure and the strategies of policymakers.³⁸ Notably, none of the papers reviewed contained CBA techniques or any attempt to quantify specific benefits relating to policy reforms.

New Zealand

The Government of New Zealand introduced the Tertiary Education Strategy (TES) 2014/2019,³⁹ which sets out the Government's long-term strategic direction for tertiary education and how a high-performing tertiary education system can contribute to improved outcomes for individuals and society. It includes six priorities (delivering skills for industry; getting at-risk young people into a career; boosting achievement of Māori and Pasifika; improving adult literacy and numeracy; strengthening research-based institutions; growing international linkages) that the Government seeks to improve.

The TES focuses on ensuring that tertiary education in New Zealand:

- is more flexible, outward-facing and engaged,
- is focused on improving outcomes for learners and employers, and
- has strong links to industry, community and the global economy.

There was some evidence from the TES 2010-2015 regarding the extent of the improvement across the tertiary education sector. Some educational performance indicators are listed below:⁴⁰

- There was a 23% increase in the number of students completing bachelor's degrees between 2010 and 2012,
- There was a steady increase in students moving from school to degree level study,
- There was a 6 percentage points increase between 2007-2012 in people of 25 years who have completed a qualification or a degree at level 4 or above, and
- The participation of Māori people between 18-19 years old in bachelor's degrees rose from 11% in 2009 to 13% in 2012, and for Pasifika, from 13% to 16%.

Canada

There are 26 publicly funded post-secondary institutions in Alberta (a province of Canada),⁴¹ which offer most of Alberta's post-secondary programs, receive government funding to offset their operating costs, and are accountable to Alberta taxpayers. The publicly funded postsecondary institutions are governed by boards that provide leadership, guiding the institutions' future and being held accountable for ensuring that public funds are used effectively and appropriately.

The 2007 Roles and Mandates Policy Framework for Alberta's publicly funded advanced education system outlined a six-sector model which provided clarity on the contribution each institution makes in the educational sector⁴².

Regarding Ontario, another province of Canada, we reviewed some papers which were concerned with the funding model of the institutions of the province and the Higher Education Quality Council of Ontario.

The purpose of the funding model is to provide a fair and balanced method for determining the share of the provincial operating grant to be allocated to each province's 20 publicly assisted institution.⁴³ The Ontario University funding model aims to ensure a reasonable degree of equity in the distribution of available government support but does not determine the overall level of funding in the system.

The Higher Education Quality Council of Ontario (HEQCO) is an agency of the Government of Ontario that brings evidence-based research to the continued improvement of the Province's post-secondary education system. The purpose of this council is to help:⁴⁴

- educate students and provide them with knowledge and skills to ensure their future success,
- produce engaged and civic-minded citizens,
- foster research and innovation, and
- support a robust economy and fuel its growth.

Australia

The case of Australia has previously been analysed in the context of the Tertiary Education Quality Standards Agency (TEQSA) undertaking also the role to implement Threshold Standards in the field of Higher Education.

Scotland

Regarding Scotland, we assessed the Scottish Funding Council, which is the non-departmental public body charged with funding Scotland's further and higher education institutions, including its 25 colleges and 19 universities.⁴⁵

The Council was established by the Further and Higher Education (Scotland) Act

2005, and it supersedes the two separate Councils, the Scottish Further Education Funding Council (SFEFC), and the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council (SHEFC), which were later dissolved.

No CBA or IA accompanied the Bill⁴⁶ at the time that SHEFC was legislated, nor was an ex post assessment found as part of our research for a retrospective evaluation of this reform.

V. Evidence relating to the Benefits Realisation Plan

Professor Hazelkorn's 2016 government commissioned report⁴⁷, examined the effectiveness of Post Compulsory Education and Training (PCET) system in Wales, focusing particularly on regulatory effectiveness issues in relation to funding, governance, quality assurance and standards, and the management of risk. Her report identified various areas for improvement in the PCET sector and highlighted the need to maximise spending effectiveness due to increased budgetary pressures, the need to maintain academic and research excellence, the need to invest in and improve students experience and employment opportunities as well as the need for building an innovative dynamic culture. Other issues raised in her report are the need for more regulatory cohesion in the sector, the need for better alignment of the PCET sector with current and future social and economic needs, the need for more collaboration in the field of education and research, as well as the need for establishing appropriate governance structures. Her recommendations to the Welsh Government for meeting those needs were 'Establish a new integrated authority (to replace HEFCW) with the organisational capacity, capability and structure to steer, oversee and monitor systemic change and ongoing improvement across the whole post compulsory education sector' (Hazelkorn, 2016).

The Welsh Government issued a consultation paper in 2017 titled 'Public Good and a Prosperous Wales – Building a reformed PCET' to set out proposals for taking forward the reforms needed. The consultation paper proposed that a new regulatory authority should be established – the Tertiary Education and Research Commission for Wales (The Commission) – to provide oversight, strategic direction and leadership for the post-compulsory education and training sector (Welsh Government, 2017). Key roles of the Commission would include:

- strategic planning of education and skills delivery across all post-compulsory education and training in Wales,
- establishing a mechanism for managing the relationship between the Commission and the institutions, and training providers it regulates or funds,
- funding, contracting, quality, financial monitoring and audit of higher education, further education, work-based learning, adult community learning, and relevant employability and employer-led programmes, and
- functions currently undertaken by the Welsh Government.

The end goal of this regulatory reform is to protect and promote the interest of learners, to increase parity between vocational and academic education, and to reduce the skills gap in the labour market. The new body will be encouraged to operate and work towards a shared vision for making Wales more prosperous, resilient, healthier, more equal, and a country globally responsible, with cohesive communities, vibrant culture and a thriving Welsh language. The intended reform is expected to contribute to the Welsh Government's efforts to achieve this national agenda.

After the introduction of the new Commission, the Welsh Government anticipates the following list of high-level benefits to result:

- To be responsive to employer needs and address skills gaps,
- To improve research institutions ranking, reputation and research funding,
- To improve apprenticeship opportunities,
- To raise standards for all; improving learner participation, progression, performance and outcomes,
- To improve the curriculum on offer,
- To improve the learner experience and capture the learner's voice,
- To improve PCET reputation, agility and direction,
- To introduce an improved, compliant and effective PCET wide data collection, analysis and dissemination system that ensures timely, accessible and relevant information about PCET in Wales is available for all who need it,
- To reduce unnecessary course duplication and competition across PCET,
- To improve the coherence and consistency of financial and performance monitoring, and quality assurance, and
- To increase community use of PCET facilities and encourage greater connectivity.

Our systematic literature review provides some evidence which justifies the Welsh Government expectations, although there is a number of anticipated benefits that policy and academic research has not yet explored. Gaps in the literature do not necessarily indicate that the Welsh Government's expectations are unrealistic or non-feasible. Instead, they highlight the novel nature of the reforms, as well as the difficulty in measuring high-level targets.

This section continues with a list of more specific benefits, attempting to capture the essence of the aforementioned higher-level benefits, and their relation to the literature we reviewed.

Evidence by category in the Benefits Realisation Plan

Increased public confidence in the PCET system in Wales

Increased public confidence in the sector will come from a more direct line of sight across PCET, leading to stronger and more secure national and regional planning. Similar to the Welsh Government, all the RIAs reviewed expect a relevant intermediate benefit that would effectively increase public confidence in the sector.

The Office for Students, which has many regulatory similarities with the Welsh Commission, was expected to empower regulatory practice in HE through the implementation of a risk-based regulatory framework applicable to all HE providers. Effectively, the Office for Students, after assuming and concentrating the functions of HEFCE and OFFA, is expected to improve regulatory coherence (UK Government, 2016a).

Integrating oversight functions into one regulatory body and replacing all the Welsh Government Sponsored Bodies assigned with the duty to supervise, oversee and quality assure PCET providers, is expected to lead to a simplification of the qualifications market and improved regulatory activity comparable to the expectations in Qualifications Wales RIA. Additionally, a single, independent and authoritative body will be better able to respond to changes in the qualifications landscape in the UK, and will empower the Welsh voice in the European and International qualifications environments (Welsh Government, 2014). The less complex system will also allow for early intervention where needed, as well as reduced confusion resulting from vaguely defined paths between PCET education and the labour market. As a result, consistency among PCET providers will improve and employers with more confidence in the quality of graduate students, and students will make more confident decisions (DIISRTE, 2012).

Consistency in the approach to the regulation of institutions across PCET through a common purpose

This benefit relates closely to the previous one. Drawing from TEQSA's IA, there is justification behind the Government's expectation of increased consistency across the sector. Simplification of the regulatory landscape and more coherent regulation will discharge providers from the compliance burden of dealing with multiple overseeing bodies (DIISRTE, 2012). Standards of compliance will be clear and uniform to all PCET providers and any confusion – as it is identified in the Hazelkorn report (Hazelkorn, 2016) relating to overlapping roles across the PCET sector between the different agencies, will be reduced. CTER will bring the PCET sector together under one regulatory body and eliminate the confusion around overlapping roles of a number of organisations, namely the Higher Education Funding Council Wales (HEFCW), Estyn, Local Authorities (LAs), the Department for Education and Skills (DfES), Sêr Cymru, the Quality Assurance Agency (QAA).

Additionally, the risk-based regulatory framework will ensure that the highest risk providers will bear the greatest share of the regulatory burden hence all providers will have the incentive to comply and deliver high quality services so to reduce their regulatory costs.

Increase in learner participation rates and more post-16 learners progressing to higher learning (vocational and academic) and/or well-paid employment

Our research has already highlighted the importance of funding in education and its effects on social mobility. Cash transfers and other demand-side financing schemes aiming to increase participation amongst people from disadvantaged backgrounds have immediate short-term impacts on the distribution of access to education, as well as dynamic long-run impacts on intergenerational employment opportunities and poverty reduction (Tiongson, 2005). Dearden et al (2005) estimate that after the provision of the Education Maintenance Allowance (EMA) in the UK stay-on rates past the age of 16 grew by 4.5 percentage points while half of the individuals who stayed on in education were drawn from inactivity rather than work.

To the extent that the Commission could allocate funds to more efficiently target people who leave education too early because of financial constraints, significant distributional impacts can result. Participation rates and post-16 staying-on rates could increase if financial easing is able to target people who cannot afford postcompulsory education. In this way, the CTER can effectively succeed in meeting two of its objectives; increasing participation and staying on rates, as well as reducing the attainment and outcome gaps between learners from poorer and other disadvantaged background and their other more well-off peers. This is an important observation for the Commission and its future role of funding the PCET sector.

Integrated and improved evidence base – providing better quality, comparable PCET-wide data and information to inform policy development, and decision making at all levels (WG, providers, employers and learners)

One of the proposed roles of the new Commission, as the principal oversight body of the PCET sector, will be to introduce an improved, compliant and effective PCET wide data collection, analysis and dissemination system that ensures timely, accessible and relevant information about PCET in Wales, and which is available for all who need it. Drawing from the IA of Information Sharing and Data Transparency Duties, similar reforms in the UK were also expected to result in benefits for students, the Government and taxpayers, as a result of remedies to market failures prevalent in the field of higher education. Specifically, more detailed, centralised and publicly available information reduces information asymmetries and improves social mobility. Students make better decisions from improved information and improved comparability among providers. The Government is also more effective at designing policy that promotes participation of students from disadvantaged backgrounds, making use of the highly detailed available database (UK Government, 2016c). It follows that it is reasonable to expect similar benefits to accrue to the Welsh Government, students and taxpayers.

A more coherent and consistent funding model across the PCET sector

A single regulator will provide for a comparable and consistent approach to quality assurance and assessment across PCET according to a similar argument made for the Office for Students (UK Government, 2016a). The new Commission will be better able to bring together the multiple, but interconnected, agendas of the various organisations that supervise, fund and quality assure the PCET sector under the current system and pursue a common national PCET approach aligned with the Welsh Government's strategic objective of prosperity for all. Additionally, it can be argued that the CTER will be a more efficient funder of research and innovation than HEFCW. Considering its empowered position for collecting and centralising R&I providers' performance data, the new Commission will be better able to judge which providers contribute most to Wales' growth through the commercialisation of their research, and better promote the Government's national strategy for the PCET sector.

Improvement in the financial health of PCET institutions in Wales

Continuing with the logic behind the arguments for the Office of Students, a clearer and more efficient, more flexible regulatory system should ensure that the regulatory burden, more proportionate to the level of inherent risk of each provider, would burden less risky providers with less regulatory costs (UK Government, 2016a). There is an apparent negative linear relationship between the riskiness of the PCET provider and its regulatory costs. If riskier providers are to undertake higher costs, we can expect that after the reform only the less risky and compliant providers will enjoy improvements in their financial health. Progressively, the situation could evolve with riskier providers leaving the PCET market because they will not be able to meet their financial obligations, while at the same time leaving room for more efficient providers to expand or new providers to enter the market. Hence, the Welsh Government is justified expecting improvements in the financial health of PCET institutions especially for low-risk providers.

Better alignment between funding and cost of provision across PCET system

We have identified expectations for significant cost efficiencies, in the forms of savings from the removal of duplicate work after the merging of government bodies. In the UK, cost savings from reduced duplication and more strategic alliance between research councils' work in the areas of business planning, grant administration, analytical and evaluation work, were assumed to be 5% of the total amount of administration costs (UK Government, 2016b). Similar cost efficiencies were expected to result, in the case of the Office for Students, from the reduction of public bodies and the application of more efficient systems.

The expected efficiency savings were assumed to reduce Government's operating cost by 10% (UK Government, 2016a). Similarly, the Welsh Government can expect to experience some reduction in its administration costs resulting from the removal of duplicate work and the reduction of Government Sponsored Bodies with duty to supervise, oversee and quality assure PCET providers. Nonetheless, the actual reduction in administration costs, and the achieved amount of efficiency savings, will be determined by the exact final size and structure of the Commission as with the cases of the Office for Students and UKRI.

Other benefits in the benefits realisation plan not listed above

Our research did not return any evidence concerning how the introduction of the Commission in the PCET sector could lead to a number of benefits that the Welsh Government anticipates. The literature is generally silent regarding the following anticipated benefits:

- Enhanced problem detection and prevention capability, including the ability to respond to macro changes, and to mitigate disruption through changes in learner and employer demand,
- improvements in the overall learner satisfaction,
- improved matching between available training and research opportunities (supply side), and employer and learners' requests (demand side),
- increased number of, and income generated by, collaborative RI projects,
- increases in recognition of the value of both academic and vocational qualifications,
- the creation of a coherent route map for learners, employers and providers,
- reductions in the number of duplicated courses across the PCET sector that are uneconomic to deliver,
- improved planning and delivery of the skills set required in a particular locality and/or region, and
- increase in the joint use of facilities.

Further benefits found in the literature

A boost to private sector productivity may result from lower administration costs and more room for strategic leadership in the funding of research, according to the IA of the UK Research and Innovation reform (UK Government, 2016b, 2016c; IA of UK Research and Innovation reform). The advent of UKRI, assuming that it creates a clearer and more cohesive regulatory landscape, was expected to relieve research leaders appointed to fund research from excessive bureaucracy and administration tasks, allowing them to reallocate their efforts towards RI strategic leadership. Strategic leadership involves making the most informed funding decisions. By pooling multiple datasets into a centralised system and processing different sources of information on providers' performance, the new funding body will manage to target those providers that deliver multi- and inter-disciplinary research on cross-cutting areas and improve the quality of research and technological base. The reduction in regulatory requirements and bureaucratic tasks will also release academic and research institutes from administration activities and allow them to focus their resources in more research.

To the extent that the new Commission is able to successfully implement efficiency savings and redirect efforts towards more productive functions, similar to the case argued for the creation of UKRI, it could go beyond "efficiency savings". The Commission could consequently achieve an increased rate of return from public spending in R&I through more strategic leadership, better-informed funding decisions and more successful research and development (R&D) outcomes.

The case for the creation of UKRI proposes two indicative scenarios that could be relevant to the Welsh Government.

- Scenario 1: For every £1 of public spending in R&D, private sector productivity rises by 20 pence annually; this is equivalent to a 20% rate of return in public spending in R&D. If, after the consolidation of research functions into the new non-departmental public body, this rate of return increases by only one percentage point to only 10% of the total spending from 2020-2021 and onwards, this would give an economic benefit of around £230 million over a 10-year period.
- Scenario 2: For every £1 of public spending in supporting innovation, the social rate of return achieved is equal to a 50% rate of return. If, after the consolidation of research functions into the new non-departmental public body, this rate of return increases by only one percentage point to only 10% of the total spending from 2020-2021 and onwards, this would give an economic benefit of around £20 million over a 10-year period.

In reality, the highlighted benefits were expected to accrue over a much longer period (UK Government, 2016b, 2016c; IA of UK Research and Innovation reform). Productivity gains may arise also from reduced information asymmetries. If more students are at institutions that are the best match for them, then they are more likely to fulfil their potential in the labour market (UK Government, 2016c; IA of Information Sharing and Data Transparency Duties; DIISRTE, 2012). Productivity gains will accrue to taxpayers as well; if the Welsh Government can better design policy to improve outcomes for all groups, alongside more informed choices made by students, these may result in more productive graduates entering the labour force. This in turn can increase the rate of loan repayments (UK Government, 2016c; IA of Information Sharing and Data Transparency Duties). Other less easily quantified benefits (non-market benefits) include improved health and wellbeing, better development of public policy and delivery of public services, and cost avoidance through resilience to shocks (UK Government, 2016b).

Annex A – Summary of Benefits

Table 3 summarises the benefits found in the review grouped by the benefits categories, as those specified in the benefits realisation plan, and the groups for which these benefits are expected to accrue. The Welsh Government defines as “direct” those benefits that accrue to it. Indirect benefits include the benefits for PCET providers, and wider benefits are those that will accrue to different groups of society (i.e. taxpayers, employers, learners).

Annex 1: Explanatory notes for the Tertiary Education and Research (Wales) Bill

TERTIARY EDUCATION AND RESEARCH (WALES) BILL

EXPLANATORY NOTES

INTRODUCTION

1. These Explanatory Notes are for the Tertiary Education and Research (Wales) Bill (“the Bill”) as introduced to Senedd Cymru on 1 November 2021.
2. They have been prepared by the Skills, Higher Education and Lifelong Learning Directorate of the Welsh Government in order to assist the reader of the Bill and to help inform debate on it. They do not form part of the Bill and have not been endorsed by the Senedd.
3. The Explanatory Notes should be read in conjunction with the Bill. They are not meant to be a comprehensive description of the Bill. Where a section or part of a section is self-explanatory and does not seem to require any further explanation or comment, none is provided.

GENERAL OVERVIEW OF THE BILL

4. The Bill provides a new statutory framework for publicly funded tertiary education and research in Wales. “Tertiary education” is a new term in the statutory provisions relating to education and training in Wales, which includes higher education, further education and training suitable to the requirements of persons who have attained the age of 16.
5. The Bill comprises 144 sections and 4 Schedules and is divided into 7 Parts as follows

Part 1 – Strategic Framework for Tertiary Education and Research

6. Part 1 provides for the establishment of a new public body, the Commission for Tertiary Education and Research (“the Commission”). The body will exercise new functions created by the Bill, the existing statutory functions of the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales (“HEFCW”) and many of the existing further education and training functions of the Welsh Ministers. Most of these existing statutory functions are repealed in their current form and restated in the Bill, with modifications to make them exercisable by the Commission (instead of HEFCW or the Welsh Ministers) and with modifications in other respects in some cases.
7. Part 1 sets out the strategic duties of the Commission, requires strategic planning for tertiary education and research by the Commission and abolishes HEFCW.
8. Provision is made for the Welsh Ministers to have an ‘arms-length’ supervisory role in respect of the Commission. The Welsh Ministers—

- are required to publish a statement of strategic priorities for tertiary education and research, which is to inform the Commission's strategic planning;
 - are to appoint the members of the Commission;
 - may confer supplementary functions on the Commission by regulations;
 - may give guidance to which the Commission must have regard when exercising its functions; and
 - may give general directions to the Commission about the exercise of its functions.
9. Duties are also placed on both the Commission and the Welsh Ministers to have regard, when exercising functions under the Bill, to the importance of protecting the academic freedom of higher education providers and the freedom of speech of academic staff at such providers.
10. This Part introduces Schedule 1 which sets out the status of the Commission; makes provision about membership of the Commission including some terms and conditions; imposes a duty on the Commission to have a Research and Innovation Committee, a Quality Committee and an associate Commission staff member appointment committee. It enables it to establish other committees including joint committees; makes provisions about memberships of the Commission (including workforce and learner representation), audit and accounts, a duty to ensure good value, annual reporting requirements as well as other operational requirements such as delegations, proceedings, register of interests and the exercise of functions.
11. This Part also introduces Schedule 2 which makes provision about the transfer of property and staff to the Commission.

Part 2 – Registration and Regulation of Tertiary Education Providers

12. Part 2 is about the registration and regulation of tertiary education providers and is divided into 4 chapters:
- Chapter 1 provides for a new system of registration of tertiary education providers (registration under Part 2 is not a legal requirement for the provision of tertiary education in itself; registration is linked to the Commission's powers under Part 3 to fund tertiary education (see the explanation of Part 3 below));
 - Chapter 2 makes provision for quality assurance of publicly funded tertiary education (registered and unregistered) through monitoring, assessment and inspection;
 - Chapter 3 makes provision for intervention in further education institutions (unrelated to the registration system established by Chapter 1) and procedures for the exercise of all enforcement functions under Part 2;
 - Chapter 4 makes general provision relevant to the Part.

Chapter 1 – Registration of tertiary education providers

13. The Commission must establish and maintain a register of tertiary education providers in Wales and providers may apply to become registered in one or more categories of the register. Categories of registration are to be set in regulations made by the Welsh Ministers. The conditions of registration are a combination of conditions imposed directly by the Bill and conditions set and published by the Commission, which must be proportionate to their aims. The Commission is placed under duty to impose some conditions on all registered providers and it has duties to set particular kinds of conditions for particular kinds of registered provider. It also is given power to set conditions of its own choosing.

14. The mandatory conditions in the Bill for specified categories of provider relate to fee limits for courses and promoting equal opportunity. The categories of registered provider to which these provisions apply are to be specified by the Welsh Ministers in by regulations. The Welsh Ministers also have the power by regulations to require the Commission to impose other conditions on registered providers.
15. The Commission is placed under a duty to monitor compliance with the registration conditions, may provide advice and assistance to tertiary education providers and may carry out or arrange reviews of matters relevant to compliance. Enforcement of any failure of a registered provider to comply with conditions of registration is to be by directions given by the Commission.
16. The Chapter also makes procedural provision for de-registration of registered providers and provision for reviews of Commission decisions by an independent panel.

Chapter 2 – Quality assurance and improving quality

17. Chapter 2 gives the Commission the function of publishing quality assurance frameworks for the purpose of guiding policy and practice in the assessment of tertiary education by the Commission, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Education and Training for Wales ("Estyn") or a body designated by the Commission under Chapter 2 to carry out the Commission's assessment functions in respect of higher education.
18. In respect of tertiary education provided by registered providers or tertiary education funded or secured by the Commission, the Commission –
 - must monitor, and promote improvement in, the quality,
 - may provide advice or assistance to improve quality, and
 - may carry out or arrange reviews of matters relevant to quality.
19. The Commission has a specific duty to assess, or arrange assessment, of higher education provided by or on behalf of registered providers; and a duty is placed on the governing bodies of registered providers to publish action plans following these assessments. The Commission is given a power to designate a body to perform its higher education assessment functions. Schedule 3, which is introduced by the Chapter, provides for the process for designation of a body, oversight of the body by the Commission and the charging of fees by the designated body.
20. Chapter 2 restates the functions of Estyn in respect of the inspection of post-16 education and training and the duties of persons responsible for providing education inspected, with modifications to take account of the new statutory context established by the Bill. The existing provisions in sections 75 to 80 and 83 to 88 of the Learning Skills Act 2000 are repealed.

Chapter 3 – Further enforcement and procedural provisions

21. Chapter 3 restates, with modifications, the existing power of the Welsh Ministers to intervene in the conduct of further education institutions in Wales where their governing bodies fail to comply with duties, act unreasonably or perform inadequately. It provides the Commission with a power to refer cases to the Welsh Ministers where it considers there are grounds for intervention. The existing power of the Welsh Ministers in section 57 of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992 is repealed.
22. Provision is made for the Commission to give directions requiring the co-operation of certain tertiary education providers that are not registered providers, in so far as their activities are caught by Part 2. A power of entry and inspection is given to persons authorised by the Commission for the purpose of exercising Commission functions under Part 2.

23. The Chapter specifies requirements for warning notices to be given before the Commission gives directions in respect of failure to comply with conditions, notices of rejection of proposed fee limit statements (or of variations or replacements) or directions requiring the co-operation of certain providers that are not registered providers. The governing body of a provider given a warning notice is to have the right to apply for a review of the Commission's proposed decision; and the review is to be conducted by a person, or panel of persons, appointed by the Welsh Ministers.
24. The Commission is placed under a duty to monitor and report on the financial stability of registered providers, and institutions in the further education sector that are funded by the Commission. And the Commission is placed under a duty to publish a statement on how it proposes to exercise its intervention functions under Part 2.

Part 3 – Securing and Funding Tertiary Education and Research

25. This Part provides for the funding of the Commission by the Welsh Ministers, the powers of the Commission to fund tertiary education and research, apprenticeships and the Commission's duties to secure the provision of facilities for further education and training. The funding powers of the Commission in respect of higher education replace the existing funding powers HEFCW in the Further and Higher Education Act 1992, which are repealed. The duties to secure further education and training replace the existing functions of the Welsh Ministers in sections 31 to 33 of the Learning and Skills Act 2000, which are repealed.
26. Funding of higher education by the Commission must be in respect of providers and courses specified in regulations made by the Welsh Ministers. Specification of providers is by reference to category of registration under Part 2. The Welsh Ministers may also fund a limited range of higher education courses themselves.
27. Funding of research and innovation by the Commission must also be in respect of tertiary education providers registered in categories specified by the Welsh Ministers in regulations.

Part 4 – Apprenticeships

28. Part 4 provides for approved Welsh apprenticeships. These are apprenticeships that take place wholly or mainly in Wales in accordance with apprenticeships frameworks published by the Commission (which may be prepared by the Commission or other persons). The Welsh Ministers may specify requirements in relation to approved Welsh apprenticeships, including the content and preparation of apprenticeship frameworks.

Part 5 – Learner Protection, Complaints Procedures and Learner Engagement

29. Part 5 provides for learner protection plans, which are documents setting out a tertiary education provider's arrangements for protecting the interests of students undertaking courses in the event that the course ceases to be provided and for supporting students who wish to transfer to different courses.
30. The Part requires the Commission to take steps to ensure that tertiary education providers have procedures in place for investigating complaints by students and extends the meaning of “qualifying institution” for the purposes of student complaints schemes under the Higher Education Act 2004.

31. The Part also requires the Commission to prepare and publish a Learner Engagement Code about the involvement of persons receiving tertiary education in decisions made by the providers of the tertiary education.

Part 6 – Information, Advice and Guidance

32. Part 6 provides powers and duties to give information, advice and guidance. This includes:
- a duty on the Commission to give advice and information on request of the Welsh Ministers and power to do so;
 - a power for the Welsh Ministers to give information to the Commission;
 - a duty for certain tertiary education providers and other bodies to give information on request to the Commission;
 - power for various public bodies to share information with the Commission;
 - a duty to share information relating to applications for admission to higher education courses.
33. This Part also provides a power to the Commission to give advice and issue guidance to any person about the provision of tertiary education or any matter connected to the Commission’s functions. And it gives the Commission and the Welsh Ministers power to carry out or fund research into education and training in Wales or connected matters.

Part 7 Miscellaneous and General

34. This Part makes provision in respect of instruments and articles of government of higher education corporations in Wales and the dissolution of such corporations. It introduces a duty on Welsh Ministers to consult the Commission about careers services; contains provisions on subordinate legislation procedures; provides powers for the Welsh Ministers to make transitional, consequential etc. provisions; and makes provision in respect of commencement, interpretation, coming into force etc.
35. This Part introduces Schedule 4 which sets out minor and consequential amendments to primary legislation affected by the Bill’s provisions.

COMMENTARY ON SECTIONS

Part 1: Strategic Framework for Tertiary Education and Research

The Commission

Section 1: Establishment of the Commission for Tertiary Education and Research &

Schedule 1: Commission for Tertiary Education and Research

36. This section provides for the establishment of the Commission. The Commission will be a body corporate with its own legal personality and specific powers and duties.
37. This section also introduces Schedule 1, which makes provision about the Commission’s membership, committees and operational arrangements.
38. The Commission’s members will comprise of a chair, deputy chair and between four and fourteen ordinary members, appointed by the Welsh Ministers. The chief executive is also a member. The Welsh Ministers will appoint the first chief executive for a period of up to 4 years, with future appointments being made by the Commission, subject to approval of the Welsh Ministers.

39. The Commission will also have associate members who will represent the tertiary education workforce (both academic and non-academic), the Commission's staff and learners in tertiary education.
40. Paragraph 5 sets out the appointments process for the associate workforce members. This includes a requirement for the Welsh Ministers to publish lists of trade unions who will nominate representatives of the academic tertiary education workforce and non-academic tertiary education workforce. To be eligible to be an associate workforce member, a person must be employed by a provider of tertiary education in Wales and be a member of a trade union on the most recently published relevant list. It is expected that the consultation process for compiling the list of trade unions will lead to a position where the trade unions listed will be recognised by the tertiary education providers.
41. Paragraph 6 sets out the process for the appointment of an associate Commission staff member. A staff member appointment committee (established under paragraph 11(5)) must appoint a person from candidates nominated by each trade union recognised by the Commission. To be eligible to be an associate Commission staff member, a person must be employed by the Commission and be a member of a trade union recognised by the Commission.
42. Paragraph 7 sets out the appointment process for the associate learner member. This includes a requirement for the Welsh Ministers to publish a list of bodies representing the interests of learners undertaking tertiary education in Wales. The associate learner member will be appointed by the Welsh Ministers from nominations made by bodies on the list. It is anticipated this list will include the Student Union in Wales but could also include other representative bodies. To be eligible to be an associate learner member, a person must have been a learner undertaking tertiary education in the 3 years before being appointed and must hold an office or membership of a body on the published list.
43. The Commission will have a committee called the Research and Innovation Committee for the purpose of advising it about its research and innovation functions. The chair of the Research and Innovation Committee is appointed by the Welsh Ministers and will also be the deputy chair of the Commission (and a person who ceases to hold one position or who is suspended from that position will also cease to hold the other position or be suspended from it). The Commission must also establish a committee called the Quality Committee to advise it on the quality of tertiary education funded or secured by it, and a staff member appointment committee. It can establish other committees and joint committees, and can delegate functions to its committees.
44. Schedule 1 also contains provision about the Commission's audit and accounts, annual reports, procedures, register of interests and supplementary powers.

The Commission's strategic duties

45. Sections 2 to 10 are broadly framed strategic duties of an aspirational nature, which require the Commission to promote or encourage outcomes specified in the sections. The provisions do not specify the extent or nature of the activity the Commission must undertake in any detail and the open-ended nature of the outcomes specified gives the Commission wide discretion as to the nature and extent of the action it takes to achieve them.

Section 2: Promoting life-long learning

46. This section requires the Commission to promote life-long learning for the people of Wales. Life-long learning is not a defined term in the section, but is encapsulated by its provisions, which describe tertiary education that –
- provides opportunities for people to participate throughout their lives from the age of 16,
 - includes variety of levels and qualifications,
 - includes a variety of settings and modes of study,
 - is organised coherently to facilitate movement through different stages of education and into employment or business;
 - otherwise meets the different requirements of those who wish to undertake tertiary education

Section 3: Promoting equality of opportunity

47. This section requires the Commission to promote increased participation by, and retention of, members of under-represented groups in tertiary education in Wales.

Section 4: Encouraging participation in tertiary education

48. This section requires the Commission to encourage individuals and employers in Wales to participate in the provision of tertiary education.

Section 5: Promoting continuous improvement in tertiary education and research

49. This section requires the Commission to promote continuous improvement in the quality of tertiary education and research and innovation carried out in Wales. The section also specifies matters to which the Commission must have regard when discharging the duty.

Section 6: Promoting collaboration and coherence in tertiary education and research

50. This section requires the Commission to promote collaboration between providers, schools and employers in Wales, as well as coherence in the provision of tertiary education.

Section 7: Contributing to a sustainable and innovative economy

51. This section requires the Commission duty to promote tertiary education and research in Wales that contributes to the development of a sustainable and innovative economy. The section also specifies matters to which the Commission must have regard when discharging the duty, and defines sustainable economy.

Section 8: Promoting tertiary education through the medium of Welsh

52. This section imposes a duty on the Commission to encourage participation in and the provision of Welsh medium tertiary education. The Commission must also take reasonable steps to ensure there is sufficient Welsh medium tertiary education provided in Wales to meet reasonable demand.

Section 9: Promoting a civic mission

53. This section places a duty on the Commission to promote the pursuit of a civic mission by institutions in Wales within the further education sector and higher education sector. The Commission is also given the power to promote the pursuit of a civic mission by other persons who are funded by the Commission. “Civic mission” is defined in subsection (3) as, “action for the purpose of promoting or improving the economic, social, environmental or cultural well-being of Wales (including action aimed at achieving any of the well-being goals in section 4 of the Well-being of Future Generations (Wales) Act 2015 (anaw 2))”.

Section 10: Promoting a global outlook

54. This section requires the Commission to promote opportunities for people in Wales to teach and study tertiary education elsewhere in the world and for people outside Wales to study or teach in Wales. The Commission must promote opportunities for the benefits of such exchanges to be used for the well-being of Wales. It must also promote collaboration between providers of tertiary education in Wales and those elsewhere in the world and opportunities for international collaboration in research.

Strategy for tertiary education and research

Section 11: Statement of strategic priorities

55. This section places the Welsh Ministers under a duty to publish a statement setting out their strategic priorities for tertiary education and research and innovation. The statement may be amended or replaced by the Welsh Ministers. Any amendments must be published.

Section 12: Strategic plan for the Commission

56. This section places the Commission under a duty to prepare a strategic plan setting out how it intends to discharge its strategic duties and to address the priorities in the statement of strategic priorities published by the Welsh Ministers (subsection (1)). In preparing the plan, the Commission must consult such persons it considers appropriate (subsection (2)).

Section 13: Approval, publication and implementation of strategic plan

57. A strategic plan prepared under section 12 must be sent to the Welsh Ministers for approval within six months of the publication of the Welsh Ministers' statement of priorities under section 11 (subsection (1)).
58. The Welsh Ministers have the power to approve the plan with or without modifications, but have a duty to consult the Commission in the event of making modifications to the plan (subsections (2) and (3)).
59. The Commission must publish the plan (subsection (4)) and subsection (5) provides that the duty to publish its statement about well-being objectives under section 7 of the Well-being of Future Generations (Wales) Act 2015 (anaw 2) may be discharged by including it in its approved strategic plan.
60. Subsection (6) places a duty on the Commission to take all reasonable steps to implement the strategic plan.

Section 14: Review of strategic plan

61. This section outlines the process to be followed by the Commission in reviewing and revising its strategic plan.
62. The Commission must review its strategic plan if the Welsh Ministers publish amendments to its statement of strategic priorities under section 11 after the Commission has published its approved strategic plan. The Commission also has the power to review its strategic plan at any other time.
63. Where any review of the strategic plan leads to the plan being revised, section 12 applies to any revision of the plan as it applies to preparation of the plan.
64. A revised strategic plan must be sent to the Welsh Ministers for approval within six months where the revision is in consequence of the Welsh Ministers publishing amendments to their statement under section 12(2); or where the revision is in consequence of the Commission reviewing its strategic plan at any other time, as soon as reasonably practicable. The provisions of section 13(2) to (6) apply to a revised plan.

Academic freedom

Section 15: Academic freedom of providers of higher education

65. This section requires the Welsh Ministers and the Commission to have regard to the need to protect the academic freedom of tertiary education providers in Wales that provide higher education (subsection (1)).
66. “Academic freedom” is defined in subsection (2) as including the freedom of tertiary education providers providing higher education to determine the content, teaching, supervision and assessment of higher education courses, the criteria for admission to higher education courses, and the criteria for selecting and appointing academic staff (subsection (2)). It is not an exhaustive definition

Section 16: Freedom of speech of academic staff at providers of higher education

67. This section requires the Welsh Ministers and the Commission to have regard to the need to protect the freedom of academic staff at tertiary education providers that provide higher education to question and test received wisdom and to put forward new ideas and controversial or unpopular opinions, without jeopardising their employment or privileges at the providers.

Compatibility with charity law

Section 17: Compatibility with charity law and governing documents of tertiary education providers

68. The effect of this section is that any requirements that the Commission may impose on the governing bodies of tertiary education providers under this Bill (e.g. registration conditions or directions) cannot require those governing bodies to act in breach of their obligations as charity trustees, nor require governing bodies to act in a manner incompatible with their governing documents.
69. For these purposes, the governing documents of tertiary education providers are defined in subsection (2) in relation to providers established by Royal Charter, providers conducted by higher education corporations or further education corporations, providers that are institutions designated under section 129 of the Education Reform Act 1988 or section 28 of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992 and other providers conducted by companies.

Welsh Ministers’ guidance and directions

Section 18: Guidance

70. This section provides that the Commission must have regard to guidance given to it by Welsh Ministers.

Section 19: The Welsh Ministers’ power to give general directions

71. Subsection (1) enables the Welsh Ministers to issue general directions to the Commission about the exercise of any of its functions. A direction issued by the Welsh Ministers under this section is subject to the limitations that are set out in subsections (2), (3) and (5). The limitations set out under subsections (2) and (3) do not prevent any direction issued under this section from being framed by reference to a course of study, or parts of courses of study, being provided and assessed through the medium of Welsh (subsection (4)). The purpose of the limitations is to protect the institutional autonomy of tertiary education and research providers, the academic freedom of higher education providers and the ability of the Commission to determine funding allocations to individual providers.

72. Subsection (6) requires the Welsh Ministers to consult the Commission before issuing a general direction. Subsection (7) requires the Welsh Ministers to keep any general direction given to the Commission under review. The Welsh Ministers must also publish any general direction given to the Commission under this section and report any such directions to the Senedd. Subsection (8) requires the Commission to comply with a general direction given by the Welsh Ministers.

Additional functions

Section 20: Additional functions of the Commission

73. Subsection (1) enables the Welsh Ministers to confer supplementary functions on the Commission by way of regulations. A supplementary function conferred on the Commission under these powers must relate to tertiary education, or research and innovation, and be exercisable by the Welsh Ministers (subsection (2)).
74. Subsections (3) and (4) enable the Welsh Ministers to direct that their functions in relation to the land or other property of an institution in Wales within the higher or further education sector, may be exercised by the Commission. The Welsh Ministers' functions arise where they are entitled to a right or interest in respect of that property. The Commission is required to exercise these functions in accordance with directions given by the Welsh Ministers (subsection (5)).

Dissolution of Higher Education Funding Council for Wales

Section 21: Dissolution of the Higher Education and Funding Council for Wales

75. This section dissolves HEFCW.

Section 22 and Schedule 2: Transfer schemes

76. This section introduces Schedule 2 which makes provision about schemes for the transfer of staff, property, rights and liabilities as a result of establishing the Commission and dissolving HEFCW.

Part 2: Registration and Regulation of Tertiary Education Providers

Chapter 1: Registration of Tertiary Education Providers

The register and registration procedure

Section 23: The register

77. Subsection (1) requires the Commission to set up and maintain a register of tertiary education providers in Wales. The Commission must register those providers that apply to be registered and which satisfy the conditions for registration (subsection (4)).
78. The register, through the use of registration conditions (see sections 25 to 33), provides a means of regulating such providers. In combination with revised student support regulations made by the Welsh Ministers under section 22 of the Teaching and Higher Education Act 1998 ("the 1998 Act"), registration will also determine a providers' eligibility for automatic designation for Welsh Government student support.
79. The register is to be divided into different categories of registration specified in regulations made by the Welsh Ministers (subsection (2)). It is intended that the categories of registration will allow appropriate variance in the conditions of registration required for different types of registered providers in receipt of different forms of public funding. Regulations may prohibit a provider from registering in one category whilst it is registered in one or more other categories (subsection (5)).

80. Providers, once registered, must meet the general and any specific ongoing registration conditions applicable to them in the relevant category of registration. Provision for these conditions, and the process for determining them, is set out in sections 26, 27, 29, 30 and 31.
81. The procedure for and form of applications for registration is a matter for the Commission to determine (subsection (7)). Information contained in the register must be publicly available (subsection (11)), and the Welsh Ministers may specify in regulations the information that is to be contained in a registered provider's entry in the register (subsection (8)).

Section 24: Registration procedure

82. This section sets out the procedure to be followed in the event that the Commission intends to refuse an application for registration, or where the Commission intends to refuse an application from a registered provider to change categories.
83. The Commission must notify the governing body of the provider where it intends to refuse the provider's application. In doing so, the Commission must specify its reasons and the period within which a provider may make representations to the Commission about the Commission's proposal (subsection (2)). The period must not be less than 28 days (subsection (3)).
84. The Commission may, at the conclusion of the specified notice period, either decide to register the provider in the category to which it has applied, or refuse to do so. The Commission must notify the governing body of its decision (subsection (5)) and a notice of refusal to register a provider must set out the grounds of refusal and information as to the right of review of the Commission's decision (subsection (7)).

Registration conditions

Section 25: Initial registration conditions

85. A provider applying to register with the Commission must satisfy initial registration conditions. This section sets out three mandatory initial registration conditions, which apply to all registration categories. The Commission must be satisfied as to –
- the quality of education provided by a the applicant tertiary education provider, or provided on its behalf, .
 - the effectiveness of the governance and management of the applicant, and
 - the financial sustainability of the applicant.
86. For further information regarding the Commission's functions in respect of quality assessment and assurance, see Chapter 2 of this Part.
87. The standard required for providers to satisfy initial registration conditions, and the information required to demonstrate this, will be determined by the Commission. The Commission is required to publish a document specifying the requirements for satisfying such conditions (subsection (2)).
88. The Welsh Ministers may, by regulation, specify further initial registration conditions and different conditions may be specified for different categories of registration. The list provided in subsection (4)(b) indicates the kind of conditions that may be specified in these regulations, but it is not an exhaustive list and not all of these categories may be appropriate initial conditions of registration for all categories of the register.

Section 26: General ongoing registration conditions

89. As stated in section 23(9), a registered provider must continue to satisfy ongoing registration conditions in order to maintain its registration. A general ongoing registration condition is a condition determined by the Commission, which applies to one or more categories of registration.
90. The Commission must publish the general ongoing conditions and any revisions to those conditions. Before determining or revising the general ongoing conditions, the Commission is under a duty, if it appears appropriate to do so, to consult concerned persons, for example those registered providers which will be subject to the registration conditions.
91. The Commission may determine different conditions for different categories or descriptions of registered provider (subsection (2)). Under subsection (8), the Commission may decide that a general ongoing registration condition is not applicable to a particular registered provider. In such instances, the Commission may dis-apply the condition in relation to that provider and must inform the provider of its decision (subsection (9)).

Section 27: Specific ongoing registration conditions

92. This section sets out when the Commission can impose, vary, or remove an ongoing registration condition that applies to a specific registered provider, as opposed to all registered providers or a category of providers.
93. Before imposing, varying or removing a specific ongoing registration condition, the Commission must notify the governing body of the provider affected (subsection (3)). The notice must inform the provider of the Commission's reasons for proposing the specific ongoing registration condition and of the provider's right to make representations about the proposal within a specific period (subsection (4)).
94. The Commission must have regard to any representations made by the governing body of the provider in deciding whether to impose, vary, or remove the specific ongoing registration condition (subsection (6)), and must notify the provider of its decision (subsection (7)).
95. A notice relating to the imposition or variation of a specific ongoing registration condition must set out the grounds of the decision and be accompanied with information as to the right of review (subsection (9)). The new specific ongoing registration condition cannot have effect until the period of review has passed. In addition, the new specific ongoing registration condition cannot have effect while an application for review has been made and, until any review conducted is concluded. The Commission must subsequently determine a date on which the specific ongoing registration condition will take effect, at which point, the notice must be published.

Section 28: Proportionate conditions etc.

96. This section requires the Commission to ensure that its ongoing registration conditions, and the guidance published regarding satisfaction of initial registration conditions (see section 13) are proportionate to its assessment of any risks posed. These may include, for example, risks to safeguarding of public funds, students' interests, and any other risks related to the Commission's functions in respect of tertiary education providers.
97. In order that registration conditions and requirements continue to be proportionate, the Commission is required to keep its ongoing registration conditions under review.

Section 29: Mandatory ongoing registration conditions for each registered provider

98. In addition to any other general ongoing registration conditions determined by the Commission under section 26, the Commission must ensure that all providers registered in each category of the register are subject to the conditions listed in this section. These may be imposed as part of the general ongoing registration conditions or by way of a specific ongoing registration condition.

Section 30: Mandatory ongoing registration condition on fee limits

99. This section requires the Commission to ensure that each provider registered in a category specified by the Welsh Ministers in regulations is subject to a fee limit condition. A fee limit condition requires the provider to have an approved fee limit statement and to ensure that regulated course fees do not exceed the applicable fee limit. More information on the fee limit statement is outlined in sections 44 to 46.
100. A “qualifying course” is a course described in regulations made by the Welsh Ministers, subject to the conditions set out in subsection (5) “Regulated course fees” are fees payable by a qualifying person to a provider in order to undertake a qualifying course (subsection (6) and (7)). Subsection (8) provides that a “qualifying person” is a person described in regulations made by the Welsh Ministers who is not an international student within the meaning of subsection (9).
101. Subsection (10) also allows the Welsh Ministers to make regulations specifying when fees paid for a course at an external provider (i.e. on behalf of a registered provider) are to be treated as regulated course fees and therefore subject to a fee limit.

Section 31: Mandatory ongoing registration conditions on equal opportunity

102. Regulations made by the Welsh Ministers may specify categories of registration to which mandatory ongoing registration conditions on equal opportunity must apply.
103. Conditions on equal opportunity require the registered provider to demonstrate delivery of measurable outcomes which further the aims listed in subsection (2). These aims relate to increasing participation, improving retention, reducing attainment gaps, and improving employment and further study outcomes for students from under-represented groups. Under-represented groups are defined in subsection (3) as groups of students that are under-represented in tertiary education in Wales as a result of social, cultural, economic or organisational factors.

Section 32: Power to provide for further mandatory ongoing registration conditions

104. In addition to the mandatory ongoing registration conditions provided for in sections 29, 30 and 31, the Welsh Ministers may specify in regulations further mandatory ongoing registration conditions that the Commission must apply to one or more categories of registration.

Section 33: Commission duty to give guidance about ongoing registration conditions

105. This section requires the Commission to publish guidance for registered providers concerning the ongoing registration conditions.

Monitoring and enforcement of registration conditions

Section 34: Commission duty to monitor compliance with ongoing registration conditions

106. This section requires the Commission to monitor each registered provider’s compliance with their ongoing registration conditions.

Section 35: Advice and assistance in respect of compliance with ongoing registration conditions

107. The Commission may provide advice and assistance to registered providers in order to aid compliance with registration conditions.

Section 36: Reviews relevant to compliance with ongoing registration conditions

108. The Commission may, if it deems appropriate, carry out a review of matters relevant to compliance with registration conditions. The Commission may also arrange for such a review to be carried out by another appropriate body; for example, by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector or the designated quality body (see Chapter 2) for matters in respect of the mandatory ongoing registration condition concerning quality.

Section 37: Directions in respect of failure to comply with ongoing registration conditions

109. Where the Commission is satisfied that a provider has failed (or is likely to fail) to comply with an ongoing registration condition, this section allows the Commission to direct the provider to take certain actions to comply with the condition. This might follow on from previous steps taken by the Commission to ensure compliance with registration conditions, such as advice and assistance (section 35) and reviews (section 36).
110. In respect of a failure to comply with a fee limit condition, the Commission may also direct a provider to repay to students any fee monies which have exceeded the fee limit ("excess fees"), and the manner in which it must do so (subsection (3), (4) and (5)).
111. Any directions issued to providers by the Commission must be published and a copy provided to the Welsh Ministers (subsection (6)).

Section 38: Supplementary provision about directions under section 37

112. The Commission must comply with the procedures set out in sections 73 to 76 when giving directions under section 37.
113. The Commission may issue guidance about how providers should comply with any directions issued under section 37, and must first consult registered providers and other appropriate providers regarding the content of this guidance.

De-registration

Section 39: De-registration

114. The Commission has both a power and a duty to remove a provider from the register or from a category of the register in circumstances provided for in this section.
115. If a registered provider is no longer an 'tertiary education provider in Wales', or ceases to provide the type of tertiary education that is relevant to its category of registration (for example higher education, or further education), the Commission must remove that provider from either that particular category of the register, or from the register entirely. This is because the provider would no longer satisfy the conditions set out in section 23.
116. The Welsh Ministers may make regulations to specify other circumstances in which the Commission must remove providers from either a particular category of the register, or from the register entirely.

117. The Commission may remove a provider from the register or a category of the register if it appears to the Commission that the provider has breached one of its ongoing registration conditions and:
- the Commission has previously issued a direction to that provider in relation to any breach of an ongoing registration condition, or
 - the Commission considers that issuing a direction under section 37 would be insufficient to deal with the breach.
118. Under subsections (6) and (7), the Welsh Ministers may make regulations establishing transitional arrangements where a provider is to be removed from the register or from a category of the register. This might involve temporarily treating the provider as a registered provider in a particular category, for example, in order to enable existing students at the provider to continue to receive student support.
119. The Commission must publish a list of any provider removed from the register or a category of the register, including reference to any regulations made under subsection (6).

Section 40: De-registration: procedure

120. This section establishes the process the Commission must follow when removing a provider from the register or a category of the register under section 39.
121. The Commission must notify the governing body of a registered provider of its intention to de-register the provider and its reasons for doing so. Providers will have a specified period to make representations to the Commission about the proposal. The Commission must have regard to any representations made during the specified period before deciding whether or not to remove the provider from the register or from a category of the register.
122. If the Commission decides to proceed with the de-registration decision, then the governing body of the provider may request a review (see section 43) of that decision by the decision reviewer (see section 77). Any notice of a decision by the Commission to de-register a provider must be accompanied with information as to the right of review.
123. A de-registration under section 39 cannot take effect while a review of the decision could be requested or is being undertaken, unless the provider notifies the Commission that it does not intend to apply for a review.

Section 41: Voluntary de-registration and de-registration with consent

124. Registered providers may apply, in a form determined by the Commission, to be removed from the register or a category of the register, or may give consent to a proposal from the Commission to remove the provider from the register or a category of the register.
125. If a provider applies for de-registration in accordance with subsection (6), the Commission is obliged to accept the application and must specify a date for removal from the register or category of the register. The governing body of the provider is able to apply for a review by the decision reviewer of the decision regarding the date for removal (see section 43).
126. Where a provider applies to be removed from a category of the register, it may specify in its application that it is, at the same time, applying for registration in a different category. Where such an application to change categories is made, the effect of subsections (2) to (4) is that the Commission is not obliged to remove the provider from its existing category unless it is also able to register it in the new category.

127. As in section 39, the Welsh Ministers may make regulations establishing transitional arrangements (subsection (13)). This might involve temporarily treating the provider as a registered provider, for example, to enable existing students at the provider to continue to receive student support.
128. The Commission must publish a list of any providers removed from the register or a category of the register and of any regulations made under subsection (13).

Section 42: Change of registration category without application

129. Where a provider is removed from a category of the register under section 39(3) or 41(5), the Commission may register the provider in another category of the register if –
- the governing body consents,
 - it continues to fall within the definition of “tertiary education provider in Wales” (see section 139(1)),
 - it provides, or has provided on its behalf, the tertiary education relevant to the registration category,
 - it satisfies the relevant initial registration conditions (see section 25), and
 - registration is not prohibited under section 23(5).

Registration decision reviews

Section 43: Registration decision reviews

130. Whenever the Commission notifies a provider of a decision to:
- refuse registration in a category under section 23;
 - impose or vary a specific condition of registration under section 27;
 - remove a provider from a category of the register under section 39 ; or
 - determine the date upon which any de-registration will take effect under section 41(7) or (8);

the provider in question may request a review of that decision.

131. Decision reviews will be carried out by the person or panel appointed by the Welsh Ministers under section 77 and in accordance with the review process established by regulations under that section.

Fee limit statements

Section 44: Requirements of a fee limit statement

132. This section sets out what a fee limit statement is and what it must include. When a registered provider is subject to a fee limit condition under section 30, the provider’s fee limit statement must specify the fee limit, or provide for the determination of the fee limit, in relation to each qualifying course. This fee limit must not exceed the “maximum amount”.
133. The “maximum amount” is the amount specified by the Welsh Ministers that a fee limit for a qualifying course may not exceed in any academic year.
134. Fee limits for different courses may vary, and may also vary from year to year. Where there is a process or formula for determining a fee limit, this must be specified in the fee limit statement.
135. A fee limit statement has effect from the date which is specified in the fee limit statement.

Section 45: Approval of fee limit statement

136. Where the governing body of a provider applies to the Commission for approval of a fee limit statement, the Commission may approve or reject the statement and must give notice of that decision. This also applies where a provider applies for approval of a variation or replacement of the fee limit statement.
137. Where the Commission rejects a proposed fee limit statement, or a variation or replacement of a fee limit statement, it must follow the procedures outlined in sections 73 to 76.

Section 46: Publication of approved fee limit statement

138. A provider with an approved fee limit statement must publish that statement, and any approved variations or replacements. Published fee limit statements should be easily accessible to students and prospective students.

Section 47: Validity of contracts

139. This section applies where a contract between a provider and a qualifying person in respect of that person undertaking a qualifying course provides for the payment of fees by the person which exceed the applicable fee limit.
140. “Qualifying person” and “qualifying course” have the meaning given to those terms in section 30.
141. Subsection (2) provides that such a contract is to be treated as providing for the payment of fees which are equivalent to the applicable fee limit. So where a student refuses to pay any excess fees specified in a contract the provider will not be able to recover the excess fees. But the contract will remain otherwise enforceable in terms of the provider’s duty to provide education to the student, despite the contract providing for the payment of fees which exceed the applicable fee limit (subsection(3)).

Chapter 2 – Quality Assurance and Improving Quality

General quality assurance functions

Section 48: Quality assurance frameworks

142. Subsection (1) gives a power to the Commission to produce and publish a quality assurance framework or frameworks. A quality assurance framework is a document setting out information and guidance on policy and practice relating to the criteria and arrangements for assessing or inspecting the quality of tertiary education and training. It may outline the roles and responsibilities of Estyn and the designated quality assessment body in conducting quality assurance, as well as the roles and responsibilities of tertiary education providers and others regarding the quality of tertiary education.
143. Frameworks may also set out guidance and information regarding the professional development of the tertiary education workforce and provide information and guidance on any other relevant matters related to quality assurance.
144. The Commission are required to consult with registered tertiary education providers, Estyn and any other stakeholders as the Commission sees fit before publishing, revising or withdrawing a quality assurance framework document (subsection (4)).
145. Estyn, the designated quality assurance body and the Commission will be required to take account of the quality assurance framework in their work (subsections (5) and (6)).

Section 49: Duty to monitor and promote improvement in the quality of regulated tertiary education

146. This section imposes a duty on the Commission to monitor and promote improvement in the quality of education and training across registered and funded tertiary education providers.

Section 50: Advice and assistance in respect of quality of tertiary education

147. This section gives the Commission the power to issue advice and guidance to any funded or registered provider to support quality improvement of the education, course or training provided. In particular, the Commission may provide advice and guidance to tertiary education providers to improve the quality of the education provided or, to prevent the quality of the education, course or training from becoming inadequate. This would be the case where the quality of the education, course or training does not meet the reasonable needs of the learners.

Section 51: Reviews relevant to quality of tertiary education

148. This section gives the Commission the power to carry out a review of any matter relevant to the quality of tertiary education and training. The Commission may arrange for these reviews to be carried out on its behalf.

Assessment of quality in higher education

Section 52: Assessment of quality of higher education

149. Subsection (1) requires the Commission to assess, or make arrangements to assess, the quality of higher education provided by each registered tertiary education provider and by those providers offering higher education provision on behalf of providers registered with the Commission. The duty to assess relates to the higher education relating to the category of registration (subsection (2)). In addition, subsection (3) gives the Commission the power to assess, or make arrangements to assess, the quality of higher education provided by any tertiary education provider.
150. The Commission must publish the reports of these assessments (subsection (4)).
151. The Welsh Ministers may by regulations require assessments to be carried out at specified intervals and to publish the reports of these assessments within a specified period (subsection (5)). The Welsh Ministers must consult with the Commission before making such regulations (subsection (6)).
152. In this Part of the Bill, references to an external provider relate to those providers who are responsible for providing all or part of a course of higher education on behalf of registered providers, but who are not registered providers in their own right (subsection (7)). The Welsh Minister may make regulations about who should be treated as an external provider (subsection (8)).

Section 53: Action plans following assessments under section 52

153. Following a quality assessment and published report, the registered provider providing the higher education, or the registered provider on behalf of which the higher education is provided, must—
- prepare a written statement of its planned actions to respond to the report and the timescales to address these planned actions, and
 - send the action plan statement to the Commission and to the designated body (if the designated body carried out the assessment) (subsection (2)).

154. The provider must also publish the action plan statement (subsection (3)).
155. Compliance with the requirements in this section to write and publish the action plan statement is to be treated as an on-going registration condition for registered providers for the purpose of the enforcement powers of the Commission in section 37 (directions) and section 39 (de-registration).

Section 54: Exercise of higher education assessment functions by a designated body and Schedule 3 - Assessing higher education: designated body

156. Schedule 3, introduced by subsection (1), sets out further detail as regards:
- the designation of a body to conduct the assessment functions under section 52 on behalf of the Commission ,
 - oversight of the body by the Commission and
 - provision for the body to charge fees.
157. The Commission will not normally be expected to conduct the assessment function if it has designated a body to conduct these assessment on its behalf, but will retain the power to do so (subsection (3)).

Part 1 of Schedule 3: Designation

158. Paragraph 1 provides for the Commission to designate a body to conduct the higher education quality assessment functions under section 54(2) on the Commission's behalf.
159. The Commission may only designate the body if they consider that the body is suitable to exercise the assessment functions, and that in so designating, the effective assessment of the quality of higher education would be ensured.
160. The Commission must obtain the consent of the Welsh Ministers in order to designate a body, and it must consult registered providers providing higher education, as well as any other appropriate persons.
161. A decision to designate must be accompanied by a published notice which states the name of the body designated and the date on which designation becomes effective.
162. If the Welsh Ministers refuse to give their consent to designate the recommended body, then the Welsh Ministers must publish the reasons for this decision.
163. Paragraph 2 outlines the criteria a body must meet to be considered suitable to exercise the assessment functions. These are:
- the body can exercise the assessment functions effectively;
 - the body's governing or strategic oversight is determined by people representing a broad range of registered higher education providers;
 - the body can command general confidence from a broad range of registered higher education providers;
 - the body is independent of any particular higher education provider; and
 - the body consents to being designated.
164. Paragraph 3 allows the Commission to remove a designation. In order to remove a designation, the Commission must issue a notice specifying the date on which the designation will conclude and the reasons for withdrawing the designation.

165. A designation may be removed if the Commission consider that doing so would ensure effective assessment of quality in higher education in Wales, or if the designated body consents or requests to have its designation removed.
166. Unless the designated body consents to the removal of designation, removal of the designation must be with the consent of the Welsh Ministers and after consultation with registered higher education providers, and other appropriate persons.

Part 2 of Schedule 3: Oversight by the Commission

167. The Commission –
- may make payments to the designated body in order to enable it to carry out its assessment functions (paragraph 5), and
 - must make arrangements for holding the body to account (paragraph 6).
168. Paragraph 7 requires the designated body to prepare an annual report on the performance of its assessment functions and send it to the Commission.
169. Paragraph 8 provides for the Commission to give directions to the designated body regarding performance of the assessment functions. The designated body must comply with any directions from the Commission. This may be done, for example, to ensure that certain aspects of a Commission quality assurance framework (see section 48) are given due regard in respect of higher education assessments, or where the Commission has more general concerns regarding the designated body's conduct of its assessment functions.
170. When giving a direction to the designated body the Commission must nonetheless have regard to the designated body's own expertise and its ability to ensure effective and impartial assessment of quality in higher education.
171. A direction given by the Commission can only relate to registered higher education providers in Wales, or a subsection of these providers.
172. Paragraph 9 requires the Commission to inform the Welsh Ministers if it has concerns regarding the designated body's performance and its suitability for carrying out its statutory functions.

Part 3 of Schedule 3: Power to charge fees

173. Paragraph 10 allows the designated body to charge fees to registered higher education providers in respect of the costs it will incur when performing its assessment functions. When doing so, it must publish a scheme setting out the fees it will charge and the basis upon which these are calculated, which must be approved by the Commission. The scheme can be revised and re-approved by the Commission.
174. Paragraphs 10(3) to (5) allow for the fees paid by providers to cover general costs incurred by the designated body in performance of assessments across all registered higher education providers, but prevents the total fees paid by all providers from exceeding the total costs incurred by the designated body once any funding provided by the Commission under paragraph 5 is taken into account.

Part 4 of Schedule 3: Interpretation

175. Paragraph 11 defines certain terms used in this Schedule.

Inspection of further education or training etc.

Section 55: Duty of the Chief Inspector to inspect and report

176. Subsection (1) sets out different kinds of education and training that must be inspected by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Education and Training for Wales.
177. The Chief Inspector, the other inspectors appointed by Her Majesty to form part of the inspectorate with the Chief Inspector, the Chief Inspector's staff and additional inspectors appointed by the Chief Inspector form a body known as 'Estyn'.
178. Estyn is not a body corporate with legal personality, which is why statutory functions are conferred on the office of Chief Inspector. Although the functions are conferred on the Chief Inspector by the Bill, the functions may be exercised in practice by other inspectors and staff at Estyn by virtue of provision in paragraph 5 of Schedule 2 to the Education Act 2005, which is why these notes refer to 'Estyn'.
179. Estyn must inspect:
- further education or training funded or secured by the Commission (this would include further education in colleges and apprenticeship training);
 - further education or training funded or secured by the Welsh Ministers;
 - further education or training funded by a local authority in Wales (this would include mainstream sixth form provision in maintained schools and community-based adult learning partnership provision);
 - further education or training where the Commission or a local authority in Wales is contemplating giving funding to the provider of the further education or training;
 - education or training for compulsory school age learners in a further education or higher education provider in Wales;
 - any education or training provided in Wales that is specified by the Welsh Ministers in regulations.
180. Inspections under subsection (1) do not apply to any inspections conducted in schools under Part 1 of the Education Act 2005, or to further education or training funding which is given for a specific purpose where support is not directed (subsection (2)).
181. Estyn must publish a report for each inspection to include, but not limited to, views on:
- the quality of the education or training inspected;
 - the standards achieved by the learners receiving the education and training;
 - whether the financial resources given to the provider are managed efficiently and used in a way which provides value for money (subsection (3)).
182. The Welsh Ministers may, by regulations, require inspections to be carried out at specified intervals and require reports to be completed within a specified period (subsection (4)). Before making such regulations, the Welsh Ministers must consult the Commission and Estyn (subsection (5)).

Section 56: Power of the Chief Inspector to inspect and report

183. Subsection (1) gives Estyn the power to inspect and report on any education and training described in section 55(1). If it does undertake such an inspection, it must publish a report (by virtue the application of section 55(3) by subsection (4) of this section).
184. Estyn also has the power to inspect and report on any education or training which is not described in section 55(1), but the provision would be if it was funded by the Commission or the Welsh Ministers, if the provider asks Estyn to do so (subsection (2)). In the latter case,

Estyn may charge the provider for the cost of the inspection and may publish the report (subsection (3)).

Section 57: Duty to provide information and advice to the Commission

185. Estyn must keep the Commission informed about inspections and reports carried out under section 55(1) in relation to provision funded or secured by the Commission (subsections (1) and (2)). When asked to do so by the Commission, Estyn must give the Commission advice on matters relating to education or training under section 55, inspect such provision and report on the result of inspections conducted under this section (subsections (1) and (3)).

Section 58: Duty to provide information and advice to the Welsh Ministers

186. Estyn must keep the Welsh Ministers informed about inspections and reports carried out under section 55(1) in relation to provision that is not funded or otherwise secured by the Commission (subsections (1) and (2)). When asked to do so by the Welsh Ministers, Estyn must give the Welsh Ministers advice on matters relating to education or training under section 55, inspect such provision and report on the result of inspections conducted under this section (subsections (1) and (2)).

Section 59: Additional functions of the Chief Inspector

187. Through regulations, the Welsh Ministers may confer additional functions on Estyn in relation to the education or training described in section 55(1) (subsection (1)). These may include inspection functions related to training for teachers, lecturers, trainers or others providing such education or training (subsection (2)).

Section 60: Action plans following inspections by the Chief Inspector

188. Following the publication of an inspection report, the provider must prepare a written statement of the planned actions it will take in response to the report and the timescales to address those planned actions (subsection (3)). The provider must publish the action plan statement (subsection (4)). This section does not apply to those inspections conducted as a result of a request under section 56(2) or an area inspection under section 61 (subsection (2)).
189. Compliance with the duty to prepare an action plan statement is a requirement of the terms and conditions of funding by the Commission or the Welsh Ministers under this Bill (subsections (7) and (8)).
190. Compliance with the duty to prepare and publish an action plan statement is to be treated as an on-going registration condition for registered providers who provide education or training described in section 55(1) for the purpose of section 37 (directions) and section 39 (de-registration).

Section 61: Area inspections

191. Estyn must carry out an area inspection if requested to do so by the Commission or the Welsh Ministers and publish a report for each area inspection (subsection (2)). It may also conduct such an inspection without being asked (subsection (1)).
192. An area inspection is an inspection of:
- the quality and availability of an aspect of education or training in a specified area of Wales for learners aged 15 or over;
 - the standards achieved by the learners receiving the education or training;

- whether the financial resources made available to those providing that education or training are managed efficiently and used in a way which provides value for money.
193. The aspect of education or training to be inspected through an area inspection is any education or training described in section 55 or within Estyn's remit as provided for in any other primary or subordinate legislation (subsection (3)).
 194. The power to require Estyn to carry out an area inspection may only be used by the Commission with regard to any education or training it funds or secures (subsection (4)(a)). The Welsh Ministers may require Estyn to carry out an area inspection in regards to any other provision which meets the definitions set out in this section (subsection (4)(b)).
 195. The focus of an area inspection may extend to the manner in which financial resources have been allocated to the education or training being inspected by Estyn, and whether this provides value for money, if funding has been applied by the Commission or a Local Authority in Wales (subsection (5)).
 196. Information related to the area inspection must be provided to Estyn by any provider of education or training who is subject to the area inspection, any local authority in Wales within the area that is the focus of the area inspection, the Commission, and the Welsh Ministers (subsection (7)).
 197. The Welsh Ministers may, by regulations, make further provision in regard to the requirement to provide information and the time scales in which the reports of area inspections must be published (subsection (9)).

Section 62: Rights of entry and offences

198. When conducting inspections under Chapter 2 of the Bill, Estyn has a right of entry at all reasonable times to premises on which the education or training being inspected is provided; and to premises of a provider of education and training used in connection with the provision (subsection (1)(a) and (b)).
199. Estyn also has a right to inspect and take copies of any records and documents containing information relating to education or training, which the inspector requires for the purposes of the inspection (subsection (1)(c)).
200. The right of entry for Estyn to premises for education or training provided by an employer in the workplace may only be used if the employer has been given reasonable notice in writing (subsection (2)). The powers under this section do not include the right to enter premises that are a dwelling without the consent of the occupier (subsection (7)). And "premises" includes premises in England as well as Wales (subsection (8)).
201. The right to inspect and take copies, includes having access to computers and any other device used to access records or documents, and assistance as reasonably required from those who use or have charge of the equipment (subsection (3)).
202. It is a criminal offence to wilfully obstruct Estyn when conducting inspections, and anyone found guilty of this offence is liable to be fined up to level 4 on the standard scale (subsections (4) and (5)).

Section 63: Surveys and studies

203. The Commission may direct Estyn to carry out a survey related to further education or training policy for Wales or for a specified area of Wales (subsection (1)(a)). The Commission may also direct Estyn to carry out a comparative study of education or training outside of Wales (subsection (1)(b)). Estyn may also carry out such surveys or studies itself, without being directed to do so (subsection (2)).

Section 64: Annual reports

204. The section 21(1)(a) of the Education Act 2005 requires Estyn to produce an annual report. Subsection (1) requires the annual report to include details of the exercise by Estyn of its functions under Chapter 2.
205. Section 21 of the Education Act 2005 also includes a power for Estyn to produce other reports. Subsection (2) provides for that power to include power to make reports with respect to matters relating to the education or training described in section 55(1) of the Bill.

Section 65: Annual plan of the Chief Inspector

206. Estyn must prepare an annual plan for each financial year setting out estimates of income and expenditure necessary to carry out its work effectively (subsection (1)). The plan must include proposals for managing funds provided to Estyn from the Commission (under section 66) and from the Welsh Ministers (under section 104(4) of the Government of Wales Act 1998) (subsection (2)).
207. Estyn must submit the plan to the Commission and the Welsh Ministers for consultation and approval, by such date before the beginning of the financial year as the Commission and the Welsh Ministers may jointly direct (subsection (3)). Estyn may publish the plan after it has been approved by the Commission and the Welsh Ministers (subsection (4)).

Section 66: Funding of inspections and reports on further education and training etc.

208. The Commission must provide such funding to Estyn as the Commission considers appropriate so that Estyn is able to carry out its work in relation to the education or training that is funded by the Commission (subsection (1)). In determining how much funding is appropriate for Estyn, the Commission must have regard to what the Commission considers Estyn needs to spend to exercise its functions (subsection (2)). The Commission must consult with Estyn before the beginning of each financial year in relation to the funding it is going to provide for that year (subsection (3)).
209. The Commission must approve the parts of Estyn's annual plan which relate to Estyn's work in respect of education or training funded by the Commission and determine the amount of funding it will provide according to the activities outlined in the annual plan (subsection (4)). The Commission may ask Estyn to modify the annual plan before it is approved (subsection (5)).
210. Section 104 of the Government of Wales Act 1998 is amended to provide that the Welsh Ministers are not responsible for the provision of funding to Estyn for education or training funded or secured by the Commission (subsection (6)(a)). Section 104 of the 1998 Act is also amended so that the Welsh Ministers are only responsible for approving such parts of Estyn's annual plan as relate to functions in respect of which the Welsh Ministers provide funding (subsection (6)(b)).

Chapter 3: Further Enforcement and Procedural Provisions

Intervention in the conduct of further education institutions

Section 67: Grounds for intervention and Section 68: Powers to intervene

211. Sections 67 and 68 replace the provisions previously set out in section 57 of the Further and Higher Education Act 1992 relating to the Welsh Ministers powers of intervention for institutions in the further education sector in Wales.
212. Section 67 specifies the grounds that must be met in order for the Welsh Ministers to intervene in the conduct of a tertiary education provider in Wales that is an institution in Wales within the further education sector. See section 139 for an interpretation of these terms.
213. Section 68 makes provision for the way that the Welsh Ministers may intervene if one or more of the grounds for intervention set out in section 67 are met. The Welsh Ministers must consult with the Commission before exercising their intervention powers under this section.
214. Directions issued by the Welsh Ministers under section 68 are enforceable by injunction (see section 80).

Section 69: Notification by the Commission of grounds for intervention

215. This section places the Commission under a duty to notify the Welsh Ministers if it is of the view that any of the grounds for intervention specified in section 67 have been met (subsection (1)). The Welsh Ministers must have regard to the Commission's view in deciding whether or not to exercise any of their intervention powers under section 68 (subsection (2)).

Section 70: Welsh Ministers' statement on intervention powers

216. This section requires the Welsh Ministers to publish and keep under review a statement on how they propose to exercise their intervention functions under section 68 (subsection (1)). The Welsh Ministers must consult such persons as they consider appropriate before publishing the statement.

Access to information and facilities

Section 71: Duty to co-operate

217. Section 71 requires governing bodies of external providers (see section 52) to co-operate with persons who are exercising, on behalf of the Commission, functions under following sections of the Bill:
- section 49 - duty to monitor, and promote improvement in, the quality of regulated tertiary education;
 - section 51 - reviews relevant to quality of tertiary education;
 - section 52(1) - assessment of quality of higher education.
218. This section also requires governing bodies of unregistered providers in Wales that provide further education and are funded under section 94, to co-operate with persons who are exercising, on behalf of the Commission, functions under following sections of the Bill:
- section 49 - duty to monitor, and promote improvement in, the quality of regulated tertiary education;
 - section 51 - reviews relevant to quality of tertiary education

219. The duty to co-operate requires such governing bodies to ensure the provision of information, assistance and access to facilities, systems or equipment that might be required by the person for the purposes of those functions.
220. Examples of persons that might act on the Commission's behalf in respect of these functions include Estyn and a body designated to conduct higher education assessments under Schedule 3.
221. The duty imposed on governing bodies to co-operate under section 71 also applies in respect of powers of entry and inspection under section 72.
222. The Commission may give a direction to a governing body if the Commission is satisfied that the body has failed to comply with its duty to co-operate. The direction may require a governing body to take or not take steps to secure the provision of information, assistance or access to facilities, systems or equipment (subsection (4)). The procedural requirements in sections 73 to 76 apply to decisions to give directions.

Section 72: Powers of entry and inspection

223. This section provides for a right of entry and inspection for a person authorised in writing by the Commission, an "authorised person".
224. Subsection (1) provides that an authorised person may enter the premises of a registered provider and inspect, copy and take documents found on the premises of registered providers for the purposes of the following functions:
- monitoring compliance with ongoing registration conditions (section 34);
 - reviews relevant to compliance with ongoing registration conditions (section 36);
 - monitoring and promoting improvement in the quality of tertiary education (section 49);
 - conducting reviews relevant to the quality of tertiary education (section 51); or
 - assessing the quality of higher education (section 52(1)).
225. Subsection (2) states an authorised person may enter premises and inspect, copy and take documents found on the premises of external providers for the purposes of the following functions:
- monitoring and promoting improvement in the quality of tertiary education (section 49);
 - conducting reviews regarding the quality of tertiary education (section 51); or
 - assessing the quality of higher education (section 52(1)).
226. The term "documents" in this section includes information in any form and documents stored on or accessible by computers on the premises (subsection (3)).
227. The power to inspect, copy or take away documents includes the power to require a person to provide documents, and to require the documents be provided in a certain form or format, and to inspect any electronic storage systems where documents have been created or stored (subsection (4)).
228. Before exercising a power under this section, reasonable notice must be given to the governing body of the registered provider or external provider in relation to whose premises the powers will be exercised, and the registered provider on whose behalf the provider or external provider provides education to which the exercise of the entry and inspection functions relate (subsection (5)). However, notice does not need to be given if the power needs to be exercised urgently, or if giving notice would defeat the purpose of exercising the power (subsection (6)).

229. If required to do so, an authorised person must, before exercising a power under this section, produce a copy of the written authorisation from the Commission (subsection (8)).
230. The powers conferred by this section must be exercised at reasonable times and not so that anyone has to do anything other than at a reasonable time (subsection (9)). They do not constitute a power to enter a residential dwelling without the agreement of the occupier (subsection (10)).

Warning and review procedure

Section 73: Application of sections 74 to 76

231. Sections 74 to 76 set out the process which the Commission must follow when issuing a direction or notice. The notices and directions to which those sections apply are listed in subsection (1) and include –
- directions in respect of failure to comply with ongoing registration conditions;
 - notices about reject of a proposed fee limit statement;
 - notices of rejection of a proposed variation or replacement of a fee limit statement;
 - directions in respect of a failure to co-operate.
232. The Commission is not required to follow the process set out in sections 74 to 76 if they issue a direction which solely revokes a previous direction (subsection (2)).

Section 74: Proposed notices and directions: requirement to give warning notice

233. Before giving a governing body a notice or direction listed in section 73(1), this section requires the Commission to give the governing body a warning notice. The warning notice must set out the proposed notice or direction, the reasons for giving it, the means by which the governing body may make representations regarding the notice or direction, and the period during which such representations can be made (subsection (2)). The period for making representation may not be less than 28 days beginning with the date of the notice (subsection (3)).
234. The Commission must have regard to any representations made by the governing body in the specified period in deciding whether to give the notice or direction and must then notify the governing body of its decision (subsections (4) and (5)).

Section 75: Information to be given with notices and directions and effect pending review

235. When giving a governing body a notice or direction listed in section 73(1), the Commission must include a date on which the notice or direction will take effect (subsection (1)). At the same time, the Commission must also give the governing body a statement setting out the reasons for the notice or direction being given, information regarding the right to review (see sections 76 and 77) and the period within which an application for review may be made (subsection (2)).
236. A notice or direction to which this section applies may not come into effect while a review process is ongoing nor during the period within which the governing body affected could apply for a review under section 76, unless the governing body concerned notifies the enforcing body that it does not intend to apply for a review (subsections (3) and (4)).

237. As a result, the notice or direction may be unable to come into effect on the date specified by the Commission under subsection (1). In this case, subject to the outcome of any review, the Commission must determine a new date on which the notice or direction will take effect (subsections (5) and (6)).

Section 76: Review of notices and directions

238. This section provides that a governing body given a notice or direction listed in section 73(1) has the right to apply for a review of the notice or direction by the decision reviewer.

Section 77: Decision reviewer

239. The Welsh Ministers must appoint a person or panel to be the “decision reviewer” and may pay remuneration and allowances to that person or panel (subsection (1)). The decision reviewer is responsible for the review of decisions under this Part.
240. The Welsh Ministers must make regulations in relation to decision reviews and the regulations may include, but are not limited to:
- grounds for review;
 - recommendations to be made by the decision reviewer;
 - the period within which a request for a review may be made, and the form in which the request must be made;
 - the procedures and steps to be taken; and
 - steps to be taken by the Commission or the Welsh Ministers following a review (subsections (3) and (4)).

Miscellaneous duties

Section 78: Duty to monitor and report on financial sustainability

241. This section requires the Commission to monitor and report on the financial sustainability of certain providers. Under subsection (1) the Commission must monitor the financial sustainability of:
- registered providers,
 - tertiary education providers in Wales that are institutions in the further education sector, are not registered and are funded by the Commission..
242. Subsection (2) allows the Welsh Ministers to make regulations to make exceptions in the application of the monitoring duty under subsection (1) for providers or types of providers in these categories. Subsection (1) also allows the Welsh Ministers, via regulations, to extend the monitoring duty to other kinds of tertiary education provider.
243. Subsection (3) requires the Commission to provide information in respect of the financial position of the persons it monitors under this subsection (1) in the annual report that it submits (see Schedule 1, Paragraph 16), to the Welsh Ministers each year.
244. This section also sets out that the Commission must, at the same time it submits its annual report, submit a separate report to the Welsh Ministers which summarises the financial outlook of persons that it monitors under subsection (1). This report will provide a summary of conclusions drawn by the Commission from its monitoring activity on relevant emerging trends, patterns or other matters that the Commission consider it appropriate to bring to the attention of the Welsh Ministers. This report will relate to the financial years following the financial year to which the annual report relates.

Section 79: Commission's statement on intervention functions

245. This section provides that the Commission must publish and keep under review a statement setting out its approach to exercising the functions listed in subsection (4). Before publishing or revising the statement, the Commission, must consult the governing bodies of each registered provider and any other persons it considers appropriate.

Directions

Section 80: Effect and enforcement of directions

246. The governing body of a provider must comply with any direction given to them by the Commission or the Welsh Ministers under this Part. Subsection (2) gives the Commission and the Welsh Ministers a power to apply to the court for an injunction to enforce a direction that they have given. When requested to do so by the governing body concerned, the person who gave the direction must notify the governing body whether they are satisfied that a direction or a particular requirement of a direction has been complied with.
247. Subsection (4) provides that directions given under this part must be given in writing.

Chapter 4: General

Section 81: Designation of other providers of tertiary education

248. This section enables the Welsh Ministers to designate a provider of tertiary education who would not otherwise be regarded as an institution for the purposes of this Part to be treated as such. "Tertiary education providers in Wales" must be "institutions" (see the definitions in section 139(1)). The designation will be made on the application of the provider concerned. A provider designated as an "institution" under this section may be treated as an 'institution' for the purposes of registration, quality assurance and quality assessment functions under this Part, but will still need to meet all other criteria in section 23(5) to be able to register with the Commission; and its activities must be wholly or mainly carried on in Wales in order to fall within the definition of a "tertiary education provider in Wales".
249. Subsection (4) allows the Welsh Ministers to make regulations providing for the manner in which applications for designation under this section are made and the making of designation decisions, including criteria for confirming and withdrawing designation and the effect of withdrawal of a designation.

Section 82: Interpretation of Part 2

250. This section provides the definitions of certain terms which are used in Part 2 of this Bill.

Part 3: Securing and Funding Tertiary Education and Research

Funding the Commission

Section 83: Power of the Welsh Ministers to fund the Commission

251. This section allows the Welsh Ministers to provide funding to the Commission. It allows the Welsh Ministers to attach terms and conditions to such funding as they consider appropriate (including in relation to repayment of sums and payment of interest) subject to the limitations specified in section 84.
252. Terms and conditions applied to funding by the Welsh Ministers may require the Commission to enter into an "outcome agreement" with persons whom it proposes to fund. An outcome agreement is defined by this section. Outcome agreements are a means by which the Commission, through its funding decisions, will contribute to the discharge of its strategic duties (under sections 2 to 10) and the achievement of the Welsh Ministers' strategic priorities for tertiary education and research. The Commission's strategic plan will set out how it intends to discharge its strategic duties and how it will address the Welsh Ministers' priorities in the statement published by the Welsh Ministers under section 12. Outcome agreements will set out the activities that a provider agrees it will carry out in return for funding which will contribute to the implementation of the Commission's approved strategic plan.

253. The Welsh Ministers may impose terms and conditions requiring the Commission to enter into outcome agreements in all cases where it provides funding. Alternatively the Welsh Ministers may require the Commission to enter into an outcome agreement where the Commission proposes to fund particular activities, types of provider or specified amounts of financial support. For example, the Welsh Ministers may require that outcome agreements apply to all courses of higher and further education, or only to certain specified courses but not in cases where the volume of provision is small and funding falls below a specified amount.

Section 84: Funding the Commission: limitations on terms and conditions

254. This section includes a number of requirements and restrictions in relation to the terms and conditions that may be imposed by the Welsh Ministers. The purpose of the requirements and restrictions is to protect the institutional autonomy of tertiary education and research providers, the academic freedom of higher education providers and the ability of the Commission to determine funding allocations.
255. In particular, this section provides that the terms and conditions imposed by the Welsh Ministers in relation to funding for higher education, further education and training, and research and innovation must not relate to activities carried on by individual providers (unless they apply to all providers or those falling within a particular class or description, and are a pre-conditions of funding).
256. This section also provides that terms and conditions must not be framed by reference to criteria for the appointment, dismissal or selection of academic staff or criteria for the admission of students. This provision protects providers' freedom to select staff and admit students as they see fit.
257. Further, this section provides that terms and conditions relating to funding for research and innovation may only be framed by reference to an area of research or innovation if that is included in the Commission's approved strategic plan. The terms and conditions may not refer to particular programmes of research or innovation projects.
258. In addition, the terms and conditions for higher education may apply to particular courses but must not apply to particular parts of courses nor must they require the Commission to either provide or prohibit the provision of particular courses. These provisions enable the Welsh Ministers to ring-fence funding to support particular courses of higher education and to require the Commission to have regard to the desirability of funding them. By way of example the Welsh Ministers may give funding to the Commission to support the provision of a particular course(s) leaving it to the Commission to determine how the funding is to be used. The Welsh Ministers can require the funding to be repaid if not used for the specified course(s). This provision protects providers' freedom to elect to offer particular higher education courses.
259. Additionally this section provides that terms and conditions in respect of higher education or research and innovation must not apply to the content of courses or programmes of research and innovation nor how they are taught, supervised or assessed. This provision protects providers' freedom to teach and admit students as they see fit.

260. Subsection (7) dis-applies the limitations of subsections (5) and (6) for courses or parts of courses being provided and assessed through the medium of Welsh. This provision enables the Welsh Ministers to allocate funding to the Commission to support the provision or assessment of higher education courses or part of such courses through the medium of Welsh.

Funding of higher education

Section 85: Financial support to specified providers for higher education

261. This section allows the Commission to fund certain categories of providers who are registered with the Commission under Part 2 of the Bill, for the purpose of supporting higher education provided by or on behalf of such providers.
262. The categories of registered providers eligible to receive funding from the Commission under this section will be specified in regulations made by the Welsh Ministers.
263. A registered provider receiving funding under this section may, subject to the consent of the Commission, pass funds to a collaborating body. The passage of funds will allow the funded provider to work collaboratively with a range of partner organisations (including those outside Wales) engaged in the provision of higher education.
264. The Welsh Ministers are enabled to make regulations about the circumstances in which funding must not be provided in respect of courses of initial teacher training. Such regulations could, for example, require that such courses must not be funded by the Commission unless they are accredited by a specified body.

Section 86: Financial support for higher education courses specified in regulations

265. This section makes provision about courses of higher education which may be funded by the Commission in addition to higher education supported by the Commission under section 85.
266. The Welsh Ministers may make regulations to specify particular courses or descriptions of courses which may be funded by the Commission; "eligible courses". The regulations may specify courses by way of reference to, amongst other matters, the requirements to be met by the course; the description of the person providing the course; and the qualification to which the course leads. The ability for the Commission to fund eligible courses would permit gaps in provision for particular subjects or locations to be addressed.
267. Gaps in provision may arise due to a lack of specified providers (as defined in 85(1)) being able to fulfil an identified need. For example, a need for a specialist course to be delivered in Wales or to be undertaken by small numbers of students ordinarily resident in Wales, which may not be cost effective for specified providers to deliver.
268. This section provides that the Commission is able to fund providers to deliver eligible courses wholly or mainly in Wales and courses provided to students who are ordinarily resident in Wales. A provider receiving funding under this section may, subject to consent of the Commission, pass some or all of those funds to a collaborating body including providers outside Wales, for example, funding to support an eligible course where the majority of the course is provided by a provider in Wales but particular modules are delivered by a provider in England, where the provider in England is working in partnership with the provider in Wales.

Section 87: Financial support under sections 85 and 86: terms and conditions

269. This section provides that the Commission may impose such terms and conditions as it considers appropriate to funding it allocates for the purpose of supporting higher education. In particular, such terms and conditions may require the repayment of funds (including with interest) if the purposes for which the funding is allocated are not complied with. However the Commission may not impose conditions that relate to funding derived from other sources, for example income generated from providers' own activities including tuition fees, funds from industry or donations from benefactors.
270. Where the Commission allocates funding to providers for higher education courses specified in regulations under section 86(3)(a), who are not included in the register (i.e. unregistered providers) then the Commission must impose terms and conditions that require such providers to:
- have a learner protection plan approved by the Commission in place (subject to the Commission having given notice of this requirement) and to give effect to the plan;
 - comply with the requirements of the extant Learner Engagement Code published by the Commission under section 125 if they are a tertiary education provider in Wales; and
 - have regard to advice or guidance given by the Commission to the provider.

Section 88: Financial support under sections 85 and 86: supplementary

271. This section places the Commission under a duty, in the exercise of its higher education funding functions, to have regard to the desirability of not doing anything which would discourage providers from seeking or maintaining funding from other sources (for example from industry, commerce, benefactors, alumni, or other funding sources).
272. The Commission is also required, in exercising its higher education funding functions, to have regard to the desirability of maintaining any distinctive characteristics of any provider to which it provides financial support. It is a matter for the Commission to determine what it considers to be an appropriate balance of support in light of any other relevant considerations. Such characteristics may include, for example, the religious character of a provider or the specialist nature of its provision.

Section 89: Financial support by Welsh Ministers for certain higher education courses

273. This section enables the Welsh Ministers to fund a limited range of "relevant higher education courses" directly. Such courses must fall within the definition of paragraph 1(g) or 1(h) to the Education Reform Act 1988. Courses which may be funded include those in preparation for professional examinations, for example, courses which are not degrees and lead to qualifications accredited by professional bodies.

Further education and training

Section 90: Education and training for persons aged 16 to 19

274. Section 90 sets out the Commission's duty to secure facilities for education and training for those above the compulsory school age. The duties in this section and sections 92 and 93 are similar to the duties in sections 31 and 32 of the Learning and Skills Act 2000 ("the 2000 Act").
275. The section requires the Commission to secure the provision of 'proper' facilities in Wales for the education and training of people who are above compulsory school age but have not yet reached the age of 19. Facilities are 'proper' if they are of sufficient quantity and adequate quality to meet the reasonable needs of young people. Additionally such facilities must satisfy students' entitlements to follow courses of study within the local curriculum formed under section 33A of the 2000 Act.

- 276. Amendments are made to sections 33A – 33E, 33G, 33I - 33-K, 33N – 33Q of the 2000 Act (see Schedule 4). These confer functions on the Commission which include, amongst other things responsibilities for forming the local curriculum, the planning and delivery of local curriculum entitlements for learners (including Welsh language provision), and the arrangements for joint working. Other minor and consequential amendments include placing a duty on the Welsh Ministers to consult the Commission when exercising their power to amend the local curricula learning domains and the making of regulations and issuing of guidance.
- 277. The facilities to be secured for education and training include both full-time and part-time further education and training as well as vocational, social, physical and recreational training (see the definitions in section 139(2) to (5)).
- 278. The Commission's duties under this section do not extend to higher education (see paragraphs 261 to 264 for an explanation of the Commission's powers to fund higher education).

Section 91: Education and training for eligible persons over 19

- 279. This section requires the Commission to secure proper facilities in Wales for relevant education and training for eligible persons. Facilities are 'proper' if they are of sufficient quantity and adequate quality to meet the reasonable needs of eligible individuals.
- 280. Welsh Ministers must make regulations describing the relevant further education or training for which the Commission must secure proper facilities. The regulations can, for example refer to the subjects to be studied or the level of study or the type of qualification to be pursued.
- 281. An eligible person is one who has attained the age of 19 and falls within a description specified in regulations made by Welsh Ministers. These regulations may for example, refer to a person's age, the qualifications they already possess, their income levels, whether they are employed, unemployed, self-employed, etc. The regulations could specify that persons falling within a particular description are eligible in relation to a particular description of further education or training.
- 282. The facilities to be secured for education and training include both full-time and part-time further education and training as well as vocational, social, physical and recreational training (see the definitions in section 139(2) to (5)).
- 283. The Commission's duties under this section do not extend to higher education (see paragraphs 261 to 264 for an explanation of the Commission's powers to fund higher education).

Section 92: Education and training for persons over 19

- 284. Section 92 sets out the duty of the Commission to secure the provision of 'reasonable' facilities in Wales for the education and training of people 19 and over. Facilities are 'reasonable' if they are of a quality and quantity which the Commission can reasonably be expected to provide taking account of the resources available to it.

285. The facilities to be secured for education and training include both full-time and part-time further education and training as well as vocational, social, physical and recreational training (see the definitions in section 139(2) to (5)). This includes organised activities offering opportunities for non-formal learning which may not lead to a qualification. For example, adult learning opportunities in community settings including education engagement activities.
286. The Commission's duties under this section do not extend to higher education (see paragraphs 261 to 264 for an explanation of the Commission's powers to fund higher education).

Section 93: Requirements on Commission when securing further education and training

287. This section sets out various requirements on the Commission when it is discharging its duties under sections 90, 91 and 92.
288. In performing the duties under those sections, the Commission must take into account a number of factors, including the education and training required in different sectors of employment and the need to provide additional learning provision and assessment of additional learning needs through the medium of Welsh.
289. The Commission must also bear in mind circumstances where it might reasonably expect education and training to be secured by other bodies without drawing on its own resources, for example, additional learning needs provision secured by local authorities under the Additional Learning Needs and Education Tribunal (Wales) Act 2018.
290. The Commission must make best use of its resources and in particular avoid provision which might give rise to disproportionate expenditure. Provision is not to be considered as giving rise to disproportionate expenditure solely because it is more expensive than comparable provision.

Section 94: Financial support for further education or training

291. This section sets out powers for the Welsh Ministers and the Commission to fund further education or training. (See section 139(2) to (5) for the definition of further education and training).
292. The Commission and the Welsh Ministers are able to fund any person to provide further education or training wholly or mainly in Wales and further education or training to learners ordinarily resident in Wales. Additionally they may fund any person to provide goods or services in connection with such further education or training.
293. The Welsh Ministers and the Commission are also able to provide financial support directly to learners and prospective learners who are ordinarily resident in Wales or who are undertaking or proposing to undertake further education or training in Wales. For example, such support could be to assist with transport or childcare costs or to provide incentives to address skills shortages in particular employment sectors in Wales.
294. The Welsh Ministers and Commission may make financial support available from their resources, or arrange for others to provide the Welsh Ministers or the Commission's resources or their own resources.

295. Providers of further education who are in receipt of funding from the Commission or the Welsh Ministers may pass funds to a collaborating body, subject to the consent of the Commission or the Welsh Ministers as appropriate. This could include funding for provision outside Wales, for example, funding to support further education or training where the learner is ordinarily resident in Wales but elements of their further education or training are delivered by a collaborating organisation in England. A provider funded by the Commission who is collaborating with another organisation to deliver a particular further education course(s) would need the consent of the Commission to pass funds to the collaborating organisation. The Commission would not have a direct relationship with the collaborating organisation and therefore, the provider funded by the Commission remains responsible for the funding. The same applies to funding from the Welsh Ministers under this section.
296. The Commission may not fund school sixth forms under subsection (1)(a) or (b) (or make arrangements for a local authority to provide the Commission's resources to do so). School sixth form provision will be funded by the Commission under section 98.
297. But the Commission may fund (or make arrangements for a local authority to provide the Commission's resources to fund) innovative activities in maintained schools with sixth forms. An 'innovative activity' is an activity that in the Commission's opinion will contribute to the raising of standards of tertiary education, and is described in a document prepared by the Commission and approved by the Welsh Ministers.

Section 95: Financial support for further education or training: further provision

298. If they provide financial support directly to learners under section 94(1)(d) or (e), the Welsh Ministers and the Commission can do so by reference to fees or charges payable by those learners, or by reference to other matters connected with the provision of that further education or training (such as transport or childcare costs).
299. The Welsh Ministers may make regulations requiring providers to be registered in a specified category on the register established under section 23 in order to be eligible for funding under section 94(1)(a) or (b) (provision or proposed provision of further education or training).
300. Those regulations may make exceptions for certain courses or courses of a certain description. The regulations could, for example, describe a course by referring to requirements to be met by it or to the person providing it, or to the qualification to which the course leads. These arrangements would permit gaps in provision for particular subjects or locations to be addressed which may arise due to a lack of registered providers able to fulfil an identified need, for example, a need for a specialist course to be delivered in Wales or to be undertaken by small numbers of students ordinarily resident in Wales, which may not cost effective for registered providers to deliver.

Section 96: Financial resources for further education or training: terms and conditions

301. Where the Welsh Ministers or the Commission provide funding under section 94, this section allows them to impose terms and conditions as they consider appropriate. The Welsh Ministers or the Commission are able to require providers of further education or training to charge fees, make awards, and to recover sums of money against specified criteria. However, learners between the ages of 16 to 19 and eligible learners receiving education and training under section 91 must not be charged a fee for further education or training (unless there is an exception set out in regulations).

302. Where funding for the purpose of providing further education or training is allocated by the Commission to providers that are not on the register, the terms and conditions must require that the provider has an approved learner protection plan in place (where the Commission has given the appropriate notice); complies with the learner engagement code (if it is a tertiary education provider in Wales); and has regard to advice and guidance issued by the Commission.
303. Where the Commission has made arrangements for another person to provide the Commission's financial resources it may require the person to impose the terms and conditions outlined in paragraph 301, and must require the person to impose those outlined in paragraph 302.

Section 97: Means tests

304. Section 94(1)(g) allows the Commission or the Welsh Ministers to fund the cost of means tests.
305. Section 97 allows the Commission or the Welsh Ministers to carry out such tests themselves or arrange for others to do so on their behalf.
306. The Commission or the Welsh Ministers are able to take into account the outcomes of such tests when allocating financial support under section 94(1)(d) or (e) for persons who are ordinarily resident in Wales who are receiving or proposing to receive further education or training and for persons not ordinarily resident in Wales who are receiving or proposing to receive further education or training in Wales.

Section 98: School sixth-forms

307. This section provides the Commission with the power to fund education provided by school sixth forms maintained by local authorities and impose appropriate terms and conditions similar to those permissible under section 96. Funding under this section is to be made to local authorities and must be applied as part of the authority's schools budget.
308. The governing body of a maintained school with a sixth form in Wales must comply with the requirements contained in the Learner Engagement Code. A local authority in receipt of funding under this section and the governing body of a maintained school with a sixth form in Wales must also have regard to advice or guidance given by the Commission.

Section 99: Persons with additional learning needs

309. This section requires the Commission to have regard to the needs of people with additional learning needs and the desirability of the availability of facilities that may aid the requirements of the Additional Learning Needs and Education Tribunal (Wales) Act 2018. The Commission must take these matters into account when it is discharging functions under the following provisions:
- section 90 (education and training for persons aged 16 to 19);
 - section 91 (education and training for eligible persons over 19);
 - section 92 (education and training for persons over 19);
 - (section 94(1)(a) to (e) and (5) (financial support for further education or training);
 - (section 100(1)) financial support for provision of information, advice, guidance and to form links with employers); and
 - section 100(2) (financial support for the provision of further education or training through the medium of Welsh or for the purpose of teaching Welsh).

310. If the Commission funds the provision of information, advice and guidance about education or training, it will need to take into account additional learning needs. It could, for example, require the inclusion of information about additional learning needs assessments and how learners may obtain support, as well as making information, advice and guidance accessible to those with additional learning needs. If the Commission provides financial support to learners, for example, to assist with transport costs to access particular courses leading to professions where there is a skills shortage, then it must take into account additional learning needs when doing so. For example, this could mean considering the transport costs of those with additional learning needs.
311. A person has additional learning needs if he or she has a learning difficulty or disability (whether the learning difficulty or disability arises from a medical condition or otherwise) which calls for additional learning provision.
312. Schedule 4 makes amendments to the Additional Learning Needs and Education Tribunal Act 2018. The Welsh Ministers and the Commission will be required, when exercising functions under Part 2 of the 2018 Act, to have regard to any guidance that may be contained in the Additional Learning Needs Code. Additionally, the Welsh Ministers must consult the Commission before issuing or revising the Additional Learning Needs Code. Both the Welsh Ministers and the Commission are to be required to exercise their functions so as to provide information and other help to a local authority if it requests such assistance.

Financial support for other activities connected to tertiary education

Section 100: Financial support for other activities connected to tertiary education

313. This section allows the Commission or Welsh Ministers to fund the provision of information, advice or guidance about education or training as well as facilities that are designed to forge links between providers of education or training and employers. The Welsh Ministers or the Commission may disburse the funding or arrange for others to do so, for example through collaborative arrangements. The Commission or the Welsh Ministers are able to impose appropriate terms and conditions to the funding and recover sums of money where specified criteria is not met.
314. This section also enables the Commission to fund tertiary education through the medium of Welsh and the teaching of Welsh to learners over the age of 16. The Commission may disburse the funding itself or arrange for others to do so, for example through collaborative arrangements. The Commission is able to impose terms and conditions to the funding as it considers appropriate and recover sums of money where specified criteria is not met.
315. The Commission may not fund school sixth forms under subsection (2) (or make arrangements under subsection (3) for a local authority to provide the Commission's resources to do so). School sixth form provision will be funded by the Commission under section 98.
316. If the Commission has made arrangements under subsection (3) for another person to provide the Commission's financial resources, the Commission may require that person to provide the resources subject to such terms and conditions that the Commission considers appropriate.

Financial support for apprenticeships

Section 101: Financial support for apprenticeships

317. The Commission may provide funding to providers of an approved Welsh apprenticeship and may also provide funding for the preparation of an apprenticeship framework.
318. The Welsh Ministers may make regulations requiring the recipient of funding for approved Welsh apprenticeships to be registered in a specified category on the register established under section 23.
319. This section allows the Commission to impose terms and conditions as it considers appropriate. In particular, the terms and conditions may require the repayment of funds (including with interest) if the purposes for which the funding is allocated are not complied with. Where funding for approved Welsh apprenticeships is allocated by the Commission to providers that are not on the register, the Commission must require that the provider has an approved learner protection plan in place (where the Commission has given the appropriate notice); complies with the learner engagement code (if it is a tertiary education provider in Wales); and has regard to advice and guidance issued by the Commission.

Research and innovation

Section 102: Financial support for research and innovation

320. This section allows the Commission to provide funding to registered providers, specified in regulations, to carry out research and innovation. It is envisaged that the registered providers may be higher education institutions, FE institutions or other providers.
321. A registered provider receiving funding will be able to pass the funding to collaborating bodies in connection with the research and innovation with the Commission's consent. This will allow the provider to work collaboratively with a broad range of partners that may be engaged in research and innovation. The registered provider will be accountable to the Commission for the expenditure of public funding and for accounting for funding which is passed on to a collaborating body.
322. The Commission can also make grants, loans or other payments to a person who is providing services for or in connection with research or innovation by a specified provider.
323. The Commission must when providing financial support, have regard to ensuring that it does not do anything which would discourage providers from seeking or maintaining funding from other sources (for example from industry, commerce, benefactors, alumni, UKRI, Horizon Europe or other eligible funding sources).

Section 103: Financial support for research and innovation: terms and conditions

324. This section enables the Commission to impose terms and conditions on funding to a registered provider as it considers appropriate. If the funding is passed onto a collaborating body, the Commission could, for instance, as a condition of funding, in turn require the recipient provider to impose conditions on any funding it passes to a collaborating body.
325. The Commission cannot impose terms and conditions on funding received by a provider which comes from other sources.
326. This section makes provision for how funding decisions under section 102 should be made by the Commission. The Commission is required to have regard to what is generally known as the Haldane principle (namely that decisions on individual proposals are best taken following an evaluation of their quality and likely impact). The concept will apply to all funding decisions under section 96 made by the Commission. Therefore the provision allows that the general direction on funding should be led by the Commission, but also expects decisions regarding the research to be made by experts in the field, outside of the Commission, for example, ensuring that research proposals benefit from competitive tendering exercises might be one way of meeting the requirement to have regard to the principle. The purpose of the requirement to have regard to this principle is to ensure that academic freedom is not compromised during the process.

Section 104: The Commission's other functions in relation to research and innovation

327. This section sets out the Commission's duty to promote the awareness and understanding of research and innovation carried out in Wales, to ensure it reaches a wide audience in Wales and to disseminate the results of research and innovation.
328. The Commission will have a duty to promote the carrying out of research and innovation in Wales.
329. The Commission is required to monitor the performance of its funding programmes to ensure maximum success, effectiveness of delivery and value for money. This information must be included in the annual report as required by paragraph 18 of Schedule 1.

Collaborating bodies: consent

Section 105: Consent for payments to collaborating bodies

330. This section provides a framework of controls in respect of the Commission's consent for the passage of funds from directly funded providers, organisations or individuals to collaborating bodies under the specified funding powers. For a person to be a collaborating body the Commission must have given consent to financial resources being paid to it by the person receiving funds from the Commission. The Commission will not have a direct regulatory or funding relationship with collaborating bodies. The framework of controls will allow the Welsh Ministers and the Commission to protect the interests of students, the proper use of public money and the reputation of the Welsh tertiary education and research sector.
331. Subsection (1) allows the Welsh Ministers to make regulations which specify the matters that the Commission must take into account when deciding whether or not to give its consent for the passage of funds to a collaborating body. Subsection (2) allows the Commission to attach terms and condition to any consents that it gives. Subsection (8) requires the Commission to keep all active consents under review.
332. Subsections (3) to (6) make provision for the Commission to be able to withdraw, suspend or vary its consent once given and set out the procedural arrangements that the Commission must follow before taking such action. This includes a requirement for the Commission to give notice to the directly funded bodies to whom such consents apply and to have regard for any representations received before deciding whether to withdraw, vary or suspend consent. Subsection (7) makes provision for these procedural arrangements not to apply in circumstances where the Commission needs to take more urgent action and it would not be practicable to comply with the requirements.

Financial support directions

Section 106: Financial support directions

333. This section enables the Welsh Ministers to direct the Commission in respect of the provision of financial support provided to a relevant person under the specified funding powers, where it appears to the Welsh Ministers that the financial affairs of the relevant person have been, or are being mismanaged. Subsection (3) defines a financial support direction and set outs the funding powers to which such a direction can relate. Subsection (4) defines a relevant person for the purposes of financial support directions.

334. Before issuing a financial support direction to the Commission, subsection (5) requires the Welsh Ministers to consult the Commission and the relevant person to which the direction relates unless the Welsh Ministers are satisfied that it is not practical to do so because of the urgency with which the direction needs to be given, or the specific circumstances mean that consultation would defeat the object of the direction.
335. Any financial support direction given to the Commission under this section must be kept under review. Additionally, the Welsh Ministers must publish a financial support direction given to the Commission and report any such directions to the Senedd. The Commission is required to comply with a financial support direction given by the Welsh Ministers.

Part 4: Apprenticeships

Introductory

Section 107: Meaning of “approved Welsh apprenticeship”

336. This section defines an “approved Welsh apprenticeship” and allows the Welsh Ministers to make regulations setting out the conditions to be satisfied by an approved Welsh apprenticeship (subsection (4)).
337. An approved Welsh apprenticeship takes place either:
- under an approved Welsh apprenticeship agreement; or
 - under an alternative Welsh apprenticeship (subsection (2)).
338. An approved Welsh apprenticeship requires the work to take place wholly or mainly in Wales (subsection (3)).

Section 108: Meaning of “approved Welsh apprenticeship agreement”

339. This section outlines the meaning of an “approved Welsh apprenticeship agreement”.
340. Subsection (1) provides that it is an agreement which —
- provides for a person to work for another for payment in an occupation which has an apprenticeship framework,
 - provides for the apprentice to receive training to allow the apprentice to meet the requirements of the apprenticeship framework, and
 - satisfies any other conditions specified in regulations made by the Welsh Ministers.

Section 109: Meaning of “alternative Welsh apprenticeship”

341. This section allows the Welsh Ministers to make regulations defining the conditions of an “alternative Welsh apprenticeship”, to allow arrangements that would not fall within the definition of an approved Welsh apprenticeship agreement to be treated as approved Welsh apprenticeships.
342. Examples of alternative working arrangements could include, but are not limited to the following circumstances:
- (a) where a person works as a self-employed person while following a recognised Welsh apprenticeship framework;

- (b) where a person works otherwise than for reward, or
- (c) where the apprentice was working under an apprenticeship agreement has been made redundant during the course of the apprenticeship and satisfies the conditions set out in the regulations.

Section 110: Meaning of “apprenticeship framework”

343. This section outlines the meaning of an “apprenticeship framework”. An apprenticeship framework is a document that specifies requirements for the completion of approved Welsh apprenticeships in an occupation or a group of occupations, which may include (but are not limited to) requirements relating to –
- standards of attainment;
 - qualifications;
 - the type or amount of training undertaken.

Functions of the Welsh Ministers

Section 111: Specification of requirements in relation to approved Welsh apprenticeships

344. Subsection (1) gives the Welsh Ministers a power to specify requirements in relation to approved Welsh apprenticeships and the development of apprenticeship frameworks.
345. Requirements may relate to –
- the content of apprenticeship frameworks, including, but not limited to, the standards of attainment required, the qualification needed and the type and amount of training needed to complete an approved Welsh apprenticeship (subsection (2)),
 - the preparation, revision, withdrawal or publication of an apprenticeship framework (subsection (3)),
 - approved Welsh apprenticeships generally or approved Welsh apprenticeships in one or more occupations.
346. The Welsh Ministers must publish specified requirements and may revise or withdraw a requirement by issuing a replacement specification requirement or issue a notice of withdrawal (subsections (5) and (6)). The published requirements and notices must state the date on which the specification requirement, or withdrawal notice, come into force (subsection (7)).

Section 112: Consultation by Welsh Ministers about specifications

347. This section requires that the Welsh Ministers must first consult the Commission and any other persons they think appropriate before specifying, revising or withdrawing any requirements under section 111

Functions of the Commission

Section 113: Preparation and publication of apprenticeship frameworks

348. Subsection (1) allows the Commission to prepare apprenticeship frameworks. The Commission may also secure preparation of apprenticeship frameworks by other persons.
349. The Commission may publish apprenticeship frameworks that meet the specification requirements under section 111, even where the apprenticeship framework was not prepared by the Commission or secured by the Commission. For example an apprenticeship framework which has been prepared by an occupational sector body. An apprenticeship framework may specify requirements for different levels under the same occupation or group of occupations, such as intermediate (level 2)⁴⁸, advanced (level 3), higher (level 4 - 5) or degree (level 6-7).

- 350. The Commission must keep apprenticeship frameworks under review and must determine whether the framework should be revised or withdrawn (subsection (6)).
- 351. A published apprenticeship framework must state the coming into force date of the framework or revised framework (subsection (8)).

Section 114: Register of apprenticeship frameworks

- 352. The Commission must maintain and publish a register of apprenticeship frameworks published under section 113 (subsections (1) and (5)). The register must include the coming into force date of each apprenticeship framework or revised framework and a description of any revised apprenticeship framework and its application (subsection (3)). Where an apprenticeship framework is withdrawn, the register must include information on the date of withdrawal and a description of the application of the withdrawal (subsection (4)). The Welsh Ministers may make regulations to require the Commission to include other information in the register (subsection (6)).

Section 115: Power to issue apprenticeship certificates

- 353. This section allows the Commission to issue “an apprenticeship certificate” or a copy of an apprenticeship certificate to an apprentice who has completed an approved Welsh apprenticeship. The Commission may charge a fee for issuing an apprenticeship certificate or copy of a certificate only if the regulations made by the Welsh Ministers allow for a fee.

Section 116: Delegation of Commission functions

- 354. Subsection (1) allows the Commission to delegate to another person its power to publish apprenticeship frameworks under section 113(2) or its power to issuing of apprenticeship certificates under section 115. The designated person must comply with directions given by the Commission and must have regard to any guidance issued by the Commission (subsection (3)). The Commission may continue to exercise any functions it has delegated to another person and it remains responsible for the exercise of the functions (subsection (5)).
- 355. The Commission may make payments for expenditure incurred or pay remuneration to the designated persons in relation to the exercise of the delegated functions (subsection (6)).

Supplementary provisions about apprenticeship agreements

Section 117: Ineffective provisions of approved Welsh apprenticeship agreements

- 356. Subsection (1) provides that if an agreement contains provision that satisfies the condition in section 108(1)(a) to (c), but also contains provision inconsistent with those conditions, that provision is to be treated as having no effect.
- 357. Subsections (2) and (3) provide that where an employer makes changes to the apprenticeship agreement which would mean the apprenticeship agreement no longer complies with the apprenticeship framework or requirements of an approved Welsh apprenticeship, the employer must notify the apprentice in writing of the variation and explain that the variation will mean the apprentice is no longer on an approved Welsh apprenticeship. If this is not done the variation will have no effect (subsection (4)).

⁴⁸ Qualification levels under the Credit and Qualifications Framework for Wales (CQFW).

Section 118: Status of approved Welsh apprenticeship agreements

358. This section provides that an approved Welsh apprenticeship agreement is not to be treated, for common law or statutory purposes, as being a contract of apprenticeship (as recognised at common law) but is instead to be treated as being a contract of service.

Section 119: Transfer of copyright in apprenticeship frameworks

359. This section makes provision for the transfer of copyright to the Commission where an apprenticeship framework is prepared by another person and published with the agreement of that person by the Commission.

Section 120: Crown servants

360. This section provides that a person who is employed as a Crown servant may undertake an approved Welsh apprenticeship agreement. The Welsh Ministers may make regulations in relation to an approved Welsh apprenticeship agreement and Crown servants.

General

Section 121: Interpretation of Part 4

361. This section provides the definitions of certain terms which are used in this Part by reference to the relevant sections in this Part.

Part 5: Learner Protection, Complaints Procedures and Learner Engagement

Section 122: Learner protection plans

362. This section enables the Commission to give notice to a tertiary education provider asking it to submit a learner protection plan to the Commission on or before the date specified in the notice.
363. A learner protection plan is defined by subsection (2) as a document that sets out the provider's arrangements to protect the interests of its students who are on courses that cease to be provided or who wish to transfer to another course.
364. Where notice has been given under this section, the requirement to have a learner protection plan in place and to give effect to it will be enforced (in the case of registered providers) through conditions of registration (see section 29), and otherwise through the terms and conditions of funding (see sections 87, 96 and 101).
365. This section also enables the Commission to approve the learner protection plan with or without modifications. It requires a tertiary education provider that wishes to amend its approved learner protection plan to send a revised plan to the Commission and allows the Commission to approve the revised learner protection plan with or without modifications.
366. The Commission is required to issue guidance on the preparation and revision of learner protection plans and is required to consult with such persons as it considers appropriate before issuing this guidance.
367. The Commission is required to monitor the effectiveness of learner protection plans and must include in its conclusion in its annual report (prepared under paragraph 16 of Schedule 1).
368. Subsection (10) defines a "relevant course" and a "tertiary education provider" for the purposes of sections 122 and 123.

Section 123: Complaints procedures

369. This section requires the Commission to take such steps as appear to it appropriate to ensure that a tertiary education provider (as defined) has in place a procedure for investigating complaints about an act or omission of the provider, made by persons who are undertaking or have undertaken relevant courses (as defined) and to take reasonable steps to make the procedure known to persons undertaking relevant courses. The Commission might, for example, consider that an appropriate step was the issuing of guidance about complaints procedures, or the imposition of a registration condition or a condition of funding relating to complaints procedures.

Section 124: Qualifying institutions for student complaints scheme

370. This section makes amendments to Part 2 of the Higher Education Act 2004 (“the 2004 Act”) in relation to the student complaints scheme. Under Part 2 of the 2004 Act a body designated by the Welsh Ministers operates a student complaints scheme, which must provide for the review of qualifying complaints against qualifying institutions made by their students or former students. Section 11 of the 2004 Act sets out the qualifying institutions that are to be subject to the scheme.
371. This section amends section 11 of the 2004 Act so as to allow the Welsh Ministers, by regulations, to specify additional qualifying institutions. The regulations will be able to specify registered providers or other providers in receipt of funding from the Commission under certain provisions of the Bill. Section 12 of the 2004 Act is also amended so as to extend the definition of qualifying complaint to those made by persons who are undertaking, or have undertaken, courses funded by the Commission under certain provisions of the Bill, and to enable the designated operator to determine as qualifying complaints ones made by those persons on a particular course or particular description of course.

Section 125: Learner Engagement Code

372. This section requires the Commission to prepare and publish “the Learner Engagement Code” about the engagement of learners in the making of decisions. “Relevant decision”, and, “relevant provider” are defined in subsection (9). An illustrative list of what the Learner Engagement Code may include provisions about is found at subsection (2).
373. The Commission must keep the Learner Engagement Code under review and if appropriate must prepare and publish a revised code. The Learner Engagement Code may take the form of a requirement or guidance. The Commission must consult with any persons they think appropriate when preparing the Learner Engagement Code or revised code.
374. The Learner Engagement Code may make different provisions for different purposes.
375. Compliance with the requirements of the Learner Engagement Code will be enforced (in the case of registered providers) through conditions of registration (see section 29), and otherwise through the terms and conditions of funding (see sections 87, 96, 98 and 101).
376. The Commission must monitor compliance with the Learner Engagement Code and include conclusions as to how effective the Learner Engagement Code has been, as part of its annual report.

Part 6: Information, Advice and Guidance

Section 126: Information and advice from the Commission and information from the Welsh Ministers

377. This section requires the Commission to provide the Welsh Ministers with such information and advice on matters related to its functions as the Welsh Ministers may request in the format and manner requested. The Commission may also give the Welsh Ministers any information or advice it considers appropriate.
378. This section also allows the Welsh Ministers to provide the Commission with any information relating to the exercise of its functions.

Section 127: Persons required to provide information to the Commission

379. This section allows the Commission, to issue a notice, to request information for the purposes of the exercise of the Commission's functions from those listed in subsection (2), which include persons that it funds and/or regulates, such as higher education and further education institutions.
380. This section places restrictions on the information the Commission can require, to ensure the information requested by the Commission is relevant to the Commission's functions.
381. This section sets out what a notice may require including, but not limited to, the time within which the person must provide the information. Further, the Commission may enforce a request for such information by application for an injunction.
382. The Commission may also give information to those listed in this section, and any other person it considers appropriate, about any matter related to its functions.

Section 128: Powers to share information

383. This section lists the other government departments, bodies and organisations that may share information with the Commission, for the purposes of the exercise of any of the Commission's functions. For example, the Commission may wish to receive information on qualifications awarded in Wales.
384. The Commission may also give information, about any matter in relation to its functions, to those listed in this section and any other person it considers appropriate. For instance, the Commission may wish to share information with education bodies in England, such as the Office for Students.
385. The Welsh Ministers may by regulations specify other bodies or organisations that are allowed to share information with the Commission under this section. These could include any newly created public bodies or organisations.

Section 129: Power to require application-to-acceptance information

386. This section makes provision for the Welsh Ministers to require, by notice, "application-to-acceptance information" from bodies providing admissions services to Welsh higher education providers for use for "qualifying research". The Welsh Ministers may direct this information is to be provided either to themselves or to the Commission. This section also defines "application-to-acceptance" information and "qualifying research".

387. This section sets out what a notice may require, including, but not limited to, the time within which the person must provide the information. Further, the Welsh Ministers may enforce a request for such information by application for an injunction.

Section 130: Use of application-to-acceptance information for research purposes

388. This section makes provision for how the Welsh Ministers may use the information obtained under section 129 and with whom the information may be shared.
389. This section also makes provision for the circumstances in which a product of research using information obtained under section 129 may be published.
390. The Welsh Ministers must publish guidance setting out the factors that will be taken into account when approving a body or individual with whom the information may be shared.
391. This section also defines what is meant by an “approved person”.

Section 131: Other information, advice and guidance

392. This section allows the Commission to give advice or issue guidance, as the Commission considers appropriate, to any persons, so long as it relates to provision of tertiary education or any matter connected with its functions. The Commission is required to identify good practice, give advice and issue guidance in relation to the sharing of information among those that it funds or regulates; for example by issuing guidance dealing with IT systems and information security.
393. The Commission must publish all guidance issued under this section and it is envisaged that the Commission should review and update or replace its guidance as and when it considers necessary.
394. The Commission must establish systems to collect information to inform its decisions on tertiary education and training.

Section 132: Research by the Commission or the Welsh Ministers

395. This section allows the Welsh Ministers or the Commission to carry out research or secure the provision of financial resources to undertake research, and sets out the subject matters into which this research can be undertaken. Any outcomes may then be published, provided that no individual can be identified from the publication.
396. This section provides that the Commission may impose such terms and conditions as it considers appropriate to funding it allocates under this section. In particular, such terms and conditions may require the repayment of funds (including with interest) if the purposes for which the funding is allocated are not complied with.
397. This section also sets out the terms and conditions that the Commission may and must impose where it makes arrangements for another person to provide the Commission’s financial resources.

Part 7: Miscellaneous and General

Higher education corporations

Section 133: Instruments of government of higher education corporations in Wales

398. Section 133 amends section 124A of the Education Reform Act (1988 Act). Among other things section 124A of ERA 1988 requires a higher education corporation in Wales to have in place an instrument of government which provides for the constitution of the corporation (and such other provision as is required under section 124A).
399. The Privy Council has certain functions, under section 124A(2) and (3) of that Act to prescribe, make or modify the instruments of government of higher education corporations.
400. Instruments of government must comply (among other things) with Schedule 7A to the 1988 Act. Schedule 7A sets out statutory requirements for the content of instruments of government of higher education corporations made by the Privy Council.
401. Under Section 124A(9) of the 1988 Act, the Welsh Ministers⁴⁹ are able to amend or repeal any of paragraphs 3 to 5 and 11 of Schedule 7A by order. These paragraphs relate to membership of the higher education corporation and in particular, the size, constitution and appointment of members of the corporation.
402. Subsection (2) of section 133 of the Bill makes provision for the Welsh Ministers' existing order making powers under section 124A(9) of the 1988 Act to be extended. The extended power allows the Welsh Ministers to amend or repeal the whole of Schedule 7A to the 1988 Act with the exception of paragraph 1. Paragraph 1 enables a higher education corporation's instrument of government to empower the corporation to change its name with the consent of the Privy Council. The additional paragraphs of Schedule 7A covered by the extended power relate to tenure of office for members, officers and committees of the corporation, allowances paid to the members and the seal of the corporation.
403. Subsection (3) inserts a new subsection (9A) into section 124A of the 1988 Act which requires the Welsh Ministers to consult with the Commission and any other persons they think appropriate before exercising the extended order making powers. It also inserts a new subsection (9B) which makes provision for such an order made by the Welsh Ministers to make consequential amendments or repeals to certain specified provisions in the 1988 Act if those are necessary as a result of any amendments or repeals made under the order-making power to Schedule 7A.

Section 134: Articles of government of higher education corporations in Wales

404. Section 125 of the 1988 Act requires an institution conducted by a higher education corporation to have articles of government, approved by the Privy Council, relating to the conduct of the institution. Section 126 also makes provision relating to the content of the articles of government together with its amendment and revocation.
405. Subsection (2) of section 134 of the Bill inserts new subsections (8) and (9) into section 125 of the 1988 Act enabling the Welsh Ministers, by order, to amend or repeal section 125(2) to

(4) of the 1988 Act, which relate to certain content of articles of government of higher education corporations.

406. Among other things, section 125(2) to (4) of the 1988 Act make provision for the articles to determine the distribution of functions between the board of governors, the principal of the institution and the Academic Board and regulate the constitution and functions of committees of the corporation. Those provisions also require the articles to make provision in respect of the procedures for meetings of the board of governors, the academic board, the corporation's committees and for the appointment of members of the corporation. In addition, they enable the articles to make provision authorising the board of governors to make rules or bye-laws for the government and conduct of the institution.
407. The new subsection (9) will place the Welsh Ministers under a duty to consult with the Commission and any other persons they think appropriate before exercising the new order making powers.
408. Subsection (3) amends section 232 of the 1988 Act.
409. The amendment to section 232 of the 1988 Act (orders and regulations) is to ensure that subsection (1) of that section (which requires orders and regulations under the Act to be made by statutory instrument) catches the new powers of the Welsh Ministers to make orders conferred by sections 133 and 134 of the Bill.
410. Subsections (4ZA), (4ZB) and (4ZC), which will be inserted into section 232 of the 1988 Act by section 134(3)(b) of the Bill, make provision relating to the Senedd procedure attached to the order and regulation making powers of the Welsh Ministers under that Act as inserted by this Bill.

Section 135: Dissolution of higher education corporations in Wales

411. This section amends section 128 of ERA 1988 which relates to the dissolution of higher education corporations. Section 128(2) contains a power for the Welsh Ministers by order to provide for the dissolution of a higher education corporation in Wales and the transfer of its property rights and liabilities to any one or more of the following –
- any person appearing to the Welsh Ministers to be wholly or mainly engaged in the provision of educational facilities or services of any description;
 - any body corporate established for purposes which include the provision of such facilities or services;
 - the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales;
 - the Welsh Ministers.
412. Section 128(4) of the 1988 Act requires the Welsh Ministers to consult the higher education corporation to be dissolved and HEFCW before making an order under subsection (1).
413. Subsections (2) and (4) of section 135 of the Bill make amendments in consequence of the creation of the Commission to replace references to HEFCW with references to the Commission.
414. Subsection (3) makes new provision about the power under section 128(1)(b) to make provision by order for the transfer of the property, rights and liabilities of the higher education corporation being dissolved. A new subsection (1A) is inserted into section 128 which provides that orders –

- may make provision about the effect of a transfer on any right of pre-emption, right of return or other similar right that may apply in respect of such property or rights (including provision about the calculation and payment of any just compensation);
- have effect in relation to property, rights or liabilities to which they apply in spite of any provision (of whatever nature) of any enactment or any rule of law, which would otherwise prevent, penalise or restrict the transfer of the property, rights or liabilities.

Consultation about careers services

Section 136: Duty to consult the Commission on careers services

415. This section inserts a new section 9A after section 9 of the Employment and Training Act 1973 (the 1973 Act).
416. The new section 9A will place Welsh Ministers under a duty to consult the Commission each year on strategic priorities for the next financial year for their performance of their duty in section 8 and the exercise of their power in section 9 of the 1973 Act. Section 8 of the 1973 Act places a duty on the Welsh Ministers to ensure the provision of careers services to pupils in schools and students in further education and training. Section 9 of the Act gives the Welsh Ministers a power to provide careers services for others.
417. For the purpose of this section financial year is defined as a period of 12 months ending on 31 March.

General

Section 137: Publication

418. Section 137 makes provision relating to every duty under the Bill (but not a duty imposed by amending another enactment) to publish something. Throughout this Bill, wherever there is a duty to publish a report or plan, these must be published electronically, on the provider or organisation's website and be accessible free of charge.
419. The provider or organisation under the duty to publish, may also chose to publish in any way they consider appropriate. Copies of the reports or plans published may be supplied free of charge, or on payment of a fee which does not exceed the cost of making the copy.

Section 138: Regulations

420. This section makes general provision about how the various regulations that may be made under the Bill are to be made. This includes provision about the procedures of the Senedd that apply in relation to the regulations, and the ancillary provision (that is, supplemental, incidental, consequential, transitional, transitory or saving provision) that may be made in these regulations

Section 139: General interpretation

421. This section defines specific terms used in this Bill and is self-explanatory.

Section 140: Power to provide for the Open University to be treated as a tertiary education provider in Wales

422. This section allows the Welsh Ministers to make regulations to apply the provisions under this Bill to the Open University. The Open University does not fall within the definition of "tertiary education provider in Wales" because its activities do not take place "wholly or mainly in Wales". This power in this section will allow the Welsh Ministers to treat the Open University as a tertiary education provider in Wales. This may be to apply the registration conditions, learner protection plans and other provisions to the Open University in order to ensure funding and protection for learners in Wales undertaking courses of study with the Open University.

423. The Welsh Ministers must consult the Open University before making such regulations.

Section 141: Power to make consequential and transitional provision etc.

424. This section provides that the Welsh Ministers may, by regulations, make such incidental, consequential, supplemental, transitional, transitory or saving provision as they think appropriate for the purpose of, or in connection with, or for giving full effect to, any provision made by or under this Bill, including in relation to the provisions contained in this Bill.

Section 142 and Schedule 4: Minor and consequential amendments

425. Schedule 4 (introduced by section 142) sets out the minor and consequential amendments to existing legislation as affected by the Bill.
426. Where a description as to the effect of the amendment is considered helpful it is included. Where an amendment has been described elsewhere in these explanatory notes, it is not described here; similarly minor amendments such as changes in existing legislation from “the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales” to “the Commission for Tertiary Education” are not described:
427. Paragraph 11(2) repeals sections 31 – 33 of the 2000 Act, which are the main duties on the Welsh Ministers in relation to post-16 education and training.
428. Paragraphs 11(3) to 11(17) amend sections 33A– 33E, 33G, and 33I – 33Q of that Act to give responsibility for the formation of local curricula for learners aged 16 – 19 to the Commission instead of the Welsh Ministers and makes related amendments in consequence of this. The Welsh Ministers’ regulation and order making powers and most of their guidance and direction powers related to local curricula are retained, but the amendments subject the exercise of those powers (other than the giving of directions) to a requirement to consult the Commission.
429. These amendments are as a consequence of the Commission’s responsibility for securing the provision of proper facilities for education and training for learners aged 16 to 19 (see section 90).
430. Paragraph 22 amends section 43 of the Learning and Skills (Wales) Measure 2009 so as to require the Welsh Ministers to consult the Commission before giving guidance to head teachers of local authority maintained schools and principals of further education institutions about the exercise of their functions in respect of the provision of a learning pathways document to relevant students.
431. Paragraph 25 amends the Welsh Language (Wales) Measure 2011 to replace the reference to the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales in Schedule 6 to the Measure with a reference to the Commission for Tertiary Education and Research.
432. Paragraph 26 makes amendments to provisions of the School Standards and Organisation (Wales) Act 2013 concerned with school reorganisations.
433. These amendments include the Commission as a body whom the Welsh Ministers must consult on the draft of the Code (or revised Code) on school organisation and places a duty on the Commission, when exercising functions under Part 3 of that Act (school organisation) to act in accordance with any relevant requirements in the Code and have regard to any relevant guidelines in it.

- 434. The amendments remove the automatic requirement for approval by the Welsh Ministers of school organisation proposals affecting maintained school sixth form education, but instead where a local authority has determined to approve, reject or implement such proposals and there was an objection to those proposals, the Commission will have the power to refer the proposals to the Welsh Ministers, who must then decide them.
- 435. The amendments also take away the Welsh Ministers' powers to make proposals to restructure local authority maintained school sixth form education, instead giving the Commission powers to rationalise school sixth form education (new Chapter 3A of Part 3 on school organisation).
- 436. Those powers involve the Commission being able to direct, in certain circumstances, and in accordance with the Code, a local authority or a governing body of a foundation or voluntary school to bring forward proposals about local authority maintained school sixth form education. The Commission will have power to make its own proposals following a direction by it if the time for the local authority or governing body to make proposals has expired or they have published proposals. In the event of objections to proposals from the Commission, the matter has to be decided by the Welsh Ministers. Otherwise the Commission must determine whether they should be implemented.
- 437. These amendments are as a consequence of the Commission's responsibility for securing the provision of proper facilities for education and training for learners aged 16 - 19 (see section 90).
- 438. Paragraph 35 amends the Welsh Language Standards (No 6) Regulations 2017, replacing the reference to the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales in regulation 3(4) with the Commission for Tertiary Education and Research.

Section 143: Coming into force

- 439. Subsection (1) brings sections 138 to 144 of the Bill into force the day after the day of Royal Assent.
- 440. All other provisions of the Bill come into force by order made by the Welsh Ministers (subsection (1)). Subsection (3) allows orders that bring provisions into force to appoint different days for different purposes and to make transitory, transitional and saving provision in connection with bringing provisions into force.

Section 144: Short title

- 441. Section 144 provides that the short title of the Bill when enacted is the Tertiary Education and Research (Wales) Act 2022.
- 442. This section also adds the Bill to the list of Education Acts set out in section 578 of the Education Act 1996.

(4) Where the Commission makes proposals under this section, any proposals that have been made by a local authority or governing body and published in accordance with the direction are to be treated as having been withdrawn.

63D Publication of Commission's proposals and consultation

(4) Before the end of 7 days beginning with the day on which they were published, the Commission must send copies of the published proposals to—

(a) the Welsh Ministers,

(5) An approval may be expressed to take effect only if an event specified in the approval occurs by a date so specified.

(6) The Welsh Ministers may, at the request of the Commission, specify a later date by which the event referred to in subsection (5) is to occur.

Implementation of proposals for restructuring sixth form education

74 Form of implementation

~~(1) This section applies to proposals which have been adopted by the Welsh Ministers under section 73.~~

~~(2) The proposals must (subject to the following provisions of this section) be implemented in the form in which they were adopted.~~

~~(3) At the request of a specified body, the Welsh Ministers—~~

~~(a) may modify proposals adopted under section 73 after consulting the specified bodies, and~~

~~(b) where the adoption of proposals was expressed to take effect subject to the occurrence of a specified event, may specify a later date by which that event must occur.~~

~~(4) The Welsh Ministers may determine that subsection (2) does not apply to the proposals if they are satisfied, after consulting the specified bodies—~~

~~(a) that implementation of the proposals would be unreasonably difficult, or~~

~~(b) that circumstances have so altered since the proposals were adopted that implementation of the proposals would be inappropriate.~~

~~(5) Each of the following is a “specified body” for the purposes of subsections (3) and (4)—~~

- (a) the governing body of the school to which the proposals relate;
- (b) in the case of a proposal to establish a new school, the temporary governing body constituted in accordance with arrangements made under section 34 of the Education Act 2002;

- (a) ~~in the case of proposals relating to a community school, by the local authority that maintains the school;~~
- (b) ~~in the case of proposals relating to a voluntary aided school—~~
 - (i) ~~so far as relating to the provision of any relevant premises, by the local authority that maintains the school, and~~
 - (ii) ~~otherwise, by the local authority that maintains the school and the governing body of the school to the extent (if any) as the proposals provide for each of them to do so;~~
- (c) ~~in the case of proposals relating to any other school, by the local authority that maintains the school and the governing body of the school to the extent (if any) as the proposals provide for each of them to do so.~~

(3) ~~In subsection (2) “relevant premises” means—~~

- (b) ~~buildings which are to form part of the school premises but are not to be school buildings.~~

(4) ~~Proposals to discontinue a school must be implemented—~~

- (b) ~~in any other case, by the local authority that maintains the school and the governing body of the school.~~

(5) ~~If a school changes category from a community school after proposals have been published under section 72 but before they have been implemented, the proposals (to the extent that they have not been implemented) must be implemented by the local authority that maintains the school (despite subsections (2) and (4)).~~

76 Further provision as to implementation

(1) ~~Where a local authority is required by virtue of section 75 to provide a site for a foundation or voluntary controlled school, paragraph 7 of Schedule 3 (provision of site and buildings for foundation or voluntary controlled school) applies as it applies in the circumstances mentioned in sub-paragraph (1) of that paragraph.~~

(2) Paragraph 8 of Schedule 3 (grants in respect of certain expenditure relating to voluntary aided schools) applies in relation to the obligation under section 75(2)(b)(ii) as it applies in relation to the obligations referred to in paragraph 8(1)(a) of that Schedule. (3) Paragraph 9 of Schedule 3 (assistance from local authority in respect of voluntary aided schools) applies in relation to obligations imposed on the governing body of a voluntary aided school under section 75(2)(b)(ii) as it applies in relation to the obligations referred to in that paragraph 9, and paragraph 11 of that Schedule (duty on local authority to transfer interest in premises provided under paragraph 9 or 10) applies accordingly.
80 Notice by governing body to discontinue foundation or voluntary school (1) The governing body of a foundation or voluntary school may discontinue the school by giving the Welsh Ministers and the local authority that maintains the school two years' notice of its intention to do so. (2) The Welsh Ministers' consent is required before giving a notice under this section if expenditure has been incurred on the school premises (otherwise than in connection with repairs)— <ul style="list-style-type: none"> (a) by the Welsh Ministers, or (b) by any local authority. (3) The governing body must consult the Welsh Ministers the Commission for Tertiary Education and Research before giving a notice under this section if discontinuing the school would affect the facilities for full-time education suitable to the requirements of persons over compulsory school age who have not attained the age of 19. (4) If, while a notice under this section is in force, the governing body informs the local authority that it is unable or unwilling to carry on the school until the notice expires, the authority— <ul style="list-style-type: none"> (a) may conduct the school for all or part of the unexpired period of the notice as if it were a community school, and (b) is entitled to use the school premises free of charge for that purpose. (5) While the school is being so conducted— <ul style="list-style-type: none"> (a) the authority must keep the school premises in good repair, and (b) any interest in the premises which is held for the purposes of the school is to be treated, for all purposes relating to the condition, occupation or use of the premises, or the making of alterations to them, as vested in the authority. (6) Despite subsection (5) the governing body may use the premises, or any part of them, when not required for the purposes of the school to the same extent as if it had continued to carry on the school during the unexpired period of the notice. (7) A notice under subsection (1) may not be withdrawn without the consent of the local authority. (8) If a foundation or voluntary school is discontinued under this section, the duty of the local authority to maintain the school as a foundation or voluntary school ceases. (9) Nothing in section 43 applies in relation to the discontinuance of a foundation or voluntary school under this section.	Schedule 4 Paragraph 26
